Monsoon Days Considered As 'Critical' To Asian War

LBJ Relaxes But Watches Viet Trouble

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson kept close tabs Saturday on the new governmental upheaval in Viet Nam but offered no reaction.

This was the report from White House press secretary George E. Reedy on part of the day's activity at the LBJ Ranch. The President, Mrs. Johnson and daughter Luci flew in late Friday, from Washington by way of Houston, Tex., for a weekend at the family home in the hill country 15 miles west of here.

Press Aid Resigns

Some of the other official activity:

—The resignation of assistant press secretary Malcolm Kilduff, the man who announced the death of President John F. Kennedy to a stunned nation, was accepted effective next Saturday.

Kilduff is forming a public relations partnership in Washington after 20 years of government service.

—The appointment of the 12 public members of the Consumer Advisory Council was announced, with Dr. Richard H. Holton, former assistant secretary of commerce and now a University of California professor, as chairman.

The council will "advise the government on issues of broad economic policy of immediate concern to consumers" and on programs to help and protect consumers, the Texas White House said.

—Johnson proclaimed Monday, June 14, Flag Day. "I urge every citizen to pledge once more his allegiance to our flag and to rededicate himself to the principles and ideals for which it is an inspiring tangible symbol," he said.

—He issued a statement saying his orders to hold down on unneeded spending at the end of the government's fiscal year is bringing gratifying results.

—He announced that Amver—short for Automated Merchant Vessel Report—which lets ships of any nation report positions to the Coast Guard in New York for use in emergencies, is being expanded to cover vessels in the Pacific as well as the Atlantic. The headquarters for the Pacific operation will be in San Francisco.

With this spate of business out of the way, Johnson was comparatively free.

THE FAMILY of Duane Pope, recent college graduate held in robbery of Nebraska bank in which three were killed, arrive at Jackson county jail in Kansas City for their first visit with him since his surrender Friday. Shown are the father, Earl Pope, center, his wife in front, and a brother, Dennis, 17, entering corridor upper right. Pope's sister, Ello, 14, is behind the mother. The family paid Pope a 40-minute visit, but had no comment when they left the room where they visited him. See Story, page 9A. (AP Wirephoto)

Viet Cong Attacks Expected To Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Official Washington reluctantly accepted Saigon's latest government change Saturday and focused on what it predicted will be "fairly critical" military action in the near future in the Vietnamese war.

Administration sources presented this assessment:

—The Communist Viet Cong probably will mount a series of sharp assaults during the coming two months while the monsoon rainy season gives them some protection against air attack.

—A Red aim will be to shatter South Vietnamese government morale and put pressure on the United States.

—If the Viet Cong guerrillas are beaten back, Communist North Viet Nam may have second thoughts about its refusal to talk about a peace settlement. And the antiguerrilla campaign will become more manageable, regardless of Hanoi's intent.

Commitment Remains

—If the Viet Cong offensive proves generally successful, there will be a deterioration in South Viet Nam and a need for reassessment of the war effort. But in any case the deep U.S. commitment to defense of the country will remain.

In sum, U.S. officials describe the forthcoming monsoon phase of the war as "fairly critical" and say "in the next weeks and months the men and boys will be separated."

The administration officials concede the results are not yet in but they list a number of factors which could lead to victory over the Reds.

They give this assessment of the military situation:

Viet Cong prospects—

The Red guerrillas have been mustering resources for their monsoon strikes, but probably will be unable to hold any main positions that they do take.

This is because they lack back-up support and good supply lines.

South Vietnamese government prospects—

The South Vietnamese forces have superior mobility and fire power that can be brought to bear where the Viet Cong concentrate. U.S. air support will be available at least part of the time because monsoon rains are not day-long.

U.S. ground support—

While American troops may be rushed into help out Vietnamese government forces in specific emergencies, no large-scale U.S. ground combat operations are in the works though some increases in U.S. forces are likely.

The main ground fighting burden will be borne by 582,000 South Vietnamese regular soldiers and militiamen. Of the 53,000 U.S. military personnel there, only 13,000 are ground combat troops and about 7,000 have air combat assignments.

Bombings—

The air attacks against North Viet Nam will continue but there is no intent to strike at population centers at this time. There remain many military targets and the bombing of bridges, railroads, highways, ammunition dumps and the like is seriously interfering with Hanoi's supply routes to the south.

Negotiations—

Some 13 attempts at peace discussions have been made, and all have been rebuffed by Hanoi and Peking.

As for the latest political maneuvering in Saigon, the Washington officials rated the military take-over this time as less alarming than some of the past coups in South Viet Nam.

They noted that even while not in official government positions, South Vietnamese military leaders have never been far from the seat of power.

Next Rulers For Saigon Not Decided

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Military leaders Saturday began organizing a new government to replace the fallen civilian regime, but no one knew what form it would take.

Brig. Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky, commander of the air force, was believed to have a strong voice in directing the shape of the new government. Whether it would be military or civilian was unknown.

Cites Main Problem

A high government source indicated it probably would be a military one. Asked if there was a possibility of a return to complete civilian rule he said: "The problem right now is to win the war."

Premier Phan Huy Quat and Phan Khac Suu, chief of state, whose feud over a Cabinet shakeup prompted them to resign, agreed to stay on in caretaker roles until the new government can get rolling.

On the fighting front, the Viet Cong launched a heavy attack on Vietnamese paratroopers north of Dong Xoai, scene of a bloody battle Thursday and Friday, and were reported driving them back.

A U.S. Air Force pilot was killed when his plane was shot down in the vicinity, 60 miles north of Saigon. He was the 413th known U.S. casualty of the war.

In the air, U.S. pilots reported they sank or damaged 15 boats in an air strike about 120 miles inside North Viet Nam, and destroyed three communications buildings and seven military barracks at Muong Sen, 130 miles southwest of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital.

South Viet Nam's two feuding religions — the Catholics and Buddhists — appeared to be making a determined effort to head off possible violence during the nation's latest political crisis.

Powerful leaders of both religions appealed for restraint until the outline of a new government emerges.

The Buddhists issued a communique a few hours after the announcement that the civilian government had quit urging all Buddhists "to remain calm and clear sighted."

Paris, Bonn Still Divided; Talks Ended

BONN, Germany (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle of France ended a two-day visit to West Germany on Saturday with the two countries apparently as far apart as ever on questions of European unity.

A West German spokesman first announced that De Gaulle and Chancellor Ludwig Erhard had agreed to call for a Common Market political summit conference this year. This would have been a big assist for Erhard in the forthcoming West German elections since such a conference is highly popular here.

Back To Conference

After the German news conference, however, the president and chancellor went back into conference again.

Afterwards, French Premier Georges Pompidou said that calling such a conference would depend on events of the next few weeks — a clear reference that France's consent to the conference would depend on Bonn yielding to Paris on the thorny question of agricultural subsidies in the Common Market.

This conditional acceptance was not at all what Erhard sought.

The conference would deal with political cooperation among the six member nations. This has lagged far behind their progress in economic matters.

De Gaulle and Erhard reached their agreement at the end of a two- day meeting held under the French-West German treaty of cooperation.

The consent of the other Common Market members—Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg—will have to be obtained if the summit conference is to take place. Earlier attempts at arranging meetings on political cooperation have failed because of resistance to De Gaulle's views.

Marchers Tie Up Chicago Streets

CHICAGO (AP) — Civil rights marchers defied Mayor Richard J. Daley and police again Saturday and staged a disorderly sit-down along State and Madison streets in downtown Chicago, one of the world's busiest intersections.

Police made wholesale arrests for the second straight day as thousands of Saturday afternoon shoppers watched.

Police refused to estimate how many demonstrators were arrested but the Rev. Allen Anderson, a member of the Methodist Interracial Council who observed the march, said about 135 of the marchers were carted away. Police estimated that 500 demonstrators took part in the march.

Head For City Hall

About 200 marchers were arrested in another road-clogging demonstration Friday. The demonstrations started Thursday, but there were no arrests then. A school boycott also was staged then.

The demonstrators, protesting the rehiring of Schools Supt. Benjmain C. Willis, met earlier on a grassy slope in Grant Park along Lake Michigan and began the march to City Hall in files of two.

At City Hall they were to have met with Daley.

When the marchers hit the intersection of State and Madison, some suddenly broke ranks and spread out into the street, blocking traffic.

The demonstrators knelt and sat, clapping and chanting: "Go Ben Willis, go now, go now."

At least four protesters crawled under police vans and were dragged out. One girl was crying when she was pulled out.

Police linked arms to prevent other marchers from pushing out into the streets. Some of the demonstrators who were not immediately arrested slipped quietly into the crowd to avoid arrests. Others were told by march leaders to disperse.

Albert Raby, head of a civil rights federation who led the demonstrations Friday and Thursday, stayed on the sidelines so he could direct the continuing protest against the retention of Willis.

Before the demonstration began, Raby told marchers: "Some of you will go to jail. We need as many to go to jail as possible, but some must stay out to organize the marches tomorrow and Monday. One of our biggest mistakes yesterday was in having everybody go to jail."

Rangers Turn Up More Flood Dead

SANDERSON, Tex. (AP) — Search parties headed by Texas Rangers found three more bodies Saturday, sending the known death toll to 16 in Friday's flash flood which devastated this southwest Texas railroad and ranching center.

The search went on for about a score of missing persons. The hunt centered in the usually dry canyon east of the devastated, saucer shaped town of 2,350 people.

Rep. Richard C. White, D-Tex., surveyed the disaster and estimated property loss at $2 million.

Truck Swept Away

The latest bodies were found by a search party led by Texas Ranger John Woods three miles east of Sanderson.

Searchers found a wrecked pickup truck, swept 10 miles down the canyon by the 15-foot wall of water which struck without warning early Friday after an 11-inch cloudburst.

The water roared down usually dry Sanderson Canyon Creek. The flood passed quickly. Saturday the creek was a trickling stream, only six inches deep.

Below Sanderson, the creek emptied into the Rio Grande and sent it above flood stage on its middle course.

The Red Cross reported 54 homes destroyed. It said 18 businesses were either washed away or severely damaged.

Thirty-six homes were mauled and 133 others suffered minor damage.

Railroads and highways suffered heavily. The Southern Pacific, which has shops in Sanderson, reported five miles of its mainline track and three major bridges washed out.

Sanderson is just north of the Texas-Mexico border.

Mayor Prefers Gifted Students

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — At least one Mississippi mayor says he will welcome students coming into Mississippi this summer - if they make themselves what he called useful instead of agitating.

Mayor James L. Ballard of Tupelo said students with engineering backgrounds could be particularly useful to make studies and surveys on needed projects in depressed areas.

The remarks came as students arrived in the state to do civil rights work.

Deadlock Still Holds Grip On Santo Domingo

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The Dominican crisis entered its eighth week Saturday with no sign of a break in the deadlock between rebel and civilian-military junta forces.

Both sides hinted that it was time for the Organization of American States to decide on a take-it-or-leave-it formula to end the impasse.

There was no sign that the OAS mediating team had arrived at any decision. The meditors, Ambassadors Ellsworth Bunker of the United States, Ramon de Clairmont Duenas of El Salvador and Ilmar Penna Marinho of Brazil, arrived June 3.

Since then, they have contacted nearly every Dominican of importance related directly or indirectly to the current situation. They have scheduled another meeting with the rebel side for next Tuesday.

The rebels have told the mediators that any peacemaking formula first must restore the constitution of 1963, thrown out by a military coup that year. The civilian-military junta wants an OAS-supervised election and opposes reimposing the 1963 constitution without a test at the ballot box.

The contending sides schedule Sunday demonstrations of public support, undoubtedly aimed at impressing both the OAS and the United Nations representatives here.

Spacemen Continue To Describe Flight

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — It was back to work as usual for space twins James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II on Saturday, as they continued to describe every detail of their June 3 Gemini 4 flight to officials.

The exacting debriefing sessions were to continue through today, although a National Aeronautics and Space Administration official said the astronauts, like millions of other American fathers, would probably go to church today.

Debriefing is a process requiring the astronauts to relate everything — down to the smallest detail — they can remember about the flight. At times each man sits by himself in a room and talks steadily into a tape recorder.

At other sessions officials question the spacemen hour after hour about their observations, attitudes, and emotions during the flight, and ask for recommendations and suggestions.

McDivitt and White will be going through the debriefing process for at least another two weeks. Afterward they can start vacations.

Patricia White, an attractive blonde, said it would probably be a long time before her astronaut husband could get back to putting the yard in shape. It was trampled by newsmen and photographers.

Mrs. White said she was hoping the spacemen would get a little time to lounge around the house and play with the children before the celebrations, parades and dinners start.

The hectic atmosphere around the astronauts' homes has evaporated and the two families have settled down to the peaceful suburban existence they knew before the historic four-day mission.

The celebrations for White and McDivitt start tonight at an appreciation dinner sponsored by the Houston Chamber of Commerce at the Rice Hotel. It is the only official function to be given by Houston.

Monday the astronauts go to Chicago for a ticker tape parade. Tuesday they will be guests at a homecoming at the University of Michigan. On Wednesday, McDivitt will be honored by his home town of Jackson, Mich., and White goes to San Antonio, Tex., for welcoming celebrations.

Elizabeth Leads Royal Pageantry To Troop Color

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II rode through London at the head of a glittering cavalcade of household cavalry Saturday for the traditional trooping the color ceremony in honor of her official birthday.

An hour-long downpour which had drenched the thousands lining the one-mile route from Buckingham Palace to the Horse Guards parade in Whitehall stopped as the queen, accompanied by Prince Philip, her husband, emerged from the palace gates. The crowd broke into cheers and waved.

Watching for the first time from a window above the parade ground, Prince Andrew, 5, the queen's son, saluted solemnly as the royal parents rode past.

Thus began a day of military pageantry which ended Saturday night with another colorful parade to mark the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo in June, 1815, when British and Germans conquered Napoleon Bonaparte.

By chance these celebrations coincided with the queen's official birthday.

The queen rode sidesaddle. She and Prince Philip rode horses of the Metropolitan Police.

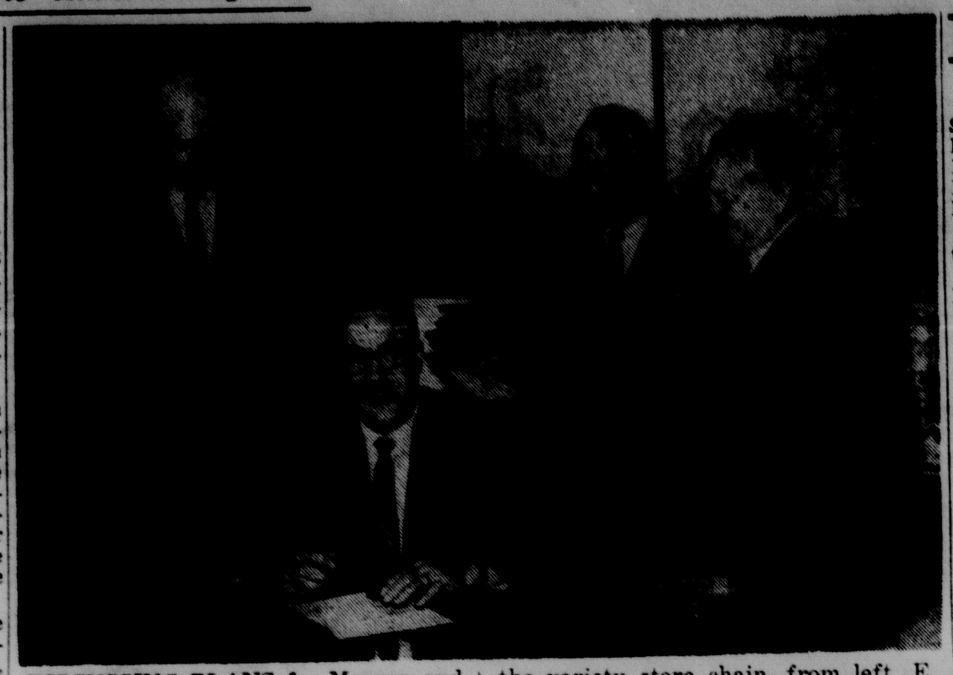

The queen was 39 on April 21. Her anniversaries, like those of all British monarchs, are celebrated at this time of the year when the weather usually is better.

As it happened, it was worse Saturday and a flight by the Royal Air Force was canceled.

Navy Secretary To Inspect Viet Conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze will leave Monday to visit Navy and Marine forces in and near Viet Nam, including units of the 7th Fleet at sea.

The Navy said Nitze will return next weekend.

This is the first visit in Viet Nam by any high civilian official from the Pentagon in more than a year.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara made the most recent visit to South Viet Nam in May 1964. No service secretaries have been there since well before that time.

The Pentagon policy apparently had been to send top civilian officials to Saigon only when specific reasons had existed. However, chiefs of staff of the four services have been in Saigon on a number of occasions.

Nitze, who presumably will meet with South Vietnamese as well as American officials in Saigon, goes at a time when the 7th Fleet is engaged in two major operations:

—The air strikes by carrier-based planes against North Vietnamese targets plus use of American warships in shore bombardment of Viet Cong concentrations along South Vietnamese coastal areas.

—The step-up in U.S. Navy participation with South Viet Nam naval forces in interception of ships and small craft transporting Communist troops and supplies from the North.

American participation will increase still more with the arrival during the next several months of U.S. Coast Guard patrol boats to work with the South Vietnamese naval forces in the sea patrol.

The arrival of Coast Guard cutters and their crews will lighten the present load placed on the ships of the U.S. 7th Fleet which have helped in detecting Communist gun-running junks and other craft.

The South Vietnamese navy has about 50 small ships and 500 junk-type craft, to handle a huge and mounting volume of interceptions and inspections. In 1963 there were 136,000 inspections of junks made, last year close to 199,000.

U.S. ships engaged in the patrol carry South Vietnamese liaison officers aboard. If a ship suspected to have come from North Viet Nam is intercepted, a party headed by a Vietnamese liaison officer from the ships boards the vessel.

American Navy officers also ride South Vietnamese ships and junks in an advisory capacity.

Ships of the 7th Fleet now engage almost daily in gunfire support of ground forces in South Viet Nam in their clashes with Viet Cong units.

Navy officials said that two or three such fire support missions occur on some days. Usually, destroyers provide the gunfire, although the cruiser Canberra has been used on several occasions.

Chou En-lai's Trip Backfires In Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai's visit to neighboring Tanzania has backfired in Kenya, where a top government minister has underscored President Jomo Kenyatta's rejection of Chou's revolution call.

Finance Minister James Gichuru told Parliament in a weekend speech that Chou had no shame and that it was time the Kenyan government challenged Red Chinese agencies operating in the country.

Chou left last Tuesday after a four-day visit to Tanzania's capital, Dar es Salaam, and the federated island of Zanzibar, which has been described as the scene of a Chinese attempt to set up a Chinese Cuba.

In a speech in Dar es Salaam, Chou declared that an "exceedingly favorable situation for revolution prevails today not only in Africa, but also in Asia and Latin America."

Kenyatta, a Mau Mau leader in the fight for independence against the British, rejected this and made it clear his government considered Chou's speech offensive.

In Gichuru's speech, the Kenyatta regime put its rejection of Chou's ideas in even stronger terms.

Gichuru told Parliament:

"The other day Cou En-lai, who has no shame, said the whole of Africa is ready for revolution, but against whom, I must ask. The only thing China knows is to send arms under disguise through our country.

"There are Chinese agencies in this country and the time has come for us to challenge them. They are getting money from China and the time has come for us to control their money.

"Sometimes we wonder if we should not move our embassy in Peking to somewhere else."

Regarding arms shipments, Gichuru apparently referred to 75 tons of Red Chinese arms Kenyan authorities intercepted as they were being shipped secretly through the country from Tanzania to Uganda, possibly for use by rebels in the Congo.

Tanzanian President Jules Nyerere, a devout Roman Catholic, warned Chou from the outset of his visit:

"While we use every possible weapon against poverty we have at the same time to guard the sovereignty and integrity of our united republic (Tanganyika and Zanzibar against any who wish to take advantage of our current need in order to get control over us.

"From no quarter shall we accept direction or neocolonialism and at no time shall we lower our guard against subversion of our government or our people. Neither our principles, our country nor our freedom to determine our future are for sale."

Otherwise, Nyerere played the good host to Chou, who also had intended to visit Kenya and Uganda but was left waiting in Tanzania with no invitations.

Nyerere made no protest when Chou, in the Dar es Salaam speech, used Tanzania as a platform for a vitriolic attack against U.S. policies in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

But Chou failed to get Nyerere to brand the United States as the imperialist enemy in a joint communique.

WATERFRONT PROGRAM is one of the most popular activities each year at the Ouachita Valley Council Boy Scout encampments at Camp Kiroli. The pool, or "waterfront" at Kiroli, is a tool in the instruction of all forms of aquatic safety. Preparing the facility prior to the start today of the first of five week-long encampments are, left to right: Joe Cordill, Waterfront Director Tommy Young, Fred Bealle, John Henderson and Jim Tuten. (Staff photo by Hershel Womack)

PITCHING TENTS is one of the paces that Ouachita Valley Council Boy Scouts will be put through in the series of five one-week encampments beginning today at Camp Kiroli near West Monroe. Coming from all over the council's 15 parishes, the scouts will be sharpening virtually every skill taught in the movement. Above are: kneeling left and right, Donald Allen and Harold Evans; and standing left and right, Ronnie Brewton and Fred Mulhearn. (Staff photo by Hershel Womack)

Scouts Begin Encampments

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Over 100 Boy Scouts will arrive at Camp Kiroli this afternoon as the Ouachita Valley Council kicks off the first of five week - long summer encampments.

The pine-studded hills around West Monroe will become a massive "training ground in scouting skills" for youngsters from eight area tropps, officials report.

Awaiting the first week's 118 participants, after check-in from 1 to 3 p.m., will be a staff of four adults and 11 scouting assistants.

Successive groups will arrive at Kiroli on June 20, June 27, July 4 and July 11 for separate one - week camps. The same program, devoted to sharpening scouting skills, will be provided for each group.

Council Camping & Activities Chairman J. W. Webster Sr. last week anticipated a highly-successful series of encampments and offered special praise for preliminary work crews. Volunteer workers and staff members spent the major part of the week June 7 - 12 putting the Kiroli facilities in good order for today's kick-off.

Virtually every phase of scouting is accented during the week and materials and equipment made available for the boys' work toward merit badges.

Arriving on the scene today are members of Troop 99 from Winnfield, Troops 7 and 8 from Monroe, West Monroe Troop 129, Troop 14 of Delhi, Winnsboro Troop 53, Troop 39 from Oak Grove and Troop 70 from Winnfield.

Among the activities they'll be performing are pioneering, cooking and firebuilding, first aid, nature and plant study, tracking, hiking, knot - tying, axe-handling, swimming, lifesaving, canoeing, rowing, forestry, Indiancraft, fishing, woodcarving, soil and water conservation.

Most of the program will be carried out in the Kiroli camp area, though on each week's schedule is one "outpost" encampment — an overnight stay in the woods nearby. The boys shift for themselves on the outpost junket, practicing everything from tent - pitching and trenching to cooking, according to Camp Director John B. Redditt Jr. of Ruston.

Each Friday night at the camp will be "Family Night," with parents and friends of the scouts encouraged to visit on the night preceding the break-up of camp each Saturday. On the visitors program are films, Indian dancing and campfire demonstrations and a talent show.

Council Scout Executive Jack E. Pankey stresses that safety at the camp is a key word, among the boys through training as well as among the staff. A fully - equipped first aid station is located at Kiroli and arrangements are made each week to have a doctor on call.

Youngsters will not be permitted to leave the camp during the week unless checked out by scoutmasters with the camp director.

Mail call is held frequently. Cards and letters should be addressed to the individual scout, giving his troop number (each troop is assigned a separate in line with individual programs for each), in care of Camp Kiroli, West Monroe.

The Order of the Arrow, Comanche Lodge 254 (the council's honor campers fraternity elected by scouts from each unit) has provided an outdoor chapel in a woods setting in the sunken garden area between the swimming pool and the camp trading post. Units and individual boys will be encouraged to make use of the spot as a place for quiet meditation. A religious service will be held in the chapel one evening each week.

Assisting Redditt on the camp staff are: Tommy Young Jr. of West Monroe, aquatics director; Clyde Farrar of Dubach, health & safety director; and Larry Wade of West Monroe, program director.

The specialized assistants are: for the "waterfront" (swimming pool) — John Henderson, West Monroe, Joe Cordill, Winnsboro, Jim Tuten, Ruston, and Fred Bealle, Monroe; for campcraft & activities — Fred Mulhearn, Winnsboro, Frankie Joseph, Monroe, Jeff Fant, David Crew, Don Hilburn and Donald Allen, all of West Monroe, and Roger Walker of Ruston.

Cotton Speaks To Kiwanians In Area Town

RUSTON (Special) — W. D. Cotton of Rayville, president of the Louisiana Bar Association, addressed the Ruston Kiwanis Club Thursday on the "Growing Disregard of Law and Order."

He discussed Law Day, which is on May 1 of each year. It was first proclaimed in the United States in 1948 by the president.

The origin dates back 2,000 years to ancient Rome, when similar celebrations were held.

Cotton emphasized the necessity of citizens upholding the law and supporting law officials.

He said that the law is abused by young people without punitive action.

"Where law ends, tyranny begins," he said.

"The courts, rather than the streets, must be arbiters," Kiwanians were told.

Cotton cited the example of civil rights action as having "flaunted law and order."

Gas Business

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Police arrested Carmela de Bernardis, 37, Saturday and said:

"When you turn on the water tap in her home out comes pure high test gasoline—gallons of it."

They said they were looking for a half a dozen other persons to charge with her of pirating the gasoline from underground pipes that run almost beneath her house from a big oil refinery to the port.

Events Attract 2,486 Children To Playgrounds

A total of 2,486 children attended playgrounds activities in Monroe during the first week of recreation sponsored by the Monroe Recreation Department.

Attendance at the ten playgrounds included Georgia Tucker — 211, Lexington — 194, Clara Hall — 255, Sherrouse — 173, Lida Benton — 279, Barkdull Faulk — 443, J. S. Clark — 364, Johnson Center — 182, Carver — 168, and Lincoln — 217.

Additional plans were made by all playgrounds in the system for activities during the remainder of the playground period, which ends July 31.

This week, each playground will divide boys and girls into age groups and initiate a checker tournament, which will be a weekly feature.

On Friday, each playground will have a wheel parade with decorated, oldest, newest, as well as several races.

All children between 6 and 16 are invited to attend the playgrounds for organized recreation and handicraft classes.

Dominican Reds' Activities Detailed In Official Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organized effort by three Communist parties to capture the revolt in the Dominican Republic and seize power has been documented in an official United States paper, the Sunday Star said.

The newspaper said the document, which it termed virtually "a white paper" on the Dominican revolt, was compiled by intelligence sources expert in Communist activities.

The report describes the day-by-day activities in Santo Domingo between April 24 and May 5 of 77 persons, characterized as known Communists, many trained in Cuba.

Many of the 77, the newspaper said, were previously identified as participants in the revolt by U.S. government sources, but the new document gives intimate details of their participation.

The Star's story, written by its Latin-American writer, Jeremiah O'Leary, said the document was obtained Friday night. It did not say from what source.

The newspaper said: At least 45 of the extremists had been deported from the Dominican Republic in May 1964, and most of them received guerrilla warfare training in Cuba before they started filtering back into the Dominican Republic last October.

Cuba's principal agency for promoting revolutionary activities in Latin America is the General Directorate of Intelligence — DGI — and this organization provided financial support to two of the three Dominican Communist parties.

These were named as the 14th of June Political Group — APCJ — and the Dominican Popular Movement — MPD. The other Dominican Communist group was listed as the Dominican Popular Socialist Party — PSPD.

The U.S. document said the parties acted in harmony in the rebellion.

The document lists as examples of day-to-day activity:

Arpil 24 — Arms handed out by Hugo Tolentino Dipp, PSPD leader who received guerrilla training in Cuba, as well as by a number of others, including Fidelio Despradel Roque, APCJ leader, and bottles and gasoline for making Molotov cocktails by MPD members.

Mercedes Batista and other PSPD leaders were observed leading a paramilitary force armed with submachine guns, rifles and grenades.

April 26 — Agitators from all three Communist parties continued to exhort Cuba, distribute propaganda sheets and produce Molotov cocktails, homemade bombs.

April 27 — Armed members of the PSPD headed by Asdrubal Dominquez Guerro and Jose Israel Cuello Hernandez took over the offices and plant of the newspaper Listin Diario.

April 28 — Communist leaders, in control of armed mobs, moved quickly into political leadership vacuum in Santo Domingo. Later this day, the military junta and police authorities informed the U.S. Embassy they could no longer assure the safety of American lives. U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett Jr. recommended that U.S. Marines be landed to establish a safety perimeter from which Americans and other foreign citizens could be evacuated. By nightfall, some 600 Marines were landed.

April 29 — An armed mob under Communist MPD leaders began full-scale assault on remaining police stronghold, Ozama Fortress. It fell the next day. Another armed mob sacked the cathedral.

April 30 — Two Communist commando groups were particularly active roaming the city.

May 1 — About 50 Communists, probably a high command group of all three parties, met in one of the Communist strongpoints.

May 2 — A short-wave radio transmitter in the home of a Communist broadcast instructions to the civilian mobs to shoot Americans on sight.

May 3-4 — Communist leaders discussed among themselves the desirability of their top leaders withdrawing from open participation in the rebel movement in order to support rebel claims that the movement was free of Communist influence and to afford protection to the principal figures of the Communist parties.

May 5 — It was the consensus at meetings of Communist leaders that while rank-and-file members of the three parties should fight on, prominent Communists should begin withdrawing from the scene. Some of the APCJ and PSPD leaders who left Santo Domingo were under instructions to attempt to organize local party members and sympathizers for eventual guerrilla action in the north. MPD leaders also agreed that the more prominent party figures should go under cover for the time being.

Union, Company Work For End To IP Walkout

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Meetings continued Saturday in an effort to reach agreement which would halt the first systemwide, authorized strike at 10 mills of the International Paper Co.'s Southern kraft divisions.

A meeting was held Saturday by management and union representatives after which the management representative and the U.S. conciliator held a session. After the meeting, joint negotiating talks were to resume, according to Godfrey Ruddick of Monroe, La., the chief union negotiator.

The strike called Friday affected 13,000 union employes. At least 3,700 workers are employed at the Mobile mill. Most of these are affected.

Unions involved are the United Papermarkers and Paperworkers; International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers; and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Announcement of the strike was made 10 days after a deadline had been set by the unions to terminate the contract.

The company reportedly made the unions an offer which was rejected but details of the offer and the demands of the unions were not disclosed.

Mills closing are at Mobile; Bastrop (2) and Springhill, La.; Panama City, Fla.; Camden and Pine Bluff, Ark.; Natchez and Moss Point, Miss., and Georgetown, S. C.

Crane Launched

NEW ORLEANS (AP)— One of the world's largest capacity floating cranes was launched Saturday at nearby Avondale Shipyards.

The Ingram Derrick Barge No. 3—300 feet long and 100 feet wide — has a revolving crane with a lifting capacity of 500 tons. The barge will be used in offshore construction work.

It can house an 80-man crew and has a main deck the size of a football field.

The barge was built for Ingram Construction Co.

Rivers Is Named As Monroe Area UGF Chairman

James Rivers

J. C. "Mose" Loftin, general chairman, announced Saturday the appointment of James Rivers, better known as "Jimmy," as Monroe Area chairman for the United Givers Fund drive.

Rivers stated that he was very happy to accept the Monroe Area responsibility for this years drive since he knew he would have associated with him many distinguished co-leaders.

Rivers has a wide experience in United Givers Fund agency activities and is active in many other civic affairs in the community. He is president of Rivers Ford, Inc., 1201 Louisville Avenue.

He will be responsible for organizing and directing the United Givers Fund Campaign in the Monroe Area, to insure that everyone in this division will have the opportunity to help support needed services to people in Ouachita Parish.

Rivers added, "The business and professional leaders and every citizen in Ouachita Parish will welcome the United Givers Campaign because they are convinced that it will save time, reduce costs, and raise more money for needed services to people. It is truly Monroe's number one job."

In addition, Rivers is active in the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts activities. He served as chairman of the Council Cookie Sale Committee for the Girl Scouts and is a member of the executive board of the Boy Scouts. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the United Givers Fund and the Monroe Chamber of Commerce. He is a past president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and continues as a member.

Loftin said, "We fell gratified in having obtained the services of Mr. Rivers who is an outstanding community leader. We know that with his added skills, combined with the public's awareness of the role its contributions play in providing these vital UGF services, the campaign will be 100 per cent successful."

Guards Protect Lynda Johnson On Digging Trip

GRASSHOPPER, Ariz. (AP) — Guards ringed a remote archaeology site where Lynda Bird Johnson, daughter of the President, settled down Saturday to a study-vacation.

An occasional U.S. Army Jeep with an officer or two aboard could be seen bouncing over the rugged, mile-high terrain.

Nobody talked to reporters, however, except for greetings. Not even the University of Arizona professors and officials who suprevise the excavation of Indian ruins dating back to 1400 A.D. would discuss Miss Johnson's visit.

The nearest state highway is 25 miles away.

Besides U.S. Secret Service agents and camp guards, Arizona highway patrolmen will stay nearby. The patrolmen were stationed at all entrances to the camp.

State Brochures Available

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Sponsors of a move to establish a state culture center for the performing arts have abandoned their attempts to have a bill on the matter considered in the current session of the Legislature.

The group's idea is to convert the old Civil Courts Building in the New Orleans French Quarter to a cultural center. They plan to continue the effort and if all works out this will be a tremendous boon to the arts in Louisiana.

LOTS OF MATERIAL

There seems to be a wealth of attractive brochures available which extol the abundant advantages of the state.

One is entitled "The Fabulous Face of Louisiana," in multifold with a map inside surrounded by colorful photographs depicting a number of state attractions. It is published by the Louisiana Tourist Commission.

Another is the booklet - type "Louisiana-A Lucrative Land," published by the Louisiana County Agents Association. It features texts and photographs of a great variety of state products, including cotton, rice, "Perique" tobacco, oil, timber, fishing, yams, sugar, salt and others.

Both of these brochures are available at the local Chamber of Commerce office.

RACE TRACK

Speaking of state attractions, our own Northeast Louisiana has the first American Quarter Horse Association approved quarter horse race track located at Delta Downs, three miles south of St. Joseph. The thrilling races are held the first Saturday each month.

WRITE A BOOK

Many people interested in writing say year after year "Someday, I'm going to write a book." That someday has come and gone for Dorothy Straight of Alexandria, Va. Her book, "How the World Began," published by Pantheon Press is causing quite a bit of interest—Dorothy is only six years old.

NESTING GROUND

NEW DELHI (AP) — The desolate Rann of Kutch, latest battlefield between India and Pakistan, is Asia's only flamingo nesting ground and one of the last places in the world where wild asses abound.

Poles To Help

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland promised economic cooperation and other unspecified assistance to Communist North Viet Nam in an agreement signed Saturday.

No details were given in a brief announcement made by Pap, the Polish press agency, several hours after the signing.

Chinese Would Expand Conflict, AP Expert Says

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The Communist Chinese would not hesitate to expand the war in South Viet Nam if they could profit by it, an Associated Press expert on Southeast Asian affairs said Saturday.

"Communist China is sitting in the driver's seat and will determine what happens in Southeast Asia," Don Huth, director of AP news coverage in that area, told the Mississippi Press Association.

Huth said the situation in Southeast Asia is at the most critical stage since the end of World War II. "It could definitely trigger another world war," he said.

"Should South Viet Nam begin winning, you may rest assured that Communist China will be prepared to move," he added.

At the moment the Communists are winning in Viet Nam and see nothing to be gained by expanding the war. Huth said America will have to commit more troops if it expects to turn the tide—and that might have unforeseeable consequences.

The United States must also work to establish a stable government in that war-torn nation, he said, one which will have the confidence of its people.

Huth was introduced at the final session of the MPA's 99th annual convention by Louis P. Cashman Jr., publisher of The Vicksburg Evening Post.

Earlier the convention paid tribute to Oliver Emmerich, editor of The McComb Enterprise-Journal. George Keith of Carthage, MPA president, said Emmerich's editorials against terrorism were in keeping with the greatest traditions of American journalism.

Keith said Mississippi was proud that Emmerich and his newspaper both won Sigma Delta Chi awards for "standing up for decency, honesty and truth in the face of great odds."

The three - day convention drew about 400 persons.

The total retail sales value of domestically consumer photographic goods in West Germany amounts to approximately $250 million each year.

Doctors Study Lazy Organs Of Spacemen

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — On the heels of the Gemini space marathon, flight surgeons are pondering the question of lazy bones and lazy hearts in the weightlessness of space.

Their results will be weeks in coming—but a first look shows nothing to bar a 14-day space mission by December with an intervening flight of something more than seven days.

The remarkable element—in the minds of doctors—was that they could measure some signs of the weightless experience on the heart, even though the pilots showed no symptoms.

Another big element was the high elation of the pilots, James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II, when they were picked up from the Atlantic Ocean last Monday after some 98 hours in space.

"I think they were just really turned on to the point where Jim was actually even dancing, and they're not this demonstrative normally," said Charles A. Berry, head flight surgeon.

The not-yet-answered questions of lazy bones and lazy hearts were perhaps the most important of the flight. There was evidence that hearts became lazy in space—that pumping blood in weightless conditions through an inactive body, the heart actually lost some of its potential.

In space, it would work well enough. But afterward on earth, under gravity conditions, the heart would pump inefficiently, blood pressure would fall, and the heart would beat faster to try to bring up the pressure. In symptoms, it could cause fainting—as the bedridden patient who rises for the first time and feels light-headed. His heart, used to the horizontal position, has weakened a little and can't pump blood strong enough in the upright body.

This could be dangerous in a sudden return from space when the pilot might lose his life if unconscious during the rigorous landing, where his conscious actions would mean survival.

Both White and McDivitt showed signs of the lazy heart condition, called, medically, orthostatic hypotension. Their blood pressures were low, and their heart rates high—but they showed no real symptoms, no faintness, dizziness or lightheadedness.

Four days after the flight, heart rate and blood pressure were normal.

In fact, the only untoward sign was a bit of nausea from White, probably caused by the bobbing spacecraft on the ocean.

Furthermore, the hearts of the astronauts showed a gradual betterment of the hypotension signs—with blood pressure and heart rate normalizing the longer the earth conditions continue.

Later doctors will match blood pressures and real time heart beats to see if there is a displacement in the electrical signals of the heart that trigger its beat.

The other problem—lazy bones—might be equally long in analysis. There were some hints—from Soviet and U.S. researchers—that the human skeleton might deteriorate a little during the inactive and weightless conditions of space flight. The theory was—the bone, without the normal weight to carry, would become somewhat more porous. X-rays to study the density of bone before and after the flight have yet to be analyzed.

The same goes for studies that would show the release of calcium by the bone, and the density of the blood.

The real problems that are recognized from the flight of Gemini 4 are those dealing with the demands on the astronauts themselves. Berry said more work must be done to set up realistic work and sleep schedules. McDivitt and White came back much more fatigued than necessary.

Still another interesting factor was their food requirement. White would feel himself slowing down. Then he would eat—and it was, he said, like a shot in the arm.

LOUISIANA DELTA — Partly cloudy today and Monday with afternoon thundershowers affecting about 20 per cent of the area. Not much change in temperatures. Highs today 88 to 92. Lows tonight 68 to 72. Drying conditions fair to poor nights and good days outside of showers. Dewpoints in the mid-60's to low 70's. Moderate to heavy dew tonight drying off by 9 a.m. Monday. Near 60 per cent sunshine today and Monday. Showers indicated to cover near 20 per cent of area with rainfall amounts less than one half inch. Winds near calm becoming variable five to 15 miles per hour today.

FLYING FARMER — Mostly 14 thousand foot ceilings with scattered occasionally broken clouds. Seven miles or better visibilities near sunrise. A few three thousand foot scattered clouds developing about mid - morning. Surface winds near calm at sunrise becoming variable five to 12 miles per hour by mid to late morning.

MIDSOUTH HIGHLIGHTS — Thundershower activity was isolated over the Mid-South region Saturday. Rainfall was of little consequence, but about 20 per cent of the area should receive some rainfall today. The forecast for the period through Monday indicates little change in the current situation. There appears to be nothing on the weather map to cause an increase in the general thundershower activity. So the weekend weather continues to favor outdoor sports activities which prefer no rain to agricultural developments which do require rain. Not much change is on the menu for the temperatures in the Mid-South Region.

Duane Pope Questioned, Sees Family

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Duane Pope, charged with robbing a Nebraska bank and murdering three persons, spent 40 minutes with members of his family at county jail after a long session with FBI agents.

He had surrendered to police here Friday, saying he was "tired of running."

The prisoner's father, Earl Pope of Roxbury, Kan., would not answer newsmen's questions.

"Let's leave it at that," he said as he was leaving the courthouse.

With him were his wife; a son, Dennis, 19, and a daughter, Ello, 14.

On the elevator on the way down from the 11th floor jail section of the courthoue, Pope's sister and mother began sobbing.

The family had driven here from their farm home about 180 miles west.

They waited about 20 minutes in a room near where Pope had been closeted most of the day with FBI agents. Then they were ushered into another room for the family meeting.

Pope, who gave up after a week's widespread search for him, is held under a federal bank robbery charge and a Nebraska state charge covering the slaying of the bank president and two employes.

FBI agents would not reveal what Pope told them. The answer was "no comment" to all questions about the robbery of the Farmers State Bank of Big Springs, Neb., June 4.

Senate Division Wants To Study Latin Situation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has ordered a fact-finding inquiry into the Dominican Republic conflict, with hearings to start within a fortnight.

Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., said Saturday the State Department has been asked to "schedule" key witnesses.

He said they will include Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett and his predecessor at Santo Domingo, John Bartlow Martin, who was dispatched to the Dominican Republic by President Johnson when U.S. forces intervened to protect American lives and free world interests.

Undersecretary of State Thomas C. Mann, in charge of Latin American affairs, also will be a formal witness. Mann conferred with Foreign Relations Committee members Friday afternoon in a general review of conditions in the Caribbean and Latin America.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., a new member of the Foreign Relations group, said in an interview that it is the committee's hope to "establish patterns of procedure" which might arise in any future explosive situation like that in the Dominican Republic.

Russia Wants Seat At Afro-Asian Talks

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is growing confident that it will get a seat at the coming African-Asian conference despite Red Chinese opposition, diplomatic sources say.

The Soviet leaders want to participate in the conference opening in Algiers June 29 for two main reasons, according to the informants:

—One is to take their claim to leadership of the underdeveloped world. Trying to keep the Russians out of Algiers is part of the Chinese challenge for that leadership.

—The other is to use the meeting as a forum for the Soviet version of attacks on the United States, rather than see it used by the differing Chinese line.

China opposes Soviet participation on the grounds that this country is neither African nor Asian. It contends that the Soviet Union is a European power.

Peking seeks to lump the Soviet Union with "white countries" and to lead the darker races of the underdeveloped world against them.

The Algiers meeting will be a rerun of the African-Asian conference held in Bandung, Indonesia, in 1955. Since the Soviet Union did not attend then, it now needs to be voted into the Algiers meeting.

A number of diplomats from African and Asian nations report that they detect growing confidence here that the Soviet Union will win enough votes for an invitation.

More than 60 countries are now on the invitation list. Their foreign ministers will meet in Algiers June 24, five days before the heads of state and government leaders gather to decide on other invitations.

One Asian source quoted Russian sources as saying some 30 countries will support the Soviet Union, about 18 will abstain and that 12 or so countries might support China.

Diplomats here are wondering what China's reaction would be to being outvoted on this issue. China has worked hard in preparatory meetings to bar the Soviet Union.

When asked why the Soviet Union might now be getting support, most diplomats simply note that the majority of Soviet territory, but a minority of its population, is in Asia.

The diplomats were reluctant to comment on possible Soviet pressure.

A veiled hint of pressure was given last week in the Soviet government paper Izvestia.

Arguing the Soviet case for attending the conference, Izvestia reminded African and Asian nations of past Soviet economic, political and military support.

It also cited Soviet support for North Viet Nam as proof of an Asian role. And it said countries supporting Soviet participation believed it would "make this forum considerably more influential."

Last summer the Soviet Union sent a message to African and Asian nations arguing its case.

Hardened Fuzz On Moon's Face, Soviet Decides

MOSCOW (AP) — The surface of the moon should look like hardened fuzz, a Soviet scientist said Saturday.

Evgenia Ruskol, specialist in lunar studies, said the latest Soviet studies, made from the earth, indicate the surface of the moon consists of a disarray of fibers.

A Soviet instrument package was supposed to land on the moon Friday night and radio information on the lunar surface if it succeeded in making a soft landing there.

But the Russians announced Thursday that the rocket would miss the moon by 100,000 miles. They have said nothing about it since.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, carried a report on the moon study. It said the Soviet studies prove that there has never been water on the moon.

Solons Please McKeithen

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Gov. John McKeithen could say Saturday he got from the 30-day fiscal legislature about everything he wanted and nothing he didn't want.

McKeithen still could veto any of the 151 legislative acts he decided he didn't want to become law June 28.

The legislature tarried in its final day perhaps a record length of time, but finally quit at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Despite talk of an independent legislature, the governor and his floor leaders held close control in the session.

This picture could change by the time the McKeithen administration approaches the halfway mark next May, when traditionally a governor's popularity begins to wane.

Already, legislators have asked the Legislative Council to draft a half-dozen bills for the 1966 session. Their nature remains secret, until the lawmakers want to reveal it, but some may be efforts to curb the governor's power.

For one, Sen. Jesse Knowles, Lake Charles, gave notice before the legislature quit he would try again to lengthen senators' terms to six years, from four, and divorce their elections from the race for governor.

This is one of several defeated proposals intended to counterbalance new power that will shift to the governor's office under a constitutional proposal sent to a public vote. The measure approved by the legislature would allow governors to serve two terms.

McKeithen would break century-old custom in Louisiana if he should gain voter permission to succeed himself, through the constitutional proposal, and win the office again in 1968.

The public vote will come in November, 1966, on the succession amendment.

Some lawmakers may want a vote at the same time on measures to strengthen the legislature and take away some of the governor's powers.

Former Gov. Sam Jones, who heads a McKeithen study committee, has reiterated he opposes the two-term measure unless the governor's powers are reduced.

Some other defeated measures which could come back next year would:

End the governor's power to appoint local officials when vacancies occur, curb his veto of legislative acts, put appointments to the legislative budget committee into he legislaure's hands, provide for Senate confirmation of top state appointive officers, and set up annual 60-day sessions without restrictions.

McKeithen was expected at any time to announce he signed the $911 million general appropriations bill, backbone of his $1.04 billion (B) state budget.

The governor signed his $140 million bond issue, which he predicted in a goodbye speech to the legislature would help reelect many lawmakers by black topping country roads and urban highway links.

The big bond issue for highways, buildings at colleges and institutions, and repairs for state structures may extend the administration's honeymoon with legislators. It gives them projects to show voters.

McKeithen told the legislators he didn't expect to see them, except in individual visits, for another year. And his leaders insist only a tidelands settlement or unforseen major financial problems could result in a special session.

One of the wanted measures the legislature gave McKeithen was a broadening of the law providing for wholesalers, retailers and other merchants to collect the state's two-cent sales tax.

The loophole closing law was pushed through by administration leaders, who estimated it would bring in $8 million to $10 million a year. An administration spokesman said afterward "this is a very conservative estimate."

A real estate transaction tax enacted by the November special legislature expires June 30. This tax, in its first four months, brought the state $686,000, and estimates for the final two months of the fiscal year would bring the total to around $1 million.

The broadened sales tax colections law, and oil and gas revenues, are expected to more than compensate for loss of this revenue.

Bonuses from state oil and gas leases this fiscal year brought in nearly $30 million, and only $10 million is estimated from this source for next fiscal year.

Electrical Fire Clears Subway

NEW YORK (AP) — An electrical fire stalled three subway trains under Brooklyn's Prospect Park on Saturday and about 2,000 riders were forced to flee the smoke-filled tunnel on foot.

Passengers groped their way to the surface by emergency exits. They said there was no panic, and there were no reports of casualties.

It took an hour and a half to get all the passengers out.

The Transit Authority said the fire under one of eight cars halted a crowded train bound for Coney Island.

Its passengers were evacuated as smoke filled the tunnel, and two other trains piled up behind the burning train.

New Negro Grad Beaten Savagely In Mississippi

CANTON, Miss. (AP)—A newly graduated Negro college student, starting a duty tour as a reserve Army officer, was savagely beaten by whites last night.

Investigators said it happened when the fledgling second lieutenant, 22-year-old Harry Bartee of Canton, took his bride to a nightclub — without knowing it had swapped ownership.

The highway nightspot used to be a Negro establishment and Bartee had played in the band there before going off to North Carolina A&T. Now the nightclub is for whites.

Investigators said Bartee, who was in uniform, was attacked as he walked toward the entrance. He was so fiercely mauled he had to be taken to a hospital in nearby Jackson for facial surgery.

Sheriff Jack Cauthen said: "Our office is investigating the incident fully." The FBI also began a probe.

Bartee was en route to California with his bride of 12 days when he stopped off here to visit his mother, a school teacher.

Brush and Palette

by Jan Bank

Well, I just did it and I hope I have no regrets, but I obviously had no other choice. I just took my little Brownie camera from the closet shelf (complete with flashbulb attachment) dropped it to the floor and stomped upon it two or three times. Of course, the current show of prints by members of "The Photographic Society of America" at The Masur Museum of Art, may have the reverse reaction upon you. You may be inspired to new dimensions when you see what artistic value fine photography can be. This is a fact that has been evident many years but perhaps more so in the past six years since the project "Photography in the Fine Arts," under the direction of Ivan Dmitri, made its debut at "the Metropolitan Museum of Art."

Although considerable controversy has been raging ever since by the photographic press, who are opposed to the system of using a jury of final selection consisting of museum and other art oriented persons, it seems to have been a good gimmick, to get people to see and appreciate fine photography.

During the last week in May, selections of photographs from the 543-print collection were picked by directors of II American Art Museums to be put on display in the Kodak Pavilion at The New York Worlds Fair. Each director picked 12 to 16 pictures and accompanied his or her choice with a statement about art with reference to photography. Several made statements similar to that of Otto Whitmann of the Toledo Museum of Art: "Art may be produced in many media; it may also be produced with lens, chemicals and paper, which we call photography. The essence of art is the artist's creative expression. It makes little difference which medium the artist uses, provided it is appropriate to the expression."

Evan H. Turner of the Philadelphia Museum made a useful distinction between the painter and the photograper. "Whereas the painter or the sculptor is restating an image-idea in his medium and in his terms, the photographer must initially cope with a specific image mechanically rendered on film: his individual genius is evident in the skill with which he sees the potential picture existing in an event or scene of daily life and in the technical ingenuity with which he photographs the subject and prints it."

These statements surely apply to the exhibit on view at 1400 South Grand. The show is fascinating, and the more you observe it the better you like it. There are prints by national and local exhibitors. Of the former group, "Deals Island," by A. Aubrey Bodine, "Hillside Tapestry" and several untitled works are very compelling. The work of our local group is excellent, featuring many award winning prints in national and area competitions. The show will be hung until June 20, when the museum will close. Museum hours are 2 to 5 p.m. everyday except Mondays.

AUXILLIARY MEMOS

The Museum will close next Sunday until September. Therefore this is the last week we will have the opportunity of listing the auxilliary members; so it seems only appropriate that these ladies who have devoted their time to the museum, receive public recognition. Approximately 500 visitors have come to the museum since its opening last fall. It would have been impossible to have operated the museum without the auxiliary, its conscienscious chairman, and several members who devoted one afternoon per week to the museum.

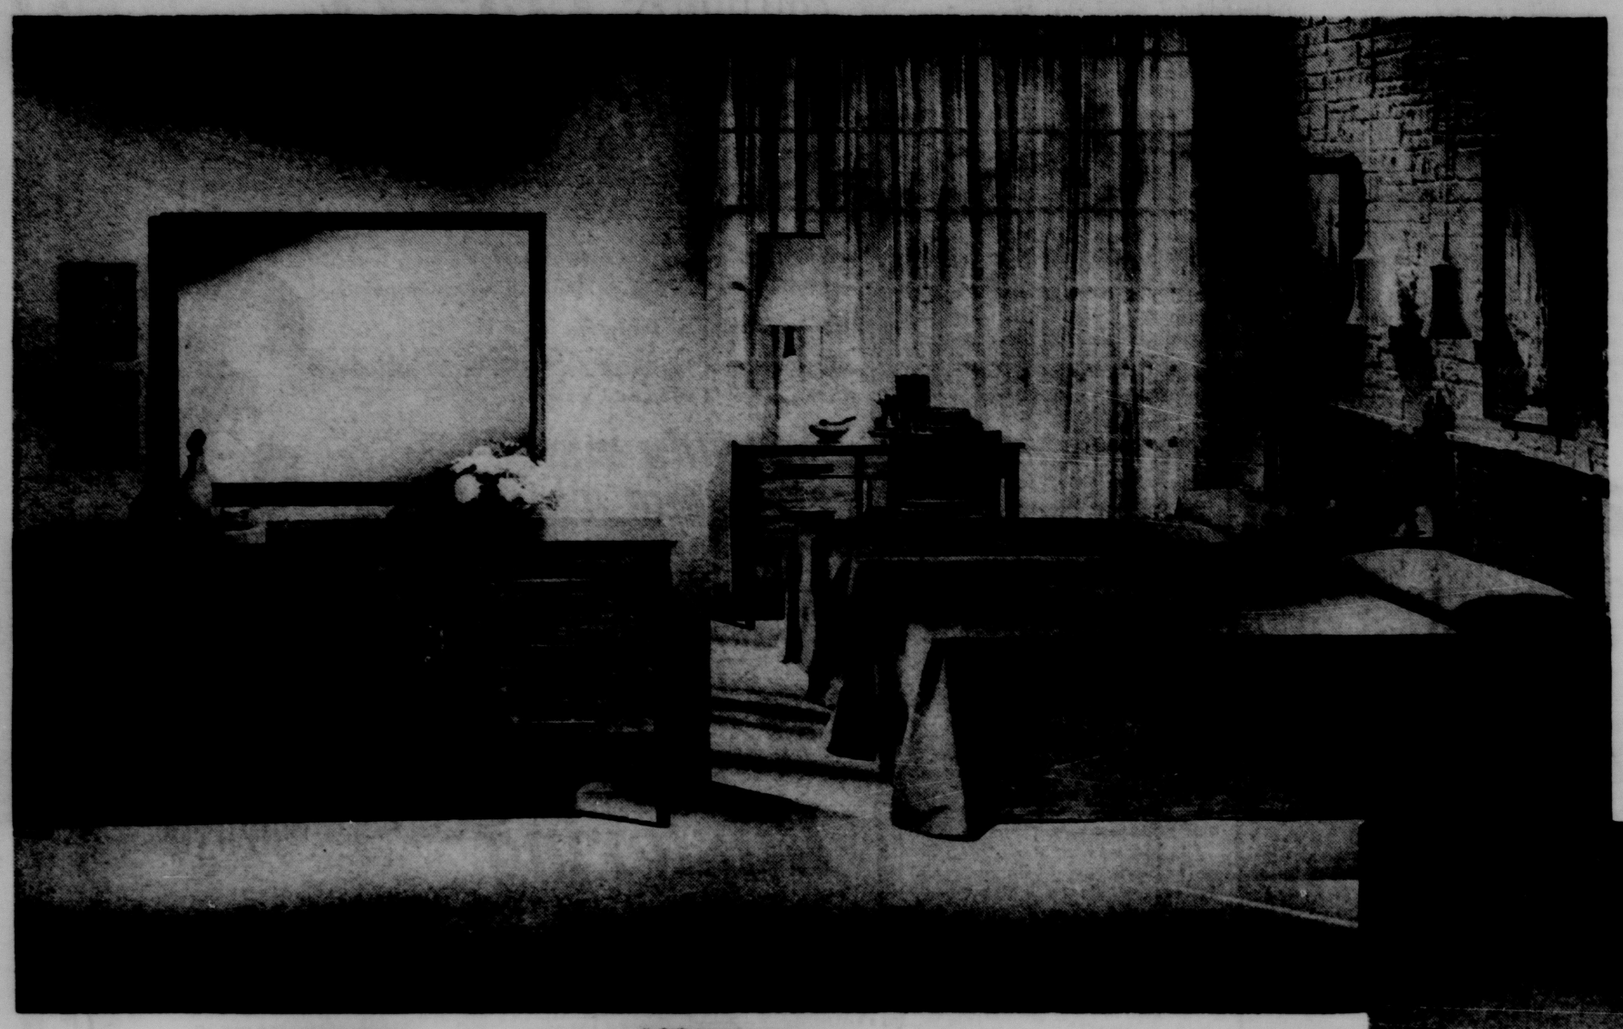

Hostesses this week are: Sunday, June 13, Mary Anita Lennon; Monday, June 14, closed; Tuesday, June 15, Mrs. David Masur and Mrs. Frank Bonner; Wednesday June 16, Mrs. Marvin Bank and Mrs. Philip Lawrence; Thursday, June 17, Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Mrs. T. Arthur Grant, and Mrs. Jack Masur; Friday, June 18, Mrs. Robert Schwartz, Mrs. James Geisler and Mrs. Earl Graser; Saturday, June 19, Mrs. Jack Graham; Sunday, June 20, Mrs. B. Thornhill and Mrs. Robert Layton.

HIGH FLYING SHOWMANSHIP

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

After 10 years as a professional stunt pilot and reigning International Aerobatic Champion, Monroe's Marion Cole still makes his living by flying, but has taken up boating as a hobby.

Cole "retired" from precision flying in 1957 when he moved to Monroe, but the skill that won him the championship is still there, as anyone who watched him perform at the recent dedication of the Monroe Municipal Airport can testify.

"Precision flying is beginning to pick up again now after dropping off for about 10 years," Cole said. "A lot of people are taking up both this sport and racing as a hobby."

Several years ago when precision flying and air shows were at peak popularity, a Monroe pilot, Marion Cole, was one of the nation's leading stunt performers. Teamed with his three brothers he presented many excitement packed shows, and had several narrow escapes in mishaps.

Leading Pilot

In the days when precision flying and air shows were at their peak popularity, Cole was the top pilot of the day.

He and three brothers had a traveling show, appropriately named the Cole Brothers Air Show, that was one of the best in the country. The group gave a performance at Selman Field in 1949.

Cole took his first flying lesson in 1939, when he was 15 years old. His two older brothers flew, although his father never was inside a plane.

When Cole became old enough to go into service, he naturally joined the Air Force, where he was a flying instructor during part of his tour of duty.

In 1946, the four brothers were re-united, and presented an air show at an airport in northern Illinois. Requests began coming in for other appearances, so the act was started.

The performance developed into a two-hour, ten-act show, complete with all the thrills expected by the audiences, and then some.

Novelty, Precision

The four brothers — Duane, Lester, Marion and Arnold — were expert flyers and did several precision routines, plus a few novelty acts for the crowd.

"We had a parachute jumper, wing riders, a small plane that would land on top of a larger plane, and a comedy act when someone usually stole a plane," Cole said.

One of the real crowd-pleasers was a routine when he would land a small plane atop a moving car.

"We had built a special platform on top of a car," he explained. "The car would get on the runway and drive about 50 or 60 miles an hour, and I would bring the plane down on top of it. Then the car would slow down and stop in front of the crowd so they could get a good look. After that, the driver would speed up again and I would take off from the top of the car."

Cole had another specialty act, he said, and that as far as he knew, he was the only person to ever perform it. In this one, Cole had two assistants on the ground holding up a ribbon between two poles. He got in his plane, with a man riding outside on the wing, and flew inverted past the ribbon as the wing rider pick it up.

The pilot said he had several forced landings, but never a serious accident.

"You just have to expect that things like that will happen sometime," he said.

Rudder Broke

He was doing a show in Rockford, Ill., in 1956, when the top half of the rudder on his craft broke off.

"In this particular maneuver," he said, "I made a sharp climb, did three quick vertical spins at the top of my climb, then let off on the power and fell into a dive straight down.

"I didn't actually know what was wrong when it happened. Sometime when you pull up to climb like that, the landing gear will snap forward and cause a jolt. I thought that's what it was.

"But when I found I didn't have control of the plane, I knew something else was wrong, and managed to pull down and land. I wasn't scared until it was all over."

This and one more incident that followed may have contributed a little to his giving up stunt flying as a professional in 1957, Cole said.

Car-Plane Mishap

On this particular day, he was doing the act in which he landed on top of the automobile.

"Just as I set the plane down and the car had started slowing, it hit a bump and tossed me over in front of the car." He said that he and the driver of the car weren't hurt, but both the plane the auto were seriously damaged.

"The one thing we always resented," he said, speaking for himself and his brothers, "was the fact that people thought we were daredevils. It was just precision flying and we considered it skill rather than a foolish stunt.

"It takes a lot of practice and concentration to be able to do this type of flying, and we were always glad when someone came up after a show and told us we had done a good job."

He said that despite the fact that air shows were not as popular as they once were, one of his brothers was still active in the field up until two years ago. At that time, his son was killed doing this type of flying. "Every once in a while, he will take part in one of the big shows," Cole said.

Cole's three brothers now live in Indiana.

International recognition came to the local flyer when he began participating in the annual contests sponsored by the National Aeronautics Administration.

"Contests were held once a year in Miami then," he said, "and were called the All-American Air Maneuvers at first. They had to be sanctioned by the NAA to be official."

His first entry was in 1949, and he won third place. He entered again in 1950, taking fourth place this time. In 1951, he was placed second, and was named International Aerobatic Champion in 1952.

Another NAA-sanctioned contest was not held until 1962, so Cole was the reigning champ for 10 years.

At the next official competition, held in 1962 in Phoenix, he did not compete and his older brother Duane took the crown. A sanctioned contest was not held in 1963, and Duane won again at the 1964 event in Reno, and is the current champion.

Contest officials published a list of more than 200 airplane maneuvers that were ruled possible, Cole explained, and these were given a point value ranging from 1 to 10, depending on the difficulty.

Performance Time

Each pilot was allowed five minutes to perform any combination of these maneuvers that he wished, and a panel of four judges graded this routine, awarding the flyer from one to five points on how well each of the maneuvers was done.

"For example," Cole said, "if I did a 10-point manuever, and executed it perfectly, I would be given 50 points."

The competition was open to anyone in the world. Pilots were to perform prior to the actual contest to determine whether they were proficient enough to enter.

"Actually, it is a contest of the pilot's skill and the ability of the plane to do the manuevers," Cole said. "You just had to get a plan and work hard enough on it to give you as many points as possible."

"The first year the competition was not so bad," he added. "I finished my routine 30 seconds early, because I wasn't exactly sure what I was doing that first time. If I had planned more carefully, I would have had time for many more maneuvers."

Since the plane is almost as important as the pilot in precision flying, Cole did not trust his craft to other people.

Worked On Plane

"It was my own special build," he said, "I spent seven or eight years working on it, adding new equipment when I could afford it, and modifying it when I got an idea for something that would work better."

Monroe Airport Manager H. B. Hargrove said that one of his proudest memories was that Cole let him fly his plane. "He was pretty particular about the people he let go up in that plane," Hargrove commented.

Cole came to Monroe in 1957 and went to work as a pilot for Southern Equipment and Tractor Company. He kept his plane until March, 1958, when he sold it for only $6,000.

"It was just sitting out here in a hanger," he said, "and wasn't really suitable for anything except that one type of flying. Now, $20,000 wouldn't begin to get it back."

Cole said he enjoys his work very much, and doesn't think he'll ever go back into stunt flying except for an occasional performance.

"But every once in a while, I like to take a plane up very high by myself and cut up, just to let off a little steam."

Boating is the newest hobby of the Cole family, which includes his wife Charlene, and four sons, Billy, 15; Larry 13; Howie, 10, and Donny, 5. They reside at 705 Tarver, Monroe.

"We try to get out just as often as we can," he explained.

Cole and his family have taken up water sports with the same enthusiasm he formerly gave to his precision flying. Some of the equipment they own and use includes regulation water skis, tiny "shoe skis," and a disc.

"Right now, the boys are wanting to get some of those trick skis without rudders," he said. This type of ski enables the skier to turn around, ski backward, and execute many other highly advanced tricks.

Cole's job, although his hours may be a bit different, usually occupies his time for the standard five-day week. On his "weekends," he and his family take to the water.

He performed in the May 23 airport dedication show at the special request of Hargrove.

"We borrowed a plane so I could practice a little before the show," Cole said. Prior to this performance, he participated in "a couple of acts" in an air show in Monroe in 1960.

Cole's flying at the airport this last time drew enthusiastic applause and praise from veteran pilots, as well as the crowd.

"I may help out in another show sometime," he said, "but other than that, I'll stick to regular flying."

FLYING UPSIDE-DOWN under a ribbon was only one of the maneuvers performed by Marion Cole when he and his brothers had a traveling air show. The ribbon is being held by the two men on the ground. During the 10-year life of the Cole Brothers Air Show, the flyers gave about 30 performances each year, covering 42 of the 48 states and parts of Canada. The 10-act show usually lasted about two hours, and featured parachutists, wing riders and novelty acts, in addition to precision flying.

MARION COLE, crack stunt pilot, is pictured here with some of his trophies won in international aerobatic competition. Cole flew in the National Aeronautic Administration-sponsored contest four years, placing each time. In 1952, he was named International Aerobatic Champion, and held the title for 10 years. His older brother Duane took the crown in 1962, and is the current champ. An exact scale model of his specially-built plane hangs on the wall of the Coles' den.

AEROBATIC FLYING is a test of the airplane as well as the pilot, according to Cole, who completely rebuilt his plane during an eight-year period when he was a professional precision pilot. Stunt planes have a vast number of modifications, including a special carburetor for flying upside-down, making it impossible for them to be serviced by ordinary mechanics and shops. When Cole retired from full-time precision flying, he sold this plane for only $6,000, because the sport was declining in popularity and there was no market for a custom-built plane. "Now you couldn't begin to get it back for $20,000," he said.

Valedictorian Hits Rioters

Obviously, Yoram B. Szekely, this year's June graduate valedictorian at Columbia College in New York, is not of English descent and there are some who might have difficulty in pronouncing his name, but he knows how to uphold the causes of true Americanism and personal responsibility. It is an honor to have such a person as he as a student and as a citizen.

When Szekely concluded his valedictory address at the 101st annual class - day ceremonies there were some hisses and boos as well as vigorous applause. The young valedictorian undoubtedly had expected the boos and had drawn up his speech with that in mind, since he had something he really wanted to say and was not merely making a prefunctory, polite and abstract graduation speech. One speech of the type he made might well be worth more than 100 of the ordinary variety.

Since it was the first time in college history that boos and hisses had been heard on such an occasion, it is of interest to see what the highest-ranked student had to say.

Szekely set the stage for his talk by saying that protest demonstrations at Columbia amounted to "outright and spiteful disregard for university authorities" and "a waste of intellectual resources." He added:

"To those of my audience who might be surprised to find a student championing the cause of the administration, I would point out a simple fact. We students come to Columbia for a single purpose — to obtain an education. We ought, therefore, to devote all our efforts to this purpose alone, and leave the teaching to the teachers and the administration to the administrators.

"A student ought to know that admission to an institution of higher learning is not an inherent right of his — it is rather a privilege. Involvement in political activities does anything but further this aim of getting real educational training."

He cited several demonstrations on the campus that seemed to him in the worst of taste, such as picketing Queen Frederika of Greece.

Stimulating, wholesome and refreshing, Szekely's blow in behalf of propriety, reason, good sense and good manners serves a useful purpose in reminding us that the unshaved, unwashed, unpressed and disgruntled demonstrator are far from being the only ones in college. On the contrary, they are a small, noisy and annoying minority in the colleges in which they cause disturbances.

Szekely deserves praise for being able to see that disturbers don't represent the feeling of the student body as a whole and for speaking out forthrightly to let others know the truth. Good luck to Szekely and others of his kind and may they speak out and declare themselves more often. This young valedictorian has set a precedent which may lead thousands of others to follow the paths of right-thinking.

Hiring Police Chiefs

Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach, who has won a degree of watchful respect in the South by holding back a little on some of the more radical proposals of integration measures now before Congress, has offered a number of ideas on crime control. One that might deserve considerable attention is his suggestion that police chiefs and detectives be hired freely from city to city.

The attorney general thinks police chiefs and detectives could build better careers for themselves if they could accept jobs freely from city to city, as do school superintendents. He says they would have greater incentive for building reputations for integrity and for accomplishment. Under the present generally accepted arrangement of one police chief, one town, there is not much chance for promotion.

We know that in many fields of activity, such as sports, some of our greatest performers come from small towns. We can well imagine how much a great athlete would be limited if he could perform only in his home town. Some of our greatest peace officers, with the highest integrity and best record of performance, may be "tied down" in small towns. If allowed to be hired freely from town to town, they might be able to perform far greater services.

"One of our greatest problems in fighting organized crime," Katzenbach said, "is that you always get the police chief or lieutenants involved." This might mean that when the top police officials have done a magnificent job of clearing up a crime situation, only to find themselves under serious criticism by some they might have offended, it would be possible for them to find better jobs in other cities as a result of the good work they have done. Inter-city hiring, which is not prohibited by law in many states, could be as well accomplished under local control.

Katenbach picks out St. Louis, Los Angeles, New York and Atlanta as cities with good police forces. It might be a little difficult for people at a distance to see the New York police as a good force because of the extraordinarily high rate of serious crimes but we know the police of that city are working under serious political handicaps. The attorney general called Philadelphia a city where "half of the people are on the take," and he added that where you think a people "are on the take, you don't have much respect."

Although Katzenbach's suggestion for free city-to-city hiring of police chiefs and detectives also hints at state concentration of police power, rather than local control, it might be that adoption of something along this line would help to cut down crime.

'Blue Collar' Peace

Having designated the United States as the savior of the world, even though some countries don't want to be "saved" by our methods, United States officials possibly deserve a little credit for their altruism, if not for their wisdom. Many in this country would prefer tax reduction to free lunches for people of other nations, but what they want doesn't seem to help much.

Although generally we look on the so-called Peace Corps as an unnecessary way of spending the money of the people of the United States, the organization seems to be moving in a sensible direction in Nigeria, one of the many African countries that are being aided. The first of a number of United States agricultural and rural development specialists will soon be in the field in Nigeria. A call is also being made for "blue collar" volunteers, who would be middle-level technicians such as automobile mechanics and machinists.

In the United States, before farm controls were initiated, the federal government cooperated with state agricultural colleges in doing a magnificent job of teaching farmers how to produce big crops. If it can do as well in teaching the Nigerians how to farm and how to make their own living, it may be a worthy accomplishment.

Military Victory Considered

Pressure To Negotiate Checked

REAL REASON that special House Armed Services Subcommittee is in South Viet Nam is to ascertain whether a military victory is possible under Johnson administration policies.

Representatives Otis Pike, D-N. Y., Richard Ichord, D-Mo., William Bray, R-Ind., and Charles Chamberlain, R-Mich., were given this emergency assignment by Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C.

The congressional mission has the full approval of House leaders, who are deeply concerned about the drift toward a Korean - type war in Viet Nam.

Following a series of backstage military briefings, the legislative chiefs agreed to have the Committee seek first-hand reports from U. S. commanders in the field on what is needed for a military victory. Arrangements for the on-the-spot survey were made by Rivers after the House leaders became convinced there is no policy to win despite the growing commitment of U. S. forces.

In one unannounced meeting at the Capitol, the Joint Chiefs of Staff warned the legislators that unless the present policy is changed, more than 50,000 U.S. troops could become bogged down in a war endangering not only their safety but U. S. security in other areas of the world.

FACING THE FACTS — "Our biggest problem in Viet Nam is that we do not have a policy to win that war," Representative Rivers told colleagues in a private briefing in his office. "All our military actions are being limited to force the Communists to the bargaining table, not to achieve victory."

Pulling down a roll-up wall map of Southeast Asia, Rivers pointed to Haiphong, chief North Vietnamese seaport, declaring:

"We should be bombing that port today. Soviet arms shipments, including the I1-28 jet bombers beginning to appear, are pouring into North Viet Nam through that port.

"Haiphong is the No. 1 military target in Viet Nam, but our pilots can't touch it under our present policy. We are not seeking a victory, but a conference.

"If some action isn't taken soon against this port, it will be ringed with Russian - made ground-to-air missiles. When that happens, the port will be so well defended we will not be able to attack because of the large number of aircraft we might lose. Every military man in the Pentagon wants the President to hit that port."

A second task assigned the special subcommittee, according to Rivers, is to obtain the recommendations of General William Westmoreland, commander of U. S. forces in South Viet Nam and charged with the security of all Americans there.

"WE ARE GOING to do what Westmoreland believes is necessary to protect U. S. forces in Viet Nam and for them to win a clearcut victory there," Rivers stressed. "Our briefings by State and Defense Department officials haven't given us a clear picture of Westmoreland's requirements, or his position about expanding our raids into North Viet Nam."

Representative Rivers also agreed to have his group look into Communist atrocities in South Viet Nam against U. S. and South Vietnamese servicemen. He did so in response to a request by Representative Michael Feighan, D-O., who wrote:

"Shockingly reminiscent of the atrocities committed by the Chinese and North Korean Communists during the Korean war are those being committed against U. S. servicemen in Viet Nam.

"They have been discovered with their hands tied behind their backs and shot in the head. Their bodies were not given a decent burial, but thrown in jungle underbrush by their Viet Cong captors."

Present plans call for the legislators to spend two weeks in Viet Nam and then return to Washington to make their recommendations to House leaders and the White House.

Although Defense and State Department officials originally opposed the trip, they are cooperating with the congressmen under orders from the President.

nancial support for the following reason:

We are flabbergasted that you, a leader of the party, should see fit to go all out in support of Johnson's punitive legislation against the Southern States that went Republican in the November election. It is punitive on his part and don't try to kid us otherwise.

We just cannot fathom your thinking along those lines and would like to have any kind of explanation you are able to offer.

West Monroe Chief

West Monroe, Louisiana

To the Editor:

There were statements made in the last West Monroe Municipal election by some of the successful candidates that they were going to "get West Monroe going." Evidently, what they meant by this statement was that they were "going" outside of the ranks of faithful city employees to fill various executive department positions, the most recent example being the selection of a new fire chief.

I understand from what I read in the newspaper and can learn on my own that there were six applicants aspiring to fill the resigning Chief Taylor's job and that all applicants were employed by the West Monroe Fire Department. I understand there were three of these applicants who passed the civil service examination. These three men who passed the examination are hard-working, dedicated firemen, one of them having had 22 years experience, one having 9 years experience and the third having 5 years experience in the department. Further, I know for a fact that some of these applicants spent money from their own pockets obtaining study material in preparation for the exam and put in many long hours of hard study.

Mr. Editor, my question is this: Who could be more qualified or more entitled to be appointed chief than one of these three men who have given much of their working lives in service to the citizens of West Monroe. These men know the department, they have watched the laying of the mains, placement of plugs, have inspected the major buildings and are thoroughly familiar with the functions of the West Monroe Fire Department. Why don't the city politicians want one of these men to serve as the West Monroe Fire Chief.

I sincerely believe that good and faithful service deserves reward and encouragement. These local firemen deserve this promotion. There is no need for another examination. We have qualified men who can serve as fire chief and I, for one, believe that one of these faithful three should have the job.

LBJ's Policies

Chatham, La.

To the Editor:

To quote from you: "Some of the things President Johnson does we like and some we don't like as well." Sir, I have begged you not to praise Mr. Johnson at any time, because he is the final pitfall for us as a nation and anything he does you like now, you will cry about later. I say this because Mr. Johnson is casting his net to capture all of us and he is being used to bring us all into total slavery. Mr. Johnson is just as dependable and honest as a statement he made the other day, and I am sure you heard it. "The Negro people are winning their fight and they must see its fulfillment in this generation, for they have fought patiently, quiety, orderly and have observed all laws in their marches, demonstrations, and speeches in demanding their full and equal rights, etc.," at least I gave the substance and I gave the meaning of what he said and you know and I know this was a gross mis-statement of facts and you know that Mr. Johnson also knows it was.

Mr. Johnson's foreign policy that you like so well, and most all correspondents and editors seem to like, is the biggest joke of them all, because he is not putting the cause of the United States first, but last and time will prove his statement correct, because he is working on the so called master plan, or The Great Society for the World, I predict that the time will come when Russia, China, India, Egypt, etc. will have more to say about what you do here in this country than you will have to say for yourself. Already, Mr. Johnson is letting the cat out of the bag in his insisting that we must be ready and willing to assist all countires, including communist, when they get ready to enter into a great building and expanding program. Don't you know the people of Asia, especially, are laughing at the biggest fools in the world, US. We have accepted a fake philosophy that the world must be one in order to survive, but we have forgotten that God divided the world into races, nations, etc. in order that man might become a better creature.

High Court Again Aids Communists

BY A BARE majority (5-4) — as so often is the case when the Supreme Court gags over anti-Communist legislation — a provision designed to regulate the activities of Communists has been struck down. In this case, the provision in the Landrum-Griffin Act which denied the protection of the National Labor Relations Act to any union that has Communists among its officers.

The reasoning of Congress, loosely stated, is as follows. If unions are going to be given special privileges under the law — and they have been given such privileges, increasingly, during the past fifty years — then we are entitled to regulate these unions. The Landrum - Griffin Act was an attempt to provide protections for union members against the most conspicuous abuses unearthed by Senator McClellan's anti-rackets investigation, which did so much to protect the brothers Kennedy on the national scene — remember?

ONE OF THE abuses to which individual union members and the rest of us have been subjected is the influence of officials who are Communists and use the unions as a means of furthering their revolutionary objectives. The Communist movement, after all, conceives iself as a movement of "the proletariat" against "the exploiting classes." Accordingly, since the birth of organized Communism, the labor unions have been the prime targets of Communist penetration.

And, not withstanding the valiant efforts conspicuously of George Meany and to some extent of Walter Reuther, there are in fact labor unions — almost all of them disengaged from the AFL-CIO — that are, in the opinion of professional students of the matter, Communist-dominated. Why, Congress reasoned back when it wrote the Taft-Hartley law in 1948, and later when it wrote the Landrum-Griffin law, should we pass special laws granting special protections to organizations whose dominant members are committed to transforming said organizations into instruments of revolutionary agitation? By such reasoning, legislation was born. Legislation which now the Supreme Court has set aside.

WHAT IS THE reasoning, in turn, of the majority? That the Constitutional guarantee against bills of attainder outlaws this kind of thing. A bill of attainder is a law designed to penalize a particular person (or category of people) without due process. To deny the provisions of preferential legislation to, or otherwise to penalize, people merely because they are Communists, is to legislate against a category of people who have not been found, individually, to be guilty of breaking any law. Let Congress — Earl Warren declared in his majority opinion — pass another law declaring against labor unions whose officers can be proved to advocate violent overthrow of the government, or whatever it is Congress is currently objecting to, and apply it equally against all persons, whether they are Communists, or Nazis, or anarchists, or Luddites, or what have you.

The trouble with such abstract reasoning by the Court is that it deprives Congress of the right to act reasonably on the basis of experience. The experience of Congress in respect of the Communist Party is considerable. Justice Frankfurter, in voting (another 5-4 decision) to uphold the Constitutionality of the McCarran Anti-Subversive Law several years ago, based his reasoning explicitly on the grounds that investigative committees of Congress had established beyond any reasonable doubt that Communists are a very special breed of people, the suppression of whose subversive activities is Constitutionally enjoined in the phrase from the Preamble to the Constitution that calls for securing the liberties of the American people.

WHAT IS THE result of this additional dilemma, that grows out of the abstractionist concern of the Warren Majority on the one hand, and the duty of Congress, on the other, to legislate against those who revolutionize against our liberties? The tendency of the Court to vitiate effective Congressional concern over the Communist movement is distressingly consistent: one thinks especially of Watkins, Yates, Jenkins — what power is Congress left with to generalize against Communists? If every single individual Communist needs to be tried — not in order to put him in jail: everyone put in jail should be individually found guilty — but merely to get him out of the way of where he can do great damage, then the fact of the matter is that no categorical anti-Communist legislation can be written into law. And if Congress is not permitted to legislate against Communist activity, how, pray, is it to exercise its responsibilities to secure our liberties?

Is it contrary to libertarian doctrine to deny special privileges to those who join organizations whose goals are to subvert the privileges and rights of others? That is the kind of reasoning, by the majority of the Court, that causes those of us who hold in high esteem the function of the Court, to throw up one's hands in despair. In doing so, we echo the judgment of the Court's tumescent minority who, through Justice White, expressed their exasperation with their colleagues' reasoning.

DR. PETER J. STEINCROHN

Father Becomes Cross With Age

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: My father who is 79 is making us all very unhappy. While his health is good generally (he is still active and working) he is a changed person. He is fast becoming just plain ornery and hard to live with. Try as we may to please, it can't be done. He doesn't care about shaving, bathing. He has to be pushed into washing his face.

It is heartbreaking to stand by from day to day and see one who has always been keen, good natured, and kind behaving like a terrible child. Is there anything we can do to help him? — Mrs. C.

Comment: That depends upon what you have done or are doing now. Presupposing that you have just been putting up with him and have not sought medical advice, I suggest you call your family doctor or a physician interested in geriatrics.

I can only guess that your father has had some changes due to interference with his normal blood supply to the brain. As you know there is no definite cure for atherosclerosis. Nevertheless, we have some medicines which often help temporize such symptoms as your father has. They make patients more tractable; much easier to get along with. Rather than just trying to bear up under this saddening problem, better call in a physician than resign yourself to being stoical about it.

SO MANY LETTERS continue to arrive from young women (single and married) about the advisability of having plastic surgery to correct small breasts, that I think the opinion of a lay person (and a woman) will offer views that are helpful in determining their course.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: Single women often place much more value on having visible breasts to attract a man than on having functional ones with which to nurse their young later on.

Surgery is certainly no better than padded bras and falsies. Girls will still need to face a problem when married, but a much more serious one than they are presently contemplating with surgery. Boys at 19 are interested in a girl's appearance. Mature men are interested in a woman's mind. In just a few more years, these girls will be meeting such men.

The important point, though, is that after they have met and married these men, they will be able to enjoy ample breasts as well as a very satisfying role as women who believe in breast feeding. Babies don't care how much tissue surrounds the nipple as long as they get that delicious nutrition along with all that fine cuddling. Their payment is pure, unadulterated, unsexed love!

PLEASE, Dr. Steincrohn, encourage women with the problem of underdeveloped breasts to see temporary solutions, for in the long run their breasts will bring them the true satisfaction for which they were meant. I wonder if it is significant that almost all the women I know who are breast-feeding their babies are small - busted. Perhaps those with more ample breasts are satisfied to use them purely as sexual symbols rather than functional glands. — Flat-Chestedly Yours, Mrs. S.

The World's Week In Focus

Space Flight Biggest Show

A Top Show

Americans could not have asked for a better show.

At 1:12:30 p.m., Monday, a minute and a half ahead of schedule and only 48 miles off the bullseye, the Gemini 4 space capsule containing Air Force Majs. James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II splashed down into the Atlantic, back safely from a four-day weekend orbit.

Astronaut White In Space

Whisked by helicopter to the aircraft carrier Wasp, McDivitt and White astounded examining flight surgeons by their robust health. Both had lost weight. McDivitt suffered a nose bleed, believed to have been caused by oxygen-dried membranes. White's complaint? He got seasick when the capsule bobbed in the Atlantic waters.

Highlight of their stay aboard the Wasp was a radiotelephone call from their commanding officer, President Johnson, congratulating them on their 62-orbit, 1.7-million mile, 97-hour and 58-minute voyage through space. The President also invited the astronauts and their families down to his LBJ Ranch for the weekend but later he changed his mind. The President went to Houston to visit them instead.

On Wednesday, the color films of White's 20-minute walk in space, self-propelled by a jet gas gun, during Gemini's third orbit were shown to a selected audience in Houston. The films, clear, sharp and colorful, were spectacular. The audience readily understood why White overstayed his leave outside the spacecraft and grumbled, "This is the saddest moment of my life," as he climbed back in.

The McDivitt-White feat so buoyed American space confidence that, even as Gemini 4 plunged safely into the sea, the booster rocket for Gemini 5 — a seven-day space journey scheduled for August — was being put into place at Cape Kennedy, Fla.

Soviet Effort

McDivitt and White had scarcely splashed down when the Soviet Union announced a space effort on their own. Lunar 6, their second attempt to soft-land an unmanned spacecraft on the moon, was launched Tuesday. A similar American project, known as Surveyor, was not even scheduled until September. Two days after the launching, however, the Russians had to admit failure. A motor that had been turned on to change the course of Lunar 6 could not be turned off and the craft would miss the moon by some 100,000 miles. The space race was still close.

South Viet Nam

A sudden deterioration in the political situation at week's end raised new problems in South Viet Nam's faltering effort to resist the Communist guerrillas.

The four-month-old government of Prime Minister Phan Huy Quat resigned after a growing dispute with the chief of state Phan Khac Suu, and dissident Roman Catholics. Suu and the National Legislative Council also stepped down, leaving the military to fill the political vacuum.

The latest political upheaval since the fall of President Ngo Dinh Diem in November 1963, caught most U.S. officials in Saigon by surprise.

The Viet Cong forced the offensive again, overrunning the district capital of Dong Xoai, 60 miles north of Saigon. The fighting began with a mortar barrage Thursday. When it ended a day later, 3 Americans were dead, 15 wounded and 15 missing. The list of confirmed U.S. battle dead in Viet Nam since December 1961 stood at 409.

The home-front forces opposed to the United States' part in the Viet Nam war drew new ammunition from a State Department announcement that American ground troops were authorized to go into combat in support of the South Vietnamese soldiers if requested by the South Viet Nam government.

The next day, the rising storm of protest drew the White House into the fray. American forces were indeed authorized to do what the State Department said, but the White House insisted that this did not represent an expanding combat role for the United States. The primary mission of the more than 50,000 American fighting men in Viet Nam is still the protection of bases, the White House said.

Supreme Court

From the august halls of the Supreme Court came more decisions affecting lives of the land.

After twice refusing to examine the matter, the court finally struck down an 86-year-old Connecticut law which forbade the use of contraceptives, even by married couples. The 7-2 decision established for the first time that the Constitution created a "zone of privacy" that had been infringed on by the law.

The high court also threw out the swindling conviction of Texas wheeler-dealer Billy Sol Estes on grounds that television coverage of parts of his trial had violated "the time-honored principles of fair trial." Estes heard of the decision in federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., where he was serving 15 years on an unrelated conviction for mail fraud and conspiracy.

LBJ Rumor

And on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange the rumor was first heard shortly after 10 a.m., Wednesday. By noon it was all over Wall Street. President Johnson was ill. A heart attack or a stroke.

Before the White House could catch and throw the rumor, the market dropped sharply. A closing, nearly $5 billion had been trimmed from the value of listed stocks and sales volume stood at 7.7 million shares, its highest level in three months. By week's end, however, the market, in decline for the past five weeks, had made a moderate recovery.

Best Speller

Michael Kerpan Jr., 12, of Tulsa, Okla., correctly placed the "h" in "larghettp" in the 17th round, and won the 38th National Spelling Bee in Washington.

Best Secret

It was the best-kept political secret of the year. Not even Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey had been clued in on New York Mayor Robert F. Wagner's plans. On Wednesday, while Wagner listened with a smile, Humphrey predicted publicly that the mayor would run for a fourth term. On Thursday, Wagner announced he wouldn't run and, he added, his decision was "irrevocable."

Wagner's announcement added zest — and confusion — to the coming municipal election in New York. On one side, U.S. Rep. John V. Lindsay, who seemed to be trying to hush up the known fact that he was a Republican. On the other, who? A Wagner heir? A protege of U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy? Or one of those reformers who didn't care for either one? It appeared that only a bitter Sept. 14 primary would tell.

Deaths of the week:

Thornton Burgess, 91, creator of those long-time children's bedtime story favorites, Peter Rabbit and his friends of the Briar Patch, June 5, in a Hampden, Mass., nursing home.

Judy Holiday, 42, the actress with a 172 IQ who achieved stardom as a dumb blonde in the play "Born Yesterday" June 7, of cancer in a New York hospital.

Quote of the week:

Astronaut James A. McDivitt to his kids, Michael 8, Ann Lynn 6, and Patrick 4, on his return from four days in space: "Hey, I see you guys didn't mow my lawn while I was gone."

The Hot Line

MUCH HAS been written about the "hot line" between Washington and Moscow, by which the top powers of either nation may communicate with their opposite numbers as quickly as a telephone connection can be put through.

If this storied line is ever used, neither capital hears about it, for the communications are top secret. When the Kremlin wants to send the United States a warning to the effect that it doesn't like our policies, it needs only to invite Cyrus E. Eaton, Cleveland industrialist and one of this country's very rich men to Moscow to lend an ear, and bring back grim Soviet warnings to be broadcast here.

EATON, NOW aged 82, has been a U.S. citizen since 1913. Born in Nova Scotia in the homely sounding town of Pugwash, he did not come to the United States until 1900, but he soon learned directions. He went into business with a leading Cleveland citizen named John D. Rockefeller.

Eaton's business importance is not built on oil, however, but on steel. He has probably had a hand in organization of more steel companies than any other industrialist, with public utilities and finance as a side interest. He attracted little national notice, however, until he first gained the attention of Nikita Khrushchev after the latter's accession to power. Since then he has been a periodic visitor to Moscow, where he has been welcomed as "Exhibit A" — i.e. a full blown American capitalist who sees much good in Communism, at least as practiced in Europe.

His reports on return to the U. S. began to lose interest so long as his main source of information was Khrushchev who expressed his views to most all Americans, especially reporters and publishers.

Now that the picture has changed, Eaton is back in it. He recently brought back an extensive transcript of conferences with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Anastas I. Mikoyan, which he interpreted as revealing "rising anger and bitterness toward the United States" in Communist countries, because of administration actions in South Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

STATE DEPARTMENT specialists read them with interest, because Kosygin, about whom comparatively little is known in Washington, was using a familiar pipeline to get through to the U. S. But they found few surprises in Kosygin's attitude and little to support Eaton's own interpretation of the text.

"In my sober judgement," he said, "we are on the brink of catastrophe and unless some miracle occurs in the next month I fear that mankind is doomed."

The reaction of former Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, the President's advisor on Russia was something like "hogwash from Pugwash," but he couldn't be quoted to that effect.

As is usually true in Kremlin discourse, both Kosygin and Mikoyan made charges against the present U. S. administration which seem wide of the facts, accused the President of asking for war (Khrushchev used to do the same) and picked sentences in his recent speeches out of context to give them a meaning not intended.

And as usual in Eaton's interviews with Soviet chiefs of state, he set up a background for Kosygin's own aggreived statements about what he conceives to be the U. S. attitude toward Russia. For example, Eaton said:

"SOME OF President Johnson's advisers have told him that the previous regime of the USSR was more peaceful, and much more friendly in its attitude to the U. S. than your government."

Replied Kosygin:

"That theory again, has no justification. We feel strongly that it was President Johnson who abandoned peace and proposed a policy of armament and increased tension . . . He can always learn at first hand if he wants to . . . In view of the increasing tension and the return to war, we have no alternatives but to meet force with force."

The Russian premier may have been reading some of the criticisms on Asian and Caribbean policy uttered in this country. At any rate, he made good use of an American capitalist who seems to lean toward Moscow in their joint discussions. The United States, in those conversations always seems to be the war monger and the Soviet the only consistent defender of peace. And when Eaton interprets them, they become grim warnings.

Twin Cities Week In Review

Overpass Plans A Traffic Boon

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Beats there a Twin City heart so philosophical as not to have felt less than charitable while awaiting, on a steaming day, on major crosstown streets between DeSiard and Washington, the passage of a train? Probably not.

This situation — the inevitable conflict, in the absence of suitable alternate routes, between various forms of transportation — will become a thing of the past when a story begun last week reaches its conclusion.

The Monroe City Council, in special session Tuesday, authorized Mayor W. L. Howard to enter agreement with the State Department of Highways for an overpass above the Illinois Central tracks at Sixth Street, as well as for the widening of Sixth to Louisville.

TYLER

Uninterrupted traffic flow for locals will be but one of the benefits, since extensive use of the route is expected by travellers peeling from and moving toward the I-20 in south Monroe.

Total cost of the construction is anticipated to approximate $3.5 million, with the city obliged to invest up to $250,000. The project, needless to say, will be one more feature of Monroe's increasingly futuristic physiognamy.

Another feature, also set apace at Tuesday's hyperactive session, is the new civic center complex, final phase of an $11¼ - million capital improvement program. City officials accepted the low bid, $4,336,315, of Jesse F. Heard & Sons for construction on the southside of the three-building complex, tied to a completion time of 620 calendar days.

An ultra - modern showcase, due to complement the planned government center nearby, the complex will include an arena building, convention building and theatre, all connected by covered walkways and surrounded by parking accommodations for 1,800 automobiles.

It's an interesting (to us, at least) tack we're on. If any one phase of news last week, by dint of sheer numbers of developments, earned prominence, it was building — planned, progressing or completed.

Olin Mathieson, for example, dedicated its new Forest Products Operation medical center at the firm's industrial complex outside West Monroe. Meantime, the Monroe Chamber of Commerce industry recognition committee was planning honors for Morgan-Lindsey and its relatively-recent warehouse and merchandising center at Selman Field. (an open house is set next Tuesday.)

Preliminary plans for major additions to West Monroe's Glenwood Hospital were under study by state and federal officials, pending the okay of federal Hill-Burton funds for the project. A local bond issue of $870,000 was approved last year.

Northeast Louisiana State College received final approval from the U.S. Department of Health, Education & Welfare on a $500,000 grant toward a $1½-million physics, mathematics, geology and foreign language building. Supplementary state funds already have been approved and bids will be opened in September.

The first shipment of more than 5,500 tons of structural steel was received by Louisiana Power & Light Company, preparatory to the building of a massive electric power expressway across northeast Louisiana. Its 100-mile length, to cost $218 million, is slated for completion late next year as part of the first 500,000-volt line to interconnect separate systems.

A report released during the week by Monroe building coordinator Dale Martha showed May to have been a highly active month, the most active of the year to date. Building permits numbered 107, authorizing construction in the city evaluated at $807,603.

In West Monroe, aldermen inspected the city's new $50,000-plus utilities complex and pronounced it almost ready for occupancy. Consisting of a brick-front office bulding, a garage-workshop and two parking sheds, the Haynes Street center will replace facilities lost through the sale of downtown land and the loss by fire of office quarters downtown. Due to move in, likely early this week, are employees of the city's street, water and sanitation departments, as well as plumbing and building inspectors.

Remnants of the fire-destroyed "old city hall," in the interim, have been virtually cleared, it was announced, and West Monroe officials are giving consideration to possibilities for a parking lot at the choice Trenton Street site.

Skipping

The news montage last week had many other facets. A few of them:

Monroe's recreation department threw open the gates, symbolically speaking, to eight-week summer programs at 10 local playgrounds, and while we weren't there, we can imagine the great good spirits that prevailed. Softball, as well as various games, contests and handicraft, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., are "de rigeur" on the grounds at Barkdull Faulk, Clara Hall, Georgia Tucker, Lexington, Sherrouse, Lida Benton, Lincoln, Clark, Carver and Johnson's Recreation Center.

Gordon Canterbury, manager of Monroe's educational TV station before its unfortunate demise, was named new educational television coordinator for the State Department of Education.

A roaring fire did extensive damage to a 10-unit apartment building at 3511 Madison in Monroe, uprooting nine families, but happily causing no injuries. The fire apparently started in an upstairs kitchen of the two-story structure.

The United Federation of Postal Clerks of Louisiana held its annual state convention in Monroe Friday and Saturday, headquartered at the Virginia Hotel and attended by about 200 delegates. Billy Scalia is president of the organization's Monroe branch.

The Monroe Little Theatre held another of its popular Children's Theatre presentations Tuesday through Friday, with four afternoon and one evening showing. The latest attraction, a comedy, was called, "The Panda and the Spy."

And, finally, awkward as the placement might be, following a gay event like children's theatre, the week included the tragic loss of a former West Monroe alderman, H. A. Brownlee Sr. A Twin Cities resident since 1922, Mr. Brownlee died Thursday morning.

Looking Ahead

Our "Looking Ahead" Department this time is a veritable Cornucopia (it means "horn of plenty" — we learned it last Thanksgiving). Among the treasures:

Fanciers of feminine pulchritude picked up on their seismographs early tremors of the Miss Louisiana beauty pageant, to be held at Neville auditorium July 1-3 (certain related and non-competitive activities are scheduled June 30). Davis Bingham, associate professor of music at Northeast Louisiana State College, was named master of ceremonies for the three-show series. Pageant Director J. C. Ussery praised the Tennessee native's abilities as an emcee, as well as his fine singing voice. Next, later in the week, the sponsoring Monroe Jaycees announced the opening of a downtown office, 145 DeSiard St., for advance ticket sales. Advance sales, however, are transacted only on reserved seats for all three nights.

The Monroe Jaycees, by the way, will be having officer installation Wednesday night at the Rendezvous. Otis Derbonne will assume the presidency, succeeding Ira Phillips, with Louisiana Jaycee prexy Milton Core of Denham Springs as installing officer.

And pursuing the same line, new officers of the West Monroe Optimist Club will be installed on the ladies' night program Monday at Olinkraft Cafeteria. Incoming are: Dr. Beryl Franklin, president; Morris Griggs and Robroy Young, vice presidents; and Howard Carter Sr., re-elected as secretary-treasurer. Outgoing president is Bert Hatten.

Finally, we mustn't overlook two significant meetings of the immediate future — both Tuesday in fact.

West Monroe aldermen (viz., the group mentioned earlier) will gather to consider the city's 1965-66 budget, reading for a new fiscal year starting July 1. The session will be an adjourned one, continued from a whopping three-hour meeting last Tuesday, two-thirds of which was behind closed doors. Three was a notable number on that occasion; three new trucks were purchased and it became the third consecutive meeting to include an executive session.

At the same hour this Tuesday, 7 p.m., the Ouachita Parish School Board will be meeting.

We should also mention here in connection with the board that a several-months-old suit brought against that body by West Monroe architect Beuford Jacka resulted in a Fourth District Court decision last week. It was in favor of the architect, entitling him, barring appeal we presume, to a full final payment on his Riser School work of more than $27,000. The board had withheld payment contending that neglect necessitated additional work at the school.

Monday night also will be important from the standpoint of meetings, as the Ouachita Parish Police Jury assembles to consider at least two matters of wide interest — one of them of overriding concern. It's the night that a recommendation is expected from the citizens committee appointed recently to study solutions for the many tangled aspects of rural fire protection. A great deal of attention will be focused on the session for this reason. As well the jury will hear an internal committee report on the investigation of a recent request to participate in a federal commodities distribution program.

Sunday Poem

Tell me, ye winged winds,
That round my pathway roar,
Do you know some spot
Where mortals weep no more?
Some lone and pleasant dell,
Some valley in the west,
Where, free from toil and pain,
The weary soul may rest?
The loud wind dwindled to a whisper low,
And sigh'd for pity as it answer'd 'no.'
Tell me, my secret soul,
Oh, tell me, Hope and Faith,
Is there no resting-place
From sorrow, sin, and death?
Is there no happy spot
Where mortals may be blessed,
Where grief may find a balm,
And weariness a rest?
Faith, Hope, and Love, best boons to mortals given,
Wav'd their bright wings, and whisper'd,
'yes, in heaven.'

Ain't It So

When young men say things that sound good but mean nothing, you have a right to anticipate a political career a'budding.

Humor Varit

Here's a little humor or definitions or whatever you may call them from the June issue of the Catholic Digest:

A gourmet is a glutton who owns a tuxedo . . . a clock-watcher is an eager leaver . . . a June bride is a smart girl who knows how to play golf, tennis, the piano, — and dumb . . . June day: a sun with arson in its heart . . . Sign in the window of a closed book shop: "Words failed us" . . . Credit: a way to spend money you wish you had . . . Beauty shop sign: "Welcome, Ugly Americans."

Georgia Marriage Ceremony

Ever hear of the Georgia Marriage Ceremony? We presume it's the form used at some weddings in that state. Anyway, this is how the book, Treasury of Southern Folklore, written by Botkin, says it:

"By the authority vested in me as an officer of the state of Georgia, which is sometimes called the Empire State of the South; by the fields of cotton that spread out in snowy whiteness around us; by the howl of the coon dogs, and the gourd vine, whose clinging tendrils will shade the entrance to your humble dwelling place; by the red and luscious heart of the watermelon, whose sweetness fills the heart with joy; by the heavens and earth, in the presence of these witnesses, I pronounce you man and wife. The wife will henceforth take over."

The Crunch Joke

There are jokes and there are jokes. We ran into this one the past week, but we still can't decide if it's funny or if it has a moral lesson in it. But here it is:

It concerns a wife, who was getting a bit depressed about the habits of her husband. Once in a distrait moment — and obviously a weak one — she had given him the OK to spend Wednesday nights out with the boys and he was taking constant advantage of it.

Late each Wednesday or early Thursday he would come staggering home, daring her to say a cross word to him, reminding her at each remonstration that she had given approval of the idea.

In an attempt to get away from brooding about it she went out in search of a pet, and it was in one of her visits to a pet shop that she saw a bird of crow size, but of striking color.

"That's a crunch bird, you wouldn't be interested," the manager told her. "why not?"

"It only takes instructions from males," the manager told her. "Look at him, sitting on his perch there. If you were to say anything to him, he would ignore you. The crunch bird, for some reason, will not listen to women. He only responds to the male voice. Now watch this."

With that he said, "Crunch bird . . . that table."

The bird immediately dipped from his perch and pecked the table into a fine sawdust within a matter of minutes.

"Amazing," said the wife. "How much is it?"

"I couldn't sell him to you lady," the man told her. "I wouldn't sell it for a dime under $500 and I've already told you it won't listen to women."

"Will you take a check?" was her question.

When he just stared at her, she told him, "I know, I know, it won't listen to me. But look mister, I have a husband . . . he won't listen to me either. Every Wednesday night or early Thursday my husband comes home in a condition I can't describe. I'm doing to take this bird home. Tonight or early tomorrow my husband is going to come home in that condition. He's going to look at that bird and ask me, 'whassat?' and I'm going to tell him, 'That's a crunch bird,' and he's going to say, 'crunch bird, my foot.'"

Golfers Lament

I search the rough,
The out-of-bounds,
I even check the bunkers,
The balls I lose
Are spanking new,
The ones I find are clunkers.

Poverty Program

According to this story, the administration's poverty program has some amusing phases — and some sage advice. As it goes — not verified, of course — a Washington official saw some whittlers in a country town. "What can we in the poverty program do for you?" he asked. The reply: "Nothing — just leave us alone." "Well, we have the money appropriated already. Can't we do something?" "Yes," said one. "Go back and read the 26th chapter of Proverbs, 17th verse."

Get down your Bible, gentle reader.

How About This

According to the figuring of Rep. Richard Poff, R-Va., the national debt is rising $22,000 a minute — but that's not all. If you work an eight-hour day, the first two hours and 20 minutes of your work goes for federal, state and local taxes. The national debt is on top of this.

Reason For Apathy

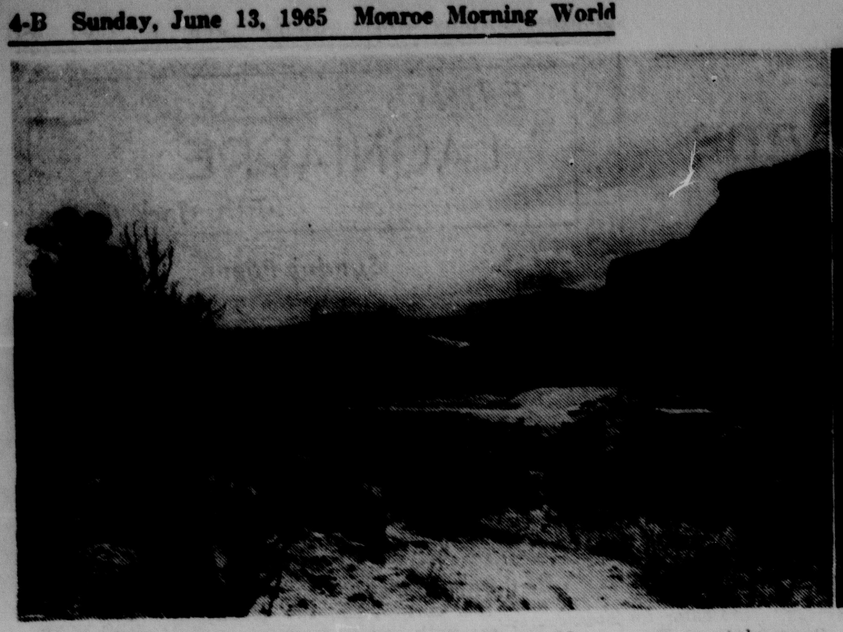

A lot has been said and written in the past few years about the apathy of people coming to the help of those in need.

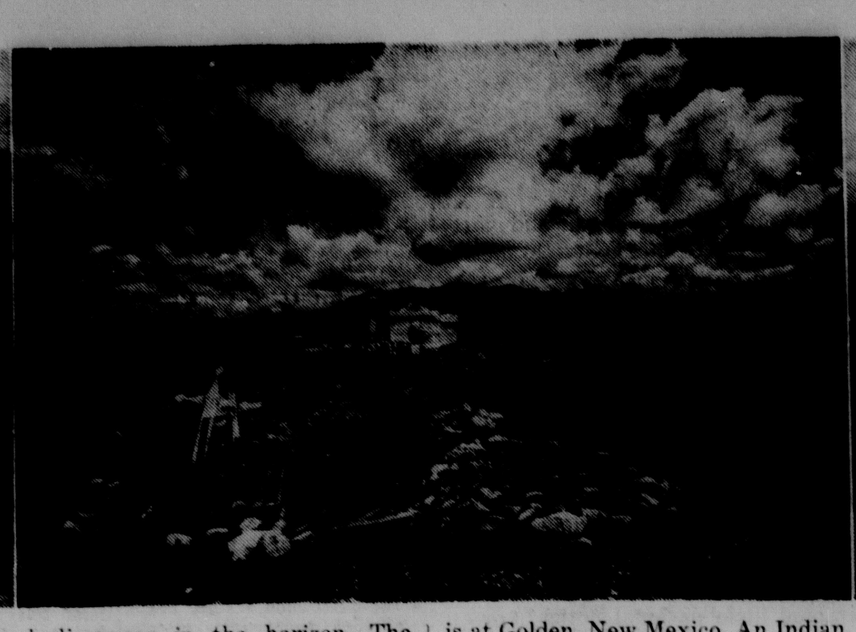

This story might illustrate the reason for that apathy better than you think.

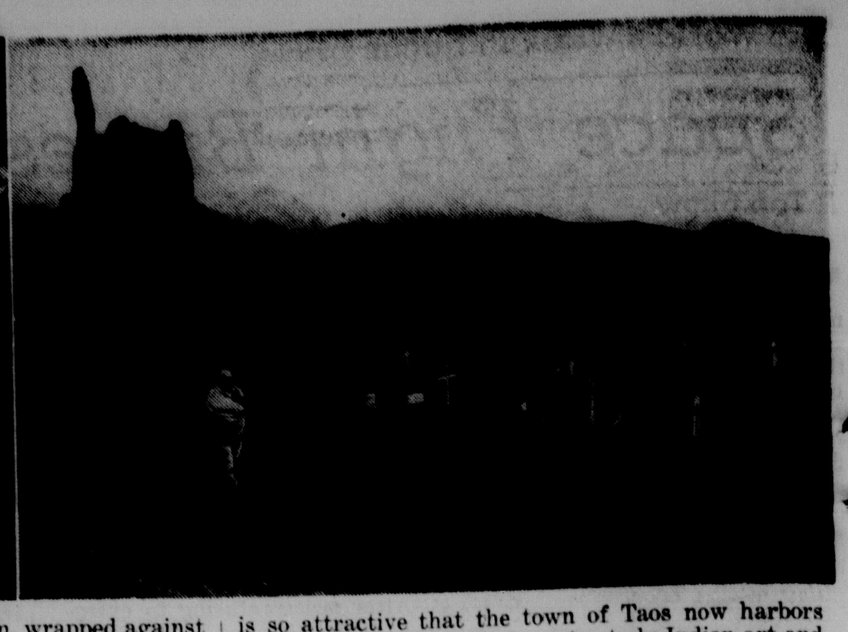

Out in Phoenix, Ariz., recently, an ambulance and the police hurried on an emergency call to find a couple sleeping in a car with the engine running, the windows closed and the doors locked. Fearing that the two might be poisoned by carbon monoxide gas fumes, the people tried to awaken them by banging on the car windows.

When that failed, they broke open a window and unlocked a door. The couple, appearing groggy, thanked them. Two hours later, the man presented the police a bill for $1.15 for the broken glass.

The police, after checking with the city attorney, paid it.

FOR THE BIG city citizen transplanted in New Mexico, it must be like opening the back door and suddenly there is no garbage can, no rusting child's swing, no view of the neighbor's garage, just land as it was made and as it still is. In New Mexico you can watch a road disappear in the horizon. The scene at left looks south on highway No. 84 at Carson National Forrest, approximately 60 miles north of Santa Fe. The adobe church and graveyard, center, is at Golden, New Mexico. An Indian, wrapped against the chill mountain morning at right trods past the ruins of an old church and graveyard next to the Taos pueblo in New Mexico. The area around Taos is so attractive that the town of Taos now harbors an art colony where artists go to study Indian art and attempt to capture some of the beauty in their own canvases and water colors. America The Beautiful: Southwest In Spotlight

Out in New Mexico and the great Southwest are mesas and sky, shattering beauty and silence. And also Indians, who drive sports cars and live in pueblos in sight of Los Alamos. Here, in the first of a series, is a visit to one of America's great natural beauty spots.

By SID MOODY

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Some run it up the flagpole types from Madison Ave. reviewed New Mexico's tourist advertising a while ago and said maybe not enough people were saluting because all the state ever advertised were its scenery and Indians.

"Wellllll," said a New Mexican who had spent much of his 71 years looking at scenery and Indians, "What else have we got?"

Not much water. "We have some bullfrogs," said another elderly New Mexican "who are five years old and still don't know how to swim."

Not too much industry — factory smoke is about as rare as Indian smoke signals. Indians, today, are in the phone book.

But New Mexico has one of the loveliest holes in the ground — Carlsbad Caverns — and the shinning dunes of White Sands which are perfect for moonlight romances.

New Mexico also has the space age. They assemble atomic warheads in Albquerque and reportedly hide them away in caves in the Sandia Mountains near town much as Indian cliff dwellers used to store themselves in canyon walls back when all they had to worry about was pulling the ladder up after them. The space age also occasionally distributes portions of rockets about the countryside when one strays off the reservation at the White Sands Missile Range, but no one has been hurt, probably because there are so few New Mexicans and so much New Mexico. More space than people, and that's what's nice about New Mexico.

Coming to New Mexico from the swollen geometry of Chicago, say, or New York — the car-crammed cloverleaves and the boxed rows of the suburbs — is like leaving the hurly-burly of the plaza and entering the cool canyon of a church. For New Mexico is a cathedral of nature, fashioned by wind, rain, river — and a hand that had ages of time and almost as much sky as there is.

It is a land of stark, ancient stone, of mesa and mountain, of almost limitless space in which the eye can follow a railroad track stretching off to the horizon. And beneath the huge dome of its sky there is something that is almost churchlike — silence. New Mexico is so quiet you can actually hear it.

Hear the scratching of the spiny ball of tumbleweed as the wind scurries it across the brown, rocky earth of the mission graveyard at Acoma; the creak of a door as it swings back and forth in the crumbling stilliness of a ghost town; the deep, almost imperceptible gushing of the Rio Grande, still heavy with drink from the mountain snows, as it begins its long journey across the parched scrubland to the distant sea; the silent tension of a horse grazing on the broad range as it lifts its blazed head at the sound of a jet cracking the sound barrier high in the heavens; the cop-chop of a hoe as an Indian woman cuts a small drainage ditch in the hard earth of the Taos Indian Pueblo; the far bark of a sheep dog worrying his flock in the northern uplands; the absolute stillness of a mission church when you can hear the crisp burning of a paper as a Franciscan monk pauses to inhale his cigarette.

These are sounds the supermarket society has not yet deafened in a land still lit more by sun and stars than neon. Walk off crosscountry and after a while you wonder whether you are the first person to stand there in 100 years — or since yesterday. There's no way of telling. No beer can. No foot print. Just brown land dotted with dusty green clumps of pinon trees, with red and yellow and white cliffs beyond, and beyond that snow-dusted, spruce-covered mountains and beyond that the blue skies, the white clouds sliding across. Just? It's more than enough.

You can hear New Mexico. You can see it. And you can meet it.

The people of New Mexico have left a triple brand on the state, its history, its culture, its atmosphere. First came the Indian (there are about 100,000 now, probably more than there ever have been). Then, in the early 16th century, back when Plymouth Rock was nothing more than a stone at the water's edge, came the Spanish. Finally in 1846, unbidden, came the U.S. Army and declared, again unbidden, that New Mexico was now a part of the United States.

That was that. The Indian went on reservations (eventually) or stayed in the same pueblos that had been recognized as his property by the Spanish kings. The Spanish became hyphenized Americans and both wondered what the Anglo, as the American is known in New Mexico, would do next. He brought railroads, cattle in droves, yankee efficiency that sometimes jarred the manana atmosphere of the Spanish, dug for coal, oil, potash, uranium, blew up the world's first atom bomb.

The resulting cultural layer cake, set in the dimension of the state's open spaces, presents a variety of history and atmosphere almost unique in America. (Arizona would demand equal time to that — or unequal time). You can stand among the box-like pueblos at Taos and suddenly the calendar, any calendar, is out of joint. Wrapped like a cocoon in his blanket, the Indian gazes politely but inscrutably at the stranger with the same eyes that have seen the conquistadores, the Christian missionaries, the Anglo cavalrymen and the tourists all come in their turn.

He has made necessary adjustments. Indians who dance at tribal ceremonies in their pueblos within sight of Los Alamos also work in the labs there. At Taos, Indians grumble about federal crop controls over land their ancestors farmed ages before the Department of Agriculture was even a twinkle in the founding fathers' eyes.

Fray Angelico Chavez, around Franciscan historian who, in his cowl and cap and black habit, looks as if he might have marched north into New Mexico in 1540 with the conquistadore, Coronado, says "besides being a tourist attraction the Indian's contribution to contemporary culture is the sun symbol on the state license plate."

The Indian is a tourist attraction. But when you see one with his braids and red head band walking out of a drug store to his car, it is a jolting reminder of just how old — and young — this country is. I saw an Indian leaving work at sundown to go home, not on a pony but in a small British sports car. Jerry Mirabel, an ancient Taos Pueblo Indian posing for photos in a store-bought blanket and braids, looks like he was old enough to have taken a shot or two at the cavalry, but he is proudest of once having had his portrait on the Santa Fe Railroad's calendar.

Yet in many ways the Indian hasn't leaped into the 16th century, much less the 20th. The tribes still have their dances where moccasin-clap feet tramp on the hard, ancient earth of their villages and drums beat. Some Indians still believe the dances will bring rain or make the corn grow, said Father Chavez. Others aren't sure and others simply enjoy the ceremony just as Anglo Elks and Lions enjoy theirs. When the parking lot in one pueblo was blacktopped, a faction of the tribe protested bittery because they said the dancers would no longer be able to absorb power from the naked earth. Taos Pueblo is split between the controlling elders who forbid electricity and running water, and the young who want them.

This isn't just stubborn obsolesence. Nature — all of it — is the basis of the Indian's religion. He reveres it. The water. The miracle of a seed of corn coming to tassel. The delicate spiral of an eagle high in the sky. The Indian has been absorbed into the big country and he has absorbed it into his way of life. To the city dweller hearing the bulldozers chewing the way for another shopping center, this is not an unadmirable achievement.

The Spanish tinge also persists. The Indians built with mud which the Spaniards adapted to the adobe style that endures today in old homes, new gas stations and even government buildings. They also brought that pleasant word with the pleasant connotations — manana.

There is more chamber of commerce than manana in Albuquerque, a town of 30,000 in 1940 and 10 times that now, much of the increment looking as if it had been transplanted from the Midwest as have many of the newcomers. But Santa Fe is more apt to relax and enjoy the view.

"We don't mind hard work and smoke," said an Albuquerque lawyer. "Your Santa Fean would rather carry a spear in their annual fiesta."

The Spanish have also given a lilt to the language. A dump truck in Spanish-American becomes troca dompera, a decided improvement. And there is history in their tongue. Gilberto Espinosa, Albuquerque lawyer and writer, points to a Spanish phrase meaning trouble — "Hay Moros en la costa" (There are Moors on the coast) — which dates back too the Spanish-Moorish battles.

In this crossbreeding of Spanish tinge, big sky, the Indian and Yankee drive there has been a mellowing, said one New Mexican, a tolerance, a friendliness. "This is big country," said Father Chavez. "People have had to be tolerant to survive."

"If some one painted himself blue and walked through the plaza," said one Santa Fean, "people would only say 'Well, I see old Bill decided to paint himself blue.' "

"There is a tremendous awareness of the effect of the good earth on our lives," said Omar Barker, poet, writer of Westerns who grew up on a ranch near Las Vegas, N.M. "The first thing we talk about when we meet is how the grass is or water or the sky."

"There's elbow room in New Mexico," said William Kelleher, an Albuquerque lawyer. "The New Mexican has a sense of freedom."

Leo Chavez, 49, spends his life in the saddle of a horse herding sheep. He lives by the sun, sleeps under the stars. Lonely? "You get used to it," he said.

You get more than that. It's like opening the back door and suddenly there is no garbage can, no rusting child's swing, no back view of the neighbor's garage. Just land as it was made and still is.

Several of us flew over much of northern New Mexico in a borrowed plane on a day of blue, blue skies and whipped cream clouds piling up over the mountains.

Over the Pecos wilderness, a vast government preserve of virgin timber, the green-black arrowheads of the spruce crowded up the slopes of the Sangre de Cristos Mountains. Ghostly spines of aspens not yet in leaf and tawny highland meadows soon to be emerald green dappled the mountains. Clustered around the perimeter of the range were tiny villages, mostly Spanish, where "brujos" or witches are sometimes believed to cast spells and a spirit called "llorana" is said to be heard sometimes weeping for her lost children.

The plane turned west. The land became browns and reds. It was veined like an old woman's hand with traces of dry arroyos. A tiny stream, coiled and as brown as an earthworm, was the only water in sight. From the desert floor rose the red and gray and ochre cliffs of the mesas, which ran off flat as a board, growing greener and greener as they gradually climbed to meet the sharpened points of the snow-covered Colorado Rockies 100 miles to the north.

There was no sign of human life other than thin lines of trails, some traces of wagon tracks of a century ago still aiming westward, like arrows.

Up ahead, the spire of Shiprock, a cathedral in stone, jutted more than 1,000 feet above the cocoa brown of the desert. We saw it 50 miles away. Beyond, into Arizona, the land became tortured with canyons of rusty red and orange, so bright in the sun they tinted the undersides of the clouds. On the Arizona-Utah border the plane banked like an eagle among the buttes of Monument Valley. Gnarled fingers of stone pointed hundreds of feet into the air, clutching at the sky. The squad, eroded buttes, some hundreds of yards across, cluttered the stony red desert like the ruins of some fabled city. I thought of a Navajo woman someone had told me worked a year and a half weaving a rug. But to make this? How much time? Perhaps all of it.

Time and space are the dimensions of the Southwest. A country weathered by time, set in a sweep of land and sky; it seeps over the mind with another kind of tolerance. The Indian must have learned it, too — an understanding of time, a restful feeling of peace with an endless nature that has always been and will still be, even when the hideous atomic artifacts of our time, burrowed in the ancient Sandia Mountains, are long forgotten.

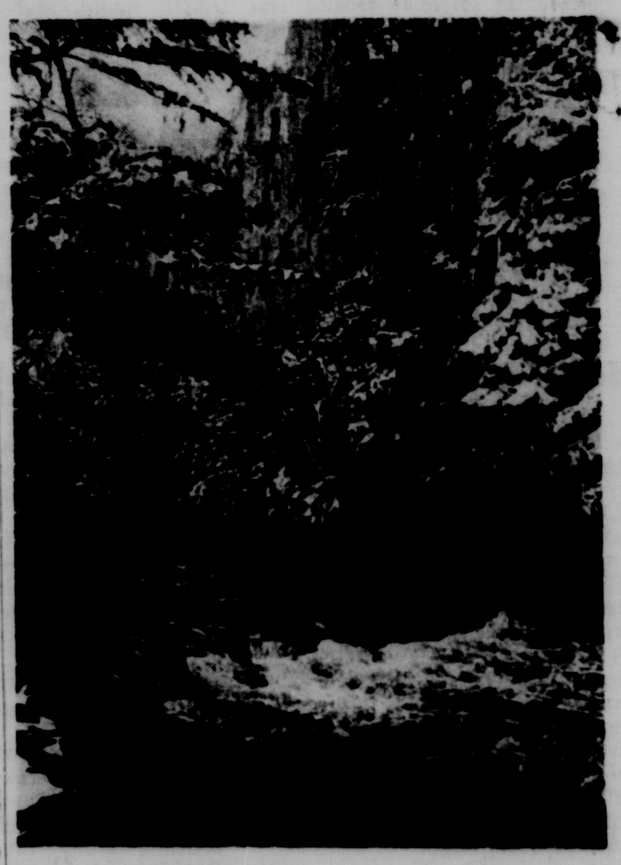

AN OLD WELL frames a stroller in the Sena business plaza in Santa Fe, N. M. Much of Spain still persists in New Mexico and especially in Santa Fe where the citizens have learned to relax and enjoy themselves. Tolerance and friendliness abound there. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Guide To Good Reading

Many New Books Now In Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

There are a number of new and interesting books available for the patrons of the Ouachita Parish Public Library this week. A new novel by Vina Delmar is always eagerly received. Her latest book is called "The Enchanted". It is a very strange and haunting book and the characters are ones you will not soon forget. "The Jealous God" by John Braine has a depressing background, but the theme of temptation versus contrition is handled well and the story reads with ease. This is Mr. Braine's fourth novel and his best one since "Room at the Top." Thomas Mack has written a delightful account of a Texas boyhood in "Gumbo." For those who want a pleasant picture of a way of life which is gone, this book will prove most interesting. "The Source" is the title of James Michener's latest novel. It is so concerned with religion, history and archaelogy, that it often forgets to be a novel. Michener writes well, but this book may have gone too far away from the conventional form. Read it for yourself and see what you think. "Valparaiso" by Nicholas Freeling, is the story of a man who was in love with his boat and whose greatest dream was to sail his boat to Valparaiso. This is a good action story and will find some devoted readers.

"Dog Years" by Gunter Grass is a most unusual book. In the guise of a novel we get a picture of Germany before, during and after the Second World War. This is not a book for light reading, but it is an important book and will repay the efforts of the serious reader. "Lady Wu" by Lin Yutang is a story of intrigue, death and tyranny in Ancient China. Three mysteries are offered for readers in this field "Curtain Call for Corpse" by Josephine Bell; "The Man Who Sold Death" by James Munro and "The Belting Inheritance" by Julian Symons. All of these are worth your reading time.

Many new books were added to the fine arts section last week. There is a growing interest in art among the people of our community and the library is purchasing as many books as possible to help foster this interest. "Sculpture for Beginners" written by Maria and Louis Di Valentin contains much excellent advice for the beginner in this field. A very lovely series of books called "Art of the Western World" has just been added to the Library collection. The volumes cover such subjects as "Prehistoric to Classical Painting"; "Early Christian to Medieval Painting," "English Painting," "French Painting," "Italian Painting," "Florentine Painting," "Venetian Painting," "Spanish Painting," "Flemish Painting" and "Dutch Painting." These books are very well done and the illustrations will prove to be quite valuable.

There are several new and important additions to the literature collection. "My War With The 20th Century" by Pierre Berton is an excellent book of essays on a variety of contemporary topics. "The Blue Hen's Chick" by A. B. Guthrie Jr. gives us a fascinating picture of a Montana boyhood. "Lyrics" by Sappho is an interesting collection of Greek poems. A prose version of "Geoffrey Chaucer's The Canterbury Tales" done by David Wright will be most useful to students. "True Tales of Bold Escapes" by Theodore Roscoe makes exciting and interesting reading.

The history collection has also received some very worthy additions. "The Larousse Encyclopedia of Modern History" is a fine and beautiful book. Every student of history should read this volume. A most useful gift to the library came from our local newspapers. It is called "The World in 1964" and was published by the Associated Press. We were given a copy for each library and this is a book which will be widely read and enjoyed. Another useful history book, because it covers a phase of history about which little has been written is "The Sea and The Sword: The Baltic — 1630-1945" written by Oliver Warner. It takes the history of that region from the days of the Hanseatic League to the present.

For travellers there are three interesting new titles: "The Companion Guide To London" written by David Piper would be a most useful book for anyone planning a trip to London. It should be read before the trip is made and it would be a wonderful book to take with you. "Brooklyn Bridge: Fact and Symbol" by Alan Trachtenberg gives an interesting history of this much talked about bridge. "Our National Parks in Color" by Devereux Butcher contains much valuable information about the many National parks in our country.

Remember the Main Library will be open this afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. and a visit to the library is an excellent way to spend a hot summer Sunday afternoon.

An Attack On Gloom, Defeatism

THE LOVE OF ANXIETY And Other Essays. By Charles Frankel. Harper. $4.50.

Even before you reach the title essay of this philosopher's collection, you have a pretty good impression of where he stands and which way he is looking — forward.

He begins with "Existentialism, or Cosmic Hypochondria." and methodically pulls part the gloomy worship of absurdity which is encompassed in that negative system.

Then in "The Anti-Intellectualism of the Intellectuals" he comes sturdily to the defense of reason. He examines, one by one, the theses of the defeatists, hand-wringers and esthetic mysticists who question all rational approaches to the world's problems, and he attacks mightily the philosophy of irrationalism.

By now this positivist and rationalist is warmed up for the essay which gives the volume its title. He finds that the love of anxiety, "One of the more curious phenomena of our time," has become a whole culture pattern, and he isn't too happy about it.

Frankel gets into the continuing argument that C. P. Snow raised under the theme of the Two Cultures, only this author brings it down to a matter of science and judgment. He concludes that a little healthy anxiety in a devotedly analytical mind is far better than the cosmic hypochondria of existentialism, and far easier to live with.

Frankel carefully avoids the professional jargon of philosophy, opening out his ideas for the general public. His book reads well, even though he does indulge in a little beard-combing in the latter part of the volume.

The major essays here are the work of a yea-sayer who has become pretty impatient with the nay-sayers of the world, and that makes them well worth reading.

Presidential Succession Is Given Impetus

Night of Camp David, by Fletcher Knebel (Harper & Row $4.95): Presidential disability and succession is examined in this novel with a setting of the highest governmental circles in Washington. The time is in the not-too-distant future. President Mark Hollenbach, a brilliant and popular Democrat, has firm control of his party and the presidency, but an election is coming up and Hollenbach must select a new running mate — the present vice president having been discredited politically. The President settles on a young senator, Jim MacVeagh, who is flattered and eager. But when MacVeagh witnesses the President in a temper tantrum and learns of his grandiose scheme for world federation, his suspicions are aroused that the President is not always rational. MacVeagh's secret probing leads into strange byways. The situation is further complicated by his affair with a beautiful secretary in the office of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The Secretary of Defense also is fearful of the President's condition, especially since he is one of three who could decide when to launch the nuclear warhead which might signal the end of civilization. At a secret meeting of high officials it is decided that the President must be removed before he can become a menace. The stage is set for Vice President O'Malley to take over when the President himself resolves the problem in a sudden dramatic act. It is a good fast-moving narrative on a topical subject enhanced by Knebel's knowledge of the ins and outs of Washington officialdom.

One Of Better Books About Dark Africa

"The African Nettle — Dilemmas of an Emerging Continent," edited by Frank S. Meyer (John Day $5): Books on Africa fall from the presses like leaves from a tree these days, but this is one of the better examples. It leaves behind the thesis — common to too many writers on Africa — that the newly emergent nations of the continent are a series of wonderlands led and populated by selfless public servants freeing themselves from the yoke of colonialism.

Instead, it dares to suggest that the colonialists might have made Africa what it is today. Meyer's contributors put forward the suggestion that without the western culture "imposed" on them by their colonial masters, the Africans of today might not be fit to take their place in the modern world.

Meyer is an American historian educated at Princeton and Oxford. His contributors range through the political spectrum from K. A. Busia, the former leader of the opposition in Ghana who now is in political exile in London, to Sir Roy Welensky, whose political world collapsed around him when Britain dissolved the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland.

Welensky sounds the only naive note in the book with an essay warning of the "communist" takeover in Africa.

Joys Of Escape From The City

THE HOUSE IN THE COUNTRY. By Nan Fairbrother. Knopf. $5.95.

Those inveterate gardeners and country dwellers, the English — perhaps for the simple reason that they have been at it so long — maintain a high level of literate comment on the joys of escaping from the city into the greenside.

Few Americans — the late Richardson Wright was one — can equal their sensitive explorations of the simple hearthside life, and Miss Fairbrother follows well in the English tradition.

In two respects, her story is a little different from many of the English idylls. She retained a love for London, and was glad to get into the city's rhythm during the winter. And instead of describing the rejuvenation of an ancient cottage, she relates the story of how a brand new house was conceived and built.

Her husband was a London physician, and their two young boys were wrapped up in their schools. But feeling the future's pull because now they were forty-ish, they wanted a country refuge for their current summers and their eventual retirement.

First there was a search for a site, with what we would call commuting problems. Within the rigid English codes for the land (far stiffer than our hodge-podge zoning) there had to be a right place with a view, with protected surroundings. Then the careful budgeting of space and materials, the fight to get the roof tiles in the right color, the compromises with the builders (in England, they seem far more sympathetic).

In America, our equivalent would be a New Yorker's exodus to Connecticut or the Hudson River country, of a Clevelander's search for green roots in the valley of the Chagrin River.

It's a pleasant, well-delineated story of human nest-building in these modern days of seeking the gentler life.

Author's Defects Cloud 'Duchess'

THE LAST GRAND DUCHESS. By Ian Vorres. Scribners. $5.95.

Ever since the July night in 1918 when a savage band of Bolsheviks shot and bayoneted the Tsar of All the Russias and his wife and children, authors have found a ready market for books about the doomed Romanovs and the revolution that toppled their empire.

This 260-page book, based largely on conversations with the Tsar's sister, Grand Duchess Olga Alexandrova should prove a valuable addition to the lore on the Romanovs, despite some defects.

The grand duchess, in agreeing to allow Vorres to write her memoirs, apparently decided to use the book as a means of setting the record straight on a good many things concerned with the Russian royal family, and she makes some interesting points.

Her recollections of the family life of the Romanovs — from the simple habits of her father to the lavish social whirl which her mother loved — give a vivid insight into the complexities of the dynasty which ruled Russia for three hundred years.

She also has some sharp observations about Russian society and the ways in which its decadence caused the nation's people to lose much of the love and trust that they once reposed in their rulers. In this regard, her own relatives come in for some of the heaviest criticism.

Two legends which she is particularly intent on wiping out are the reputed influence of Rasputin over the Tsar and the alleged survival of Grand Duchess Anastasia, one of the Tsar's three daughters.

Of her meeting with Anna Anderson, perhaps the most famous of the women who have claimed to be the Grand Duchess Anastasia, Grand Duchess Olga recalled, "I had left Denmark (her first home in exile) with something of a hope in my heart. I left Berlin with all hope extinguished."

Rasputin, the Grand Duchess says, "was neither saint nor devil . . . he remained exactly what he was — a peasant with a profound faith in God and a gift of healing."

The principal virtues of the book are the aforementionet glimpses into the personal lives of the Romanovs, the views of the Grand Duchess on some of the legends which developed before and after the Ekaterinberg massacre and the picture of Grand Duchess Olga herself.

Comic Novel About Escape Artist Plight

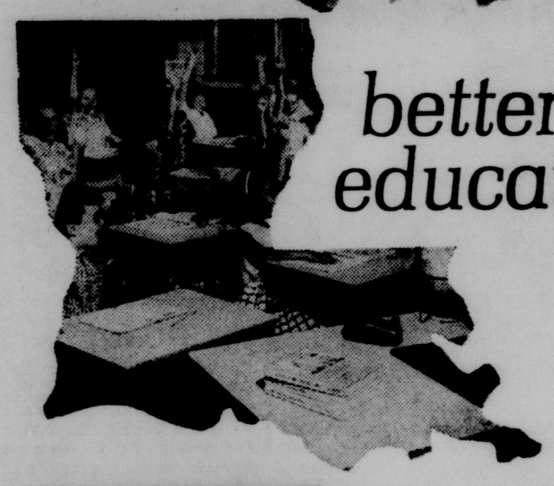

The Escape Artist, by David Wagoner (Farrar, Straus & Giroux 244 $4.95): Wagoner's fourth novel is a surrealistic success story featuring a latterday Dick Whittington who depends on pluck and luck to make his way — wherever a lock-pick won't suffice.

We meet Wagoner's precocious 16-year-old hero, Danny Masters, as he arrives in the big city to test the stage magic that he has been practicing in front of his mirror.

Danny is not modest. "I can do anything . . ." he tells anyone who will listen. "I can go anywhere and get out of anything. I can open and shut anything. And I'm learning how to do all the rest."

It would take a professional locksmith to judge the validity of Danny's various shifts, but possible or not they convey an air of fundamental reality which contrasts with the basic fantasy of the story.

"SHOW ME A COIN," is the caption of this scene from the full-color two-hour motion picture, "Day of Triumph," which will be shown at 6:45 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday at Neville High Auditorium under sponsorship of the Monroe Altrusa Club. Mrs. Margarite Meeks, club president, said the public will have an opportunity to see what she described as "The only major film production of the life of Christ that's Scripture true." Many events such as the Sermon on the Mount, the Last Supper, the conversion of Mary Magdalene, the raising of Lazarus, the Lord's Prayer, and the Crucifixion and Resurrection, are depicted in the film.

STUDENTS OF the St. Christopher Day School, Grace Episcopal Church, participated in the filming of the story of the Baby Moses recently. The placing of the baby in a basket which was floated in the River Nile was depicted in a special scene taken on the bank of Bayou DeSiard. The film will be used by the Rev. William E. Baldridge during a month-long tour of Episcopal missions in Japan later this summer. Pictured are Marion Harris, Meredith Mattison, Lisa Files and Kathryn McArthur, along with the Rev. Baldridge. Agreement Areas Goal Of Church

The Christian Science Board of Directors recently urged its church members to find the "areas of agreement" which exist with other denominations — "rather than think of ourselves as entirely different or exclusive."

From the church's earliest beginnings, said the directors, it has been deeply involved in "the search for the real source of unity."

The message was presented before several thousand members at the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"On the basis of its spirituality Christian Science has much in common with other denominations," the message noted.

"To every honest adherent of any God-centered faith sincerely working to uplift and unify the human race, we offer our fellowship and support . . . .

Confrontation

"Today we are confronted with one of history's deepest, most divisive social upheavals," the directors continued.

"Marking this upheaval is the churning drive of the individual to find the real meaning of life and to establish his legitimate place and identity in an increasingly complex and impersonal society.

"Social and governmental organizations as such do not make the necessary connection with the individual or enable him to meet his real needs. Helpful and important as these efforts are, they are not enough. They do not get at the root of the trouble," said the directors.

"People everywhere are crying out for healing — healing in its larger and broader sense: the overcoming of sin and fear, of ignorance and sorrow. . . .

"Sooner or later both the individual and society must become willing to face up to the stark and tragic results of rooting their faith in the disappointing promises of matter." This reliance on matter, stated the message, not only "cuts men off from God," but "pulls them down and pulls them apart."

The working basis of Christian Science, the message stated, is that "the understanding of God as divine Love, all-inclusive Spirit, is the one force that can truly hold men together in understanding and harmony."

World Evangelism

Jesus "was never exclusive," the message noted; "he preached world evangelism . . . . His life of love drew the multitudes to him and established the basis for Christianity — the religion of love, the religion capable of uniting all peoples of all times."

The annual election of a new church president by the directors was also announced at the meeting. Mrs. Frances S. Wells, C.S.B., of San Antonio, Texas, took over as presiding officer from the retiring president, Edward Froderman of Chicago, Ill. Both of them also hold positions on the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mrs. Wells, a graduate of Briarcliff College, N.Y., has been an active teacher and practitioner of Christian Science in San Antonio for several years.

In her remarks to the meeting, Mrs. Wells emphasized that "divine Love knows no race or creed."

Observing that resistance to Christian ideals seems "rampant in the thoughts of men," she then added: "On the other hand, the thought of mankind has never been so roused, the desire to help so active.

"Jesus prophesied disturbed world conditions," she noted. He "foresaw the fermentation which would take place in mortal thought.

Love, Understanding

"When we learn to love and understand one another as God's perfect ideas, we shall live peaceably."

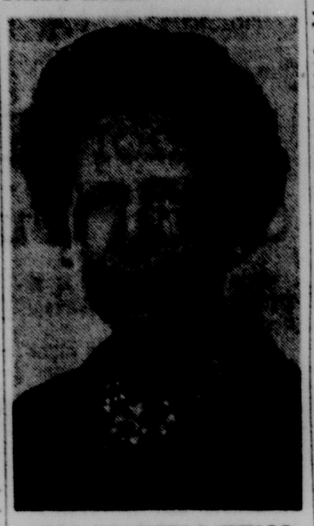

In reports to the meeting by the managers of various church departments, it was disclosed that the number of Christian Science branch churches had reached the 3,300 mark with recent additions in Argentina, The Netherlands, New Zealand, and, for the first time, in Guatemala and Korea.

More church members began devoting their lives to the Christian Science healing ministry, with official recognition granted to individuals in 34 states of the United States and 10 other countries, including India, Indonesia, Uruguay, and the Republic of South Africa.

New applications for church membership were reported to be on the increase in a number of countries, particularly the Congo, Nigeria, Zambia, East Germany, Poland, South India, Cuba, and various other sections of Asia and Latin America.

A Norwegian edition of the Christian Science textbook — "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy — was added this year to the denomination's growing body of translated literature.

Several other reports at the meeting indicated that the church is continuing to broaden its communications effort through improvements in its public lectures, weekly radio series, New York World's Fair Pavilion, and various publications, including The Christian Science Monitor.

Rare Painting Of Pope John Is Preserved

WHITEFISH BAY, Wisc. (UPI) — Standing in a paint tube - littered ballroom of a replica of an Italian castle is the world's only painting of the late Pope John XXIII in his bishop's robes.

The life - size oil painting, done in 1929, shows Archbishop Angelo Rancalli when he was Papal nuncio to Bulgaria — a lonely but ever buoyant Roman Catholic leader in a country almost entirely Eastern Orthodox in faith.

Artst Kyril Vassilev completed the canvas when he was only 21 years old, but already court painter for King Boris III of Bulgaria in Sofia. Vassilev began painting at the age of three, had his first show at six, and at 14 was an established artist.

Similarity

Standing before the painting three and a half decades later, the onlooker is struck by the similarity of pose and demeanor of the Archibishop then and as he appears in photographs taken when he became Pope.

It is this "look of a Pope" of which Vassilev is proudest.

The years in Bulgaria were trying ones for the archbishop, cut off almost entirely from followers of his faith. He notes in his published diary during that time:

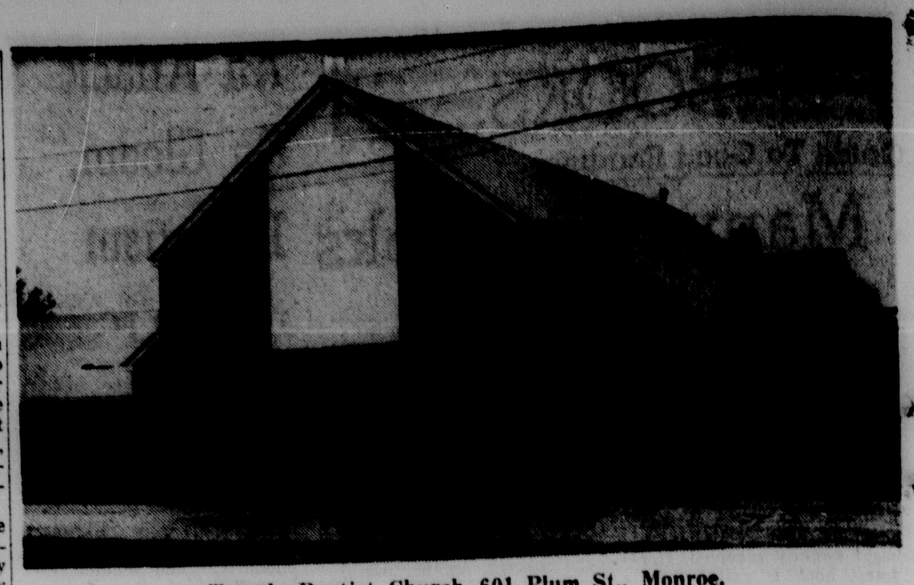

"My prolonged mission as Papal representative in this country often causes me acute and intimate suffering, but I try not to show this. I bear, and will bear, everything willingly, even joyfully, for the love of Jesus."

Despite the archbishop's then trying position, "I saw him as Pope," Vassilev said, standing next to the portrait and holding the same purple cap the archbishop wore during the sittings.

Wanted Motto

The one thing on which the archbishop insisted was that his episcopal motto, Obedientia et Pax (obedience and peace) be shown. He provided a tooled leather family coat of arms which Vassilev painted in the upper left corner of the portrait, with the motto.

Much of the painting was done at the archbishop's Sofia home, where he frequently answered the door himself. Vassilev recalled that he always could hear the radio playing spritely music from a local station when he knocked and that, immediately on the knock, the radio would be switched to a Rome station. When the archbishop saw that it was only his young friend, he would go directly back and switch on the local station again.

Temple Baptist Church, 601 Plum St., Monroe.

Temple Baptist Church's 19th Anniversary Near

A small group of people gathered at the Barkdull Faulk School on Lee Avenue, Sunday, June 19, 1946 and organized the Temple Baptist Church with 30 charter members. The Rev. E. L. Averette led in this organization and served the church as pastor during its first two years.

The church secured two lots at the corner of Plum and South First St., and erected the first building. During the little more than two years of Rev. Averette's pastorate the church experienced growth in all departments. The Rev. Jerry Autrey succeeded him and served for a little more than a year and was followed by Dr. Alfred Schwab for about a year.

The Rev. Leon Ivey, the present pastor, came to the church the first of January, 1952, and has served since that time. During his pastorate the church has purchased a parsonage at 703 South 3rd St., and also purchased the two lots adjoining to the church property.

Steady Growth

The church has experienced a steady growth and now has more than 650 members on its roll. It has engaged in five different building programs, the last completed a little over two years ago when the old buildings were completely renovated and air-conditioned and central heat installed in all units. Also at this time a new education building housing four departments was constructed. Previous to the last building program the members had done all the work.

Rev. Ivey is married, and has one daughter, Miss Ann Elizabeth Ivey, a teacher in the parish school system at Lake Charles. He was born at Pickering in Vernon Parish, attended Mississippi College, Centenary College, Louisiana College, New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth.

He started in the ministry in 1935 at Campti, and while in school also pastored at Dubberly and Houghton. After school days he became associate pastor of Highland Baptist Church in Shreveport. He later pastored at the First Baptist Church in Lecompte, and held pastorates at Logansport and Chatham before coming to his present assignment.

Sunday School Work

The church carries on a complete program of Sunday School work under Phillip Kulcke, superintendent, with more than 600 enrolled in this program, for all age groups. Alton Cooper serves as director of the Training Union, with 250 enrolled, and also serves as chairman of the deacons.

Mrs. Rhoda Wesson serves as president of the Woman's Missionary Union. Mrs. Phillip Kulcke heads up the music program of the church which is a very valuable part of its program. A campaign is now on to secure an organ for the church music program. Mrs. Gussie Duty serves as the nursery worker and a modern nursery is open for all services of the church.

Anniversary

Sunday, June 20, the church will observe its 19th birthday. A campaign is on to secure attendance of all members of the church and Sunday school for the occasion. Dinner will be served at the noon hour.

The church cooperates with the Ouachita Parish Baptist Association, the Louisiana Baptist Convention and the Southern Baptist Convention. A full program of worship, evangelism, education and ministering is carried on by a large group of volunteer workers. The pastor, janitor and nursery worker are the only paid members of the staff.

The church's schedule of services includes, Sunday, Bible school 9:45 a.m., worship service 11 a.m., Training Union 6:30 p.m., worship service 7:30 p.m., and Wednesday, prayer services at 7:30 p.m.

News Briefs In Religion

STOCKHOLM (AP) — A student association is campaigning for separation of the Church of Sweden from the government, maintaining that it is wrong for a state to be "allied with a confession" and for a church to be "subordinate to the state." In Finland, an atheist free-thinkers group also is seeking to have church and state separated.

Bell Tower Crumbling

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — The famed 15th Century Bell Harry Tower of Canterbury Cathedral is crumbling away after five centuries of the harsh English climate.

Experts say the sensitive stone from Caen in Normandy which was used for main fabric has seriously eroded. Each damaged stone must be removed and replaced during restoration.

Cost of the job, which may take seven years, is set at 45,000 pounds ($126,000). The Friends of Canterbury Cathedral have underwritten 15,000 pounds ($42,000) of that total and have launched an appeal for more.

Meanwhile, four more of the 13th Century cloister bays have been restored and will be dedicated at the Friends of the Cathedral's festival day June 19. One of the bays, paid for by American funds under the Margaret Babington Memorial Fund, will be unveiled by U.S. Ambassador David Bruce.

Religion Taken To Night Realms

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a dimly lit New York night spot, a woman eyed the man in a clerical collar and remarked cynically, "Why do you wear that thing? It bugs me."

The clergyman was the Rev. Dr. John G. Gensel, the city's "Jazz Pastor," and the effect of his presence on the woman was just the sort of reaction he seeks to evoke. As he put it, "She needs to be bugged."

It is generally assumed that a wide gap exists between the religious realm and the night-life circuit, but increasing church efforts are going on to bridge it.

For seven years, Dr. Gensel, 48, a Manhattan pastor, has spent his spare evenings mingling and counseling with inhabitants of the nocturnal jazz world. This year, he began working at it full time.

Appointed

The Missions Board of the Lutheran Church in America appointed him minister to New York's night-living jazz community. The job has turned him mostly into a "night person," too. And clearly, he's no square.

As he sees it, "the church must get into the world" with its truth, rather than waiting on the sidelines where many never encounter it.

His work symbolizes a new and growing array of innovations and experiments to project Christianity into cultural areas which it has customarily ignored.

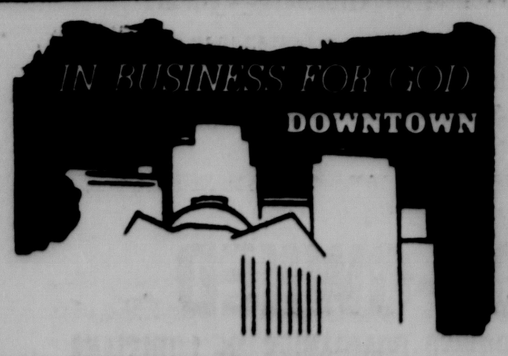

This has given birth to many new specialized forms of ministry — far beyond the usual bounds of parish pulpit — among dockworkers, in industries, prisons and among special groups.

A dramatic sector of the new front is in the night clubs, taverns, folk singing spots and similar places.

On college campuses, a vital spiritual ministry is developing through night time "coffee houses," says the Rev. Dr. Henry Hetland, executive secretary of the National Lutheran Council's division of college and university work.

REPENTENCE
Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.-Luke 13:5

Repentance seems to be a lost word in our preaching today, though it was a central thought in the early church.

It is always easy to acknowledge and ask forgiveness for corporate sins, for this often involves no more than judging our brothers. But to acknowledge personal sins and ask forgiveness for them is another matter.

Our text states, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." So repentance involves man's eternal destiny. It looks to Jesus as the source of life.

Repentance is a change of mind, or to have another mind, in regard to sin. This has many sides.

Light of Revelation

Repentance is to see ourselves in the light of God's revelation and have the experience of Job when he said, "I had heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now my eyes see thee; therefore I despise myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Pride is one of the great sins the Bible singles out for God's displeasure and this is because pride is the failure of man to rightly evaluate himself by God's standards.

God's Word reveals God's righteousness and in repentance we admit our sins in the light of his righteousness. It is an admission of our transgressions of God's holy laws. All of us stand guilty before the courts of heaven, "for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

Salvation

Repentance comes as a result of Godly sorrow. "For Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation, but the sorrow of the world worketh death." II Cor. 7:10. What a difference! One results in salvation, the other in death.

This is sorrow for having come short of God's glory and for wallowing in the mire of sin. It is an acknowledging of the vast chasm between the Holy God and one's sinful self. Repentance stirs the heart and mind to the point where we admit the need for outside help and causes us to throw ourselves on the mercy of God.

Its Opposite

Repentance has its opposite—the unrepentant heart. This is an unwillingness to repent and is an offense against God and insures disaster. "Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God." Rom. 2:4, 5.

Lack of repentance is more than a state of mind; it is resistance to revealed truth, to the love and mercy of God, and a rejection of the warning so clearly given.

At the Cross we see God's estimate of sin. There we find offered full atonement for all who will repent and believe.

One work of the Holy Spirit that insures man's acceptance is "repentance to God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." This is our hope.

Supreme Court Moderate Trend?

Many Decisions In Session Just Over Still Amazing

By PAUL M. YOST

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court showed signs of struggling toward a more moderate ground in its decisions in the term just ended, but some liberal justices fought the trend with increasing vigor.

The fight went on over small points in many issues put before the tribunal, resulting in an avalanche of words in dissenting opinions.

And there was an outpouring of concurring opinions that agreed with the court's ultimate decisions, but gave lengthy explanations of disagreements on how the decisions were reached.

An illustration occurred on the court's term-ending day last Monday. A surprising total of 22 opinions were read in the decision of six major cases. The 22 opinions totaled about 88,800 words.

An example of the court's move toward the moderate was its refusal the same day to apply retroactively a 1961 decision that evidence seized in violation of the federal constitution may not be used in state trials.

Predictions were made that if the old decision were made retroactive, jail doors would have to be opened for hundreds of convicted persons. Justice Hugo L. Black, declaring the refusal "certainly offends my sense of justice," wrote a 4,000 word dissenting opinion.

Surprising

Most surprising of the court's liberal decisions of the term was its declaration that the 1964 Civil Rights Act wiped out pending state prosecutions of sit-in demonstrators who were arrested before the act was passed as they worked peacefully to desegregate business places.

Black, for years regarded as leader of the court's liberal bloc, balked at this ruling. In what was seen by some observers as his swing toward moderation, he delivered an abrasive dissenting opinion that said:

"The idea that Congress has power to accomplish such a result has no precedent, as far as I know, in the nearly 200 years that Congress has been in existence."

Black thus deserted the usual liberal bloc of Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr. and Arthur J. Goldberg. Justice Tom C. Clark wrote the majority 5-4 opinion, which all the liberals except Black joined. Other dissenters, each with a separate opinion, were Justices John M. Harlan, Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

About five months after the sit-in ruling there came another illustration of the trend toward moderation. The court let stand unchanged disorderly conduct convictions of four CORE pickets arrested in 1959 while protesting Negro exclusion for a park near Baltimore.

No explanation of the court's refusal to review the case was given. But Warren in a dissenting opinion said, "clearly, nothing petitioners (the pickets) did prior to being placed under arrest could be called disorderly conduct. Their only 'sins' to that point were being Negro or being in the company of Negroes, and politely refusing to leave the park." Douglas said he agreed with Warren. The seven other justices apparently disagreed with these two.

The move toward a more moderate ground is believed by some to have resulted from criticisms of the tribunal's fast-moving actions in recent years on issues involving race, religion and legislative reapportionment.

For the term just ended there could be cited the court's refusals to review decisions that allowed New York City's Board of Education to promote racial balance in zoning a new school, and that allowed use of the words "under God" in the pledge of allegiance by pupils.

There were also decisions that racial demonstrators must stop short of violence; that a Negro was not entitled to have the racial makeup of his community mirrored in the jury that convicted him of rape of a young white girl; that Negroes cannot be intentionally included or excluded from juries; that persons who object to war because of sincere religious belief can qualify for draft exemption without professing a belief in a supreme being.

On the other hand, the court struck down a Florida law punishing cohabitation between whites and Negroes; voided Virginia laws that required state officials to keep separate their voting, property and tax records for whites and Negroes.

In decisions of wide public interest, the court held Connecticut's anti-birth control law unconstitutional; ruled television must be barred from "notorious" trials; held the public was deceived by television commercials that used a faked "sandpaper" test of a shaving cream; decided states may censor movies if their procedure provides for prompt, final review of the character of the films.

In the birth control case, Black again moved toward the more conservative view in a dissenting opinion he read with apparent deep feeling. He protested giving judges the power to void laws "on the basis of their own appraisal of what laws are unwise or unnecessary."

Black said he doubted that the writers of the Constitution had intended the Supreme Court to have "such awsome powers." He called the majority decision a shocking doctrine that would "make of this court's members a day-to-day constitutional convention." The court should not sit as a supervisory agency, he asserted.

A law authorizing the Postoffice Department to hold up Communist mail was struck down as an infringement on the right of free expression. Another law barring members of the Communist party from serving as union officials was ruled unconstitutional. But the right of the State Department to deny Americans permission to travel to Cuba was upheld.

Business Field

A major decision in the labor-business field was that an employer has a right to go out of business totally to avoid dealing with a union, but not partially if the intent is to block unionization at his other plants.

The justices also held that a temporary lockout of employes to bring economic pressure on them, after an impasse has been reached in collective bargaining, does not violate federal labor law; also, management must bargain with labor before contracting out work previously performed by members of an existing bargaining unit.

The court held a union forfeits its exemption from antitrust law if it agrees with one set of employers to impose a certain wage scale on other bargaining units. It held that unions can increase dues by convention action at which delegates' votes are weighed according to the number of members in the local unions they represent.

The court disposed of 2,180 cases during the 1964-65 term, leaving 482 cases on the docket for the start of the new term next Oct. 4. A total of 225 written opinions was handed down in disposing of the 2,180 appeals.

Indicating the increased work load on the court, it is interesting to note that in the term that ended June, 7, 1954, only 1,452 cases were docketed.

Murder Charge Filed In Area Shotgun Death

WINNFIELD (Special) — J. C. Wright, 35, of the Pleasant Hill community near here, has been charged with murder in the shotgun death of James A. Long., 34.

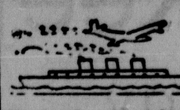

Winn Parish Sheriff R. S. Jordan said the shooting occurred about 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Wright's home also in Pleasant Hill, which is in Ward 2 of Winn Parish.

The sheriff said the coroner's inquest Friday ruled death as the result of a shotgun blast.

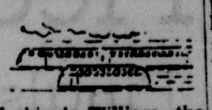

Wright is being held in the Winn Parish jail pending the completion of the investigation by the District Attorney and sheriff's deputies.

The sheriff said Long, the father of two sons, had filed as a congressional candidate in 1962, but later withdrew from the race.

Away From Home

Richard Enwright

England, our island home,
Land of the Free —

Far below, shrouded in mists, is the channel. At 21,000 feet, the sun is out and the sky is filled with white, puffy clouds. Through the picture - like windows of the big BEA DeHavilland, one sees a panorama of marching figures; and looking carefully at the clouds, there seem to be faces. Off to the right, on the far horizon, is an interesting formation. It seems almost a Viking ship which leads through a stormy sea, and in the bow is a helmeted figure. Above his head, there fly grey petrels, and Valkyries must guide his way to the pleasant island just over the far horizon. Soon his Viking ships will touch the Briton shore.

England, unconquered yet,
Over land and sea—

Beneath the continuing mists must be the fabled white limestone cliffs of the Dover coast. Time falls away again, and sailing ships seem to appear on the silver surface of the mist. Filled to the gunwales they are, with armed warriors; and in the lead ship is William, the Norman. Soon his army will land and meet Harold Godwinson at Senlac Hill near the little town of Hastings in a battle which changed the course of history. Yet, as conquerors came and went through the years, all became a part of the beautiful, stalwart island which now unfolds below. William was the last in the historical parade — Romans, Vikings, Saxons, Jutes, and Normans — a combination of people which after many years was to found a mighty empire and leave an indelible imprint on the face of time and the tides of men and history.

Lord of the heavens above,
Answer our prayer —

Clouds rush by now, and vapor trails seem to follow six little fighter planes. Smiling lads in blue, their caps at jaunty angles, fly magically by. The spirit of Richard Hillary and the RAF shines in the golden rays of the sun. Backs against the wall and fighting for their island home, the valiant few stood off and whipped to a frazzle a Fuhrer gone mad. It was England, our island home, which never gave up; and fighting on alone, desperate but with a great love of home, hearth, and country lane, sounded the clarion call to victory.

God, keep Britannia's sons,
Lords of the Air.

England, our island home. London is a panorama of sights and wonders for many Americans who feel a deep relationship with this beautiful country. Visitors need very much, several weeks in England. It's almost like coming home; and the little hotel in Sussex Gardens off Edgeware Road, not too far from beautiful Hyde Park, is a friendly headquarters for Americans who come to relive the past and become a part of the vibrant British present. Almost a necessity is the guided trip around London on the top of a big red double decked city bus. Starting at Victoria Station, newcomers will, in the short space of an hour or so, become intimately acquainted with scenes which seem to jump from the pages of history.

To see London and England on foot, in the underground, or on a bus is to become a part of the people and the country. Services at St. Paul's on Sunday and later, lunch at the Cheshire Cheese, and it is realized that British vacations cost a fraction of their American counterparts. The Tower-History and the Beefeaters. Mighty and permanent Buckingham with the changing of an eternal guard. Beautiful Hyde Park and the Thames. Walks on the Embankment and possibly a stroll on the decks of the ship "Discovery," and one knows there must surely always be an England.

Americans, as you walk the streets of London, stroll the byways of the countryside, or perhaps ride along a quiet country lane, look over your shoulder, at your side, and in front of you; and there before you, all around you, is the face of England, our island home; and because of it — what it was and what it is — there is also our America.

Willie Mays Blasts Number 20 In Win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Mays hit a two-run homer in the first inning — his 20th of the season — leading the San Francisco Giants to a 4-0 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday and ending the Pirates winning streak at seven.

Mays slammed his third homer in four games over the left field scoreboard after Jim Hart singled off losing pitcher Bob Friend.

Bob Shaw got the victory for a 6-3 record with relief help from Bill Henry and Frank Linzy. The trio combined to shut out the Pirates on seven hits.

Shaw was taken out in the seventh inning after Bill Mazeroski and Gene Alley both singled. Henry came on and got Jerry Lynch on a fly out, then Linzy came in and got Gene Freese to hit into a double play.

The Giants had scored in the top half of the seventh, making it 3-0, when Hal Lanier doubled and scored on a single by Dick Bertell as Roberto Clemente bobbled the ball.

San Francisco wrapped up the scoring in the eighth on singles by Hart, Willie Covey and Matty Alou.

Friend, losing his fifth game in eight decisions, pitched a strong game before he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

The Pirates mounted a couple of early threats against Shaw but each time failed to score.

Picard Keeps Lead, Cole Faulters

Finals Set Today In Amateur Meet

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Shirley Picard, bothered by erratic irons, fired a 76 Saturday but maintained a six-stroke lead in the Louisiana State Amateur Golf Championship.

Picard, a Lafayette city detective, fired a 40-36-76 over the 6,975 - yard East Ridge Country Club Course. His three-round total of 215 was six strokes ahead of John Allen Martin of Lafayette and Bill Ramsey of Shreveport.

Martin, a cousin to Picard, carded the best round of the day with his one over par 71.

Ramsey, a husky Shreveport golfer, drew within two shots of Picard during his round. He fell back when he had a triple bogie on the 13th hole.

"My iron game was gone and my tee shots couldn't seem to hit the greens," Picard said after his round.

The final round will be played today when match play flights will also head into championships.

Picard sank a 10-foot putt for a birdie at the second hole, a par five which caters to his long game. However he slipped to bogies on the next two holes and finished his nine with two bogies sandwiched around his double - bogey at the eighth.

At this point he was ahead of Ramsey by only two shots. Shirley righted himself on the 11th hole where he sent a seven - iron within two-and-a-half feet of the cup for a birdie, but he missed the 13th green to the left and three-putted 14h for bogies.

Shirley birdied the 15th and was to bogey the 17th on his way in.

Martin managed his fine round despite four three - putt greens. "I hit my irons superbly," said the 35-year-old Eastern Airlines employee. "I could have been two or three under par if I could have putted."

One of Martin's three - putt greens came at the 16th where lightning and showers began. "I am definitely afraid of lightning and I was standing over my putt when one bolt flashed. I froze up, but instead of stepping back I hit it anyway — and missed."

Three putt greens at the second and sixth gave Martin his other bogies. He hit a seven iron within six inches of the hole at the fifth hole and another lucky shot dropped three feet at the 13th, setting up birdies.

Ramsey's tour was "all wrapped around the 13th hole," according to the former team captain of the University of Michigan.

"My driver got me into trouble today and at the eighth and 11th holes I had to just chip the ball back into the fairway after hooking into the rough." Both times he settled for bogies.

At the 13th, Ramsey hit into the woods and down the hill at the right of the fairway. His try to get out of the woods banged into the bank about 20 feet in front of him and his third stroke was almost a repeat. Four strokes later he finally finished the hole but his momentum was lost.

"I just let two or three shots stray and that cost me," said Clayton Cole of Monroe, who had three penalty shots of the day. The defending champion shot a 40 - 38 — 78 for a 224 total. He was out of bounds at the 12th hole and got a six and he went into a canal at the third hole and got another penalty stroke.

"I chose bad clubs on a couple of occasions too," he said.

Lock's Homer Means Defeat For White Sox

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don Lock's grand slam homer backed Bennie Daniels' five-hit pitching as the Washington Senators defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-1 Saturday.

Lock's grand slam, into the Senators' bullpen, climaxed a five-run third inning off loser Joe Horlen. The homer came after Ed Brinkman's single, Joe Cunningham's run-scoring double and walks to Ken McMullen and Frank Howard.

Daniels blanked the White Sox on three hits until the ninth, when a walk, Floyd Robinson's second single and another by Pete Ward ended the Washington right-hander's shutout bid.

Daniels, who last year helped knock the White Sox out of the pennant race by blanking them twice in September, held them to one hit in eight innings the only other time he faced them this year.

McMullen extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a seventh-inning solo homer and Cunningham batted in two runs with doubles against his ex-teammates.

UCLA's Bob Day Cracks College Mark For Mile

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Slender Bob Day of UCLA cracked the national collegiate mile record Saturday when he reeled off the distance in 3:56.4 in the United States Track and Field Federation meet.

The 20-year-old junior from San Marino, Calif., who once before in 1964 bettered four minutes, surpassed the college record of 3:56.9 which Tom O'Hara of Loyola of Chicago posted June 22, 1963.

After one lap, Day left the field far behind with Ed Dean of Notre Dame second in 4:04.8.

The 155-pound Day shattered the USTFF mile record of 4:02.2 by Cal Elmore of Wichita University in the 1963 meet.

Another record shambles was the stadium mark of 3:57.9 which was set in 1958 by the now-retired Herb Elliott of Australia.

Villanova's crack relay team upset world record-holding Oklahoma State in a stirring race at two miles that produced no record but was a highlight of the final competition in the meet.

Shreveport Lad Advances In Net Play At Crossett

CROSSETT, Ark. (AP)—Allen Keith of Shreveport, La., the No. 1 seed in 18-and-under boys singles, Saturday advanced to the finals of the 10th annual Crossett Junior Tennis Tournament.

Keith defeated Doub Dunn of Greenville, Miss., 6-0, 6-0 in the quarter - finals and dumped Glenn Siegel of Dallas, Tex., 6-3, 6-2 in the semifinals.

He will meet Fred Sweatt of Newport in the finals today. Sweatt beat Freddy Thompson of Shreveport 6 - 4, 6-2 in the semifinals.

Rivers Wallops Rack Service In Amateur Tilt

Lynn Causey pitched a one-hitter and his Rivers Ford teammates bombed Rack Service for 12 hits and 20 runs in an American Legion Amateur League game at Legion Stadium Saturday night.

The league-leading Rivers Ford crew upped its league record to 6-1 and overall record to 9-1 while Rack Service fell to 0-6.

It was the second one-hitter of the season for the ace left hander and he got good batting support from his teammates, getting 10 runs in the first inning.

Joe Thurman and Gary Albritton had three hits each to pace the Rivers Ford attack. Thurman, scoring five runs, had one run-batted-in and Albritton had three RBIs.

Detroit Tops Twins, 8-5

DETROIT (AP) — A misjudged fly ball by Tony Oliva aided a three-run sixth inning rally that carried the Detroit Tigers to an 8-5 victory over Minnesota Saturday.

Oliva misjudged Don Wert's high fly with one away in the sixth and the ball hit the screen in back of Oliva for a single. George Thomas, whose single had opened the inning, scored to break a 5-5 tie.

Bill Freehan, who was safe on Frank Kostro's second error of the game, came home later on Jerry Lumpe's double and Wert tallied the third Tiger run of the inning when Don Demeter hit a sacrifice fly.

Willie Horton's three-run homer in the second inning pushed the Tigers into a 5-2 lead and chased Minnesota starter Camilo Pascual, who was going for his ninth straight victory.

But the Twins' Jimmie Hall tied it up with a three-run homer in the third, following a single by Oliva and a walk to Harmon Killebrew.

The first-place Twins got two runs in the first inning on a single by Oliva, a walk to Killebrew, a double by Hall and Jim Northrup's error on the hit, which allowed Killebrew to score.

Detroit came right back on a pair of walks, a single by Lumpe, an error by Kostro and an infield out.

Following the early display of power, Detroit pitcher Denny McLain and Twins reliefer Jerry Fosnow settled down.

McLain retired 10 straight batters following Hall's home run before Bob Allison singled in the sixth.

The Tigers were held hitless following Horton's homer until Thomas' single triggered the three-run sixth inning rally.

Fred Gladding came on in the eighth after Killebrew opened with a double, to save McLain's second victory in five decisions.

Koufax Hurls Dodgers' Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers extended his perfect record against the New York Mets Saturday, pitching the National League leaders to a 5-0 victory over the last-place club before a packed house at Shea Stadium.

Koufax beat the Mets for the 11th straight time in dealing them their eighth loss in a row. The Dodger left-hander doled out five hits and one walk, striking out eight along the way.

With the help of three errors, the Dodgers took charge with three runs in the fourth inning against southpaw Al Jackson, now 0-8 vs. Los Angeles.

Misplays by shortstop Roy McMillan, third baseman Charlie Smith and catcher Bob Taylor, combined with a double by Jim Lefebvre, a single by Al Ferrara and a bunt hit by Jeff Torborg produced the 3-0 lead.

Willie Davis singled in two Torborg's double, plus a single and stolen base by Maury Wills. The steal was Wills' second of the day and 38th of the season.

Koufax, 9-3 for the year, turned in his second shutout.

The Mets have been blanked four times in their losing string and held to seven runs. In successive games they've been trimmed by San Francisco's Juan Marichal, 12-0 against New York, Don Drysdale of the Dodgers, 16-1, and Koufax, 11-0.

Arizona State Takes Series

OMAHA (AP) — Potent Arizona State blended the slugging of Rick Monday and Sal Bando with Doug Nurnberg's hitless relief pitching for a 2-1 victory over Ohio State in the championship final of the 19th College World Series Saturday night.

Nurnberg, a right-hander with a good fast ball, choked off a bases-loaded, none out threat by the Big Ten champions in the seventh, then blanked them in the eighth and ninth.

Monday, No. 1 choice in baseball's first free agent draft, smashed his 11th homer over the right field fence in the first inning off Ron Kitchton, Buckeye starter.

Ohio State tied it 1-1 in the fourth as Arnie Chonko singled with two out and Don Harkins scored him with a 380-foot double off the left field fence. Until Chonko's hit, Arizona State lefty Jim Merrick, the winner, had pitched hitless ball.

Bando punched a long triple to right center in the sixth. Luis Lagunas drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly to center.

Ohio State finished 30-13.

Trailing 4-2, Dick Stuart got the Phillies' ninth inning started with a single and immediately scored on a triple by Clay Dalrymple, the third Philadelphia triple of the game.

Ruben Amaro then laid down a squeeze bunt, scoring pinch runner Tony Taylor.

Luffey Leaves Mark At NLSC

By Keith Prince

HOW DO YOU SAY GOODBYE to something that has been your entire life for almost 20 years? "My decision wasn't an easy one," said George Luffey, speaking about the recent announcement made concerning his resignation from the coaching staff at Northeast State after an 11-year tenure.

"I know I'll miss it, mostly because of my associations with young people, but I can't look back. It's a decision I made, not necessarily because I wanted to but because I felt it was better in the long run for my family."

And so the last chapter is closed, at least for the present, on a coaching career which has spanned almost 15 years in Monroe. The official date on the resignation reads July 1, 1965.

"It would be foolish of me not to admit that I will miss coaching, but I feel just as strongly that I will enjoy my new position," said the smartly dressed business man who now heads a medical and surgical supply company owned by he and two of his brothers here in Monroe.

ALTHOUGH SOMETIMES we tend to overlook the accomplishments of a person in our midsts, it is hard not to recognize the many contributions which George Luffey has made for the sports growth of this community.

Probably, because he has been linked with the Monroe sports picture since his high school days, it doesn't seem like 18 years ago that Luffey graduated from Neville High School with all - state football honors and numerous baseball awards to his credit. Nor does it seem like 14 years ago that he finished his college education at Southwestern in Lafayette after earning all - league honors for USL as an undefeated pitcher.

Luffey, in fact, was one of the top Louisiana collegiate pitchers of all time. While at USL, he sparked the Bulldogs to three straight baseball crowns, had seasons of 4-0, 8 - 0 and 6 - 0 and was named "Player of the Year" after his senior season.

No, it doesn't seem so long because Luffey has been here in Monroe, his hometown, for the last 14 years coaching first at Neville and then at Northeast. But, nevertheless, Luffey has definitely made his mark in the coaching profession and he will be missed by those who have been associated with him in athletic circles.

LUFFEY IS A MAN WHO ALWAYS has a ready smile for those he meets, a quick word of wit for those who know him, and a stern word of advice for those who play under him

Some who have followed Luffey's career from an outstanding player to a coach at his own high school and then through 11 years of tutorship at Northeast jokingly tell him that his greatest achievement of all was remaining at the Monroe college throughout the many lean football years that it has experienced.

And, really, when you think about the droves of coaches who have come and gone at NLSC you must realize that there had to be a reason why George Luffey was always around for another year. The answer is actually a simple one. Luffey did the job that was asked of him, and did it well enough to please those he worked for — and this includes the public.

Produced Outstanding Talent

It is a well known fact that Northeast has finished with a winning season only twice since joining the Gulf States Conference back in 1953.

But, is it as well known that during these dry years, with Luffey as the end coach, Northeast had at least one end honored on the all - conference selections every season except two? Of course, credit must first be given to the players themselves for earning these honors — but it is easy to see that it wasn't a mere coincidence that Luffey's boys have won more all-GSC laurels than any other position for Northeast.

As we said earlier, Luffey did the job that was asked of him.

SEVERAL OF HIS BETTER KNOWN ends received notice from the pros and one, Joe Driskill, played professional football for a couple of years. A couple of other outstanding ends under Luffey are now coaching in our area.

James Knox is now an assistant coach at Ouachita High and Jerry Head is the head coach at Newellton.

The number of all - GSC berths won by ends under Luffey total up to 10, although some boys own more than one year of recognition.

But football was only part of Luffey's job at Northeast. He has also been the primary force behind Northeast State's baseball program which has risen to a highly respected position under his guidance.

He has had too many all - GSC men to name on his baseball clubs but some can be singled out for NAIA All - America honors. They include shortstop Phil Petras who starred in 1960 - 61- 62. And year before last, third baseman Charley Dykes and pitcher Dean Bounds were on the All - America honor roll.

AT PRESENT, THERE ARE TWO former Indians performing in the professional ranks — pitchers Ed Quimby and Floyd Murry — and another player, who played on this year's team, has just been drafted by the Houston Astros. He is infielder Gary Fields, an all-league pick.

In 1964, Luffey's baseball club reached its highest peak when it claimed the school's first GSC title. He was acclaimed "Coach of the Year" for his work. Then this past spring, although many (including Luffey) were disappointed that the 1965 NLSC baseball team couldn't repeat as champs the club did manage to win a vital doubleheader on the final day of the season to jump from fifth place to third in the final standings. As it turned out this proved to be the difference in Northeast winning its third straight All-Sports Trophy — which it did, by one-half point.

Yes, it's going to be hard to imagine Northeast football and baseball teams without George Luffey around. But the big man can't be blamed for entering the business world where there is more security to be found for his wife Jane and their three children.

There is no doubt that sports fans will miss "Coach" Luffey on the sidelines.

THERE IS ALSO LITTLE DOUBT that Luffey faces one of the biggest challenges of his 36 years in this business - world venture. But who is to say that he won't be just as successful in his new position as any which he has undertaken in the past.

After all, George Luffey seems to do pretty well with a challenge.

Lema Gets 3rd Round Lead With Blazing 66

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tony Lema, shooting for his second straight Cleveland Open golf championship, took the third-round lead with a five-under-par 66 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 203.

The 31-year-old Lema came from two strokes back with three birdies on the front nine to catch Tommy Aaron on the sixth hole.

Aaron, who held the halfway lead with a 135, faltered to an even-par 71 over Highland Park's 6,821-yard course and fell three strokes back at 206.

Lema, the pro circuit's fourth leading money winner, was 10 under par for the 54 holes. He moved into the lead when Aaron went one over par on the seventh hole and then held off the challenge of Gordon Jones, who stayed in contention with a three-under 68.

Jones, a native of Alliance, Ohio, who plays out of Orlando, Fla., bogeyed the final hole after his approach shot landed in the gallery to the right of the green. He was eight under for the tourney and two strokes behind with 205.

Dank Sikes shot a 68 to move into a third-place tie with Aaron.

Lema, bidding for the big first prize of $25,000 which would put him on top of the list of money-winners, was jubilant over his round.

"I played pretty good today. Come in here tomorrow and we'll have champagne," he said.

Lema fashioned five birdies and needed only 29 putts.

PGA champion Bobby Nichols equalled Lema's 66 but was nine strokes off the pace with a 212 total.

Still in contention with 208 were Bert Weaver, who had a 70, and Gene Littler, Bruce Devlin and Randy Glover, who were deadlocked 209.

The 28-year-old Aaron said "I just missed too many chances for birdies." He failed to register birds on putts of six feet on No. 2, eight feet on No. 10 and seven feet on No. 12.

Seven strokes behind Lema at 210 were Chuck Courtney, Howell Fraser, Billy Maxwell, Bob Rosburg, Dick Sikes and Julius Boros. Arnold Palmer shot his second straight 70 for a 211 total, tied with Jim Ferree, Jackie Burke and Mason Rudolph.

Bruce Crampton, the only triple winner on the tour, carded a 71 for a 212 total that tied him with Nichols, Billy Casper and Claude King.

Athletics Romp Past Cleveland For 7-0 Victory

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bert Campaneris rapped three hits, drove in four runs and stole three bases Saturday as Kansas City romped past Cleveland 7-0 bheind the six-hit pitching of Fred Talbot.

Rain fell through most of the game, interrupting play for 43 minutes in the seventh inning, but it failed to dampen the power of the Athletics who jolted Luis Tiant for five runs in the first two innings and broke his four-game winning streak.

AAU Gets Olympic Control

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States Olympic Committee got into the feud between the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association Saturday by approving a measure giving the AAU control of major Olympic Games committees.

Immediate reaction of the NCAA was a caucus meeting after adjournment of the USOC's special session, calling for a "select committee of nationally prominent educational leaders' to challenge the apparent AAU coup.

The USOC voted to grant majority membership for internationally recognized sports groups on its games committees, virtually relegating the NCAA and affiliated groups to a passive Olympic organizational role.

The AAU is the only internationally recognized group in this country for such top Olympic sports as track, swimming and basketball. It has zealously guarded that role in its long and bitter feud with the NCAA.

The protesting caucus was said to have included 40 representatives of the NCAA, National High School Athletic Federation, National Junior College Association and several national coaches' associations.

"They slammed the door in the face of people they ask to discover, train and encourage athletes for Olympic competition," said an informed NCAA source.

What retaliatory action may develop was conjectural but it was reported the protesting committee may include some college presidents and faculty representatives to make a major issue of Saturday's USOC action.

The action, in a special meeting of the USOC, was described by an NCAA spokesman as "sacrificing the NCAA on the altar of disharmony."

By a margin of 1,339 to 585 votes, the USOC wiped out previous equal representation between the AAU and NCAA on such prime Olympic committees as track and field, swimming and basketball.

It left the AAU governing 11 of more than 20 games committees which organize America's squads for the Olympics, next to be held in Mexico City in 1968.

Other internationally recognized groups benefiting are on such games committees as rowing, fencing, tennis, cycling, soccer and skiing.

Cliff Buck of Denver, AAU president, quickly stressed that the AAU would insist that all groups "who have a contribution to make" be given equitable representation on the games committees.

John Pennel Vaults Again

MIAMI (AP) — John Pennel qualified for the National AAU Championships Saturday with a pole vault of 16 feet in a meet at Coral Gables.

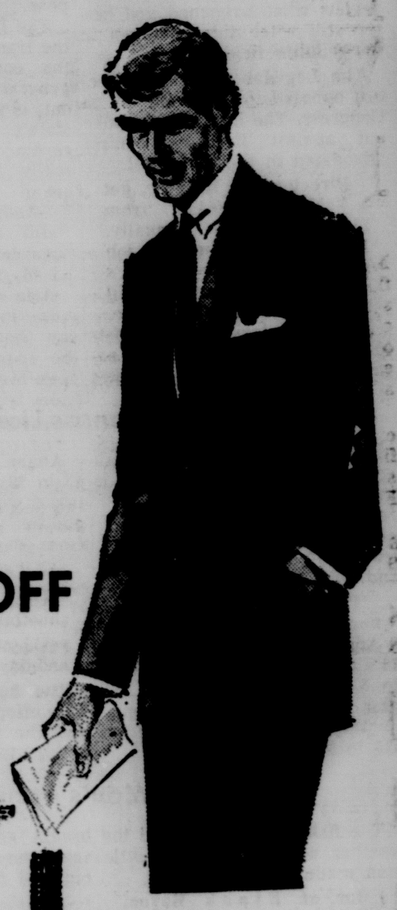

Pennel, first vaulter to break the 17-foot barrier, missed three times at that level Saturday.

This was his first competition since the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo, where an ailing back held him to a 15-6 effort.

Hunters Need Teal Permits

With Sam Hanna

September Teal Hunt

It's too hot in June to think about hunting ducks, but don't forget there's a special teal season in September. It'll be hotter then.

With the experimental season set for September 18-26th, the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission will begin filling requests June 28th for teal hunting permits.

You've got to have a permit issued by the state to participate legally in the teal season. Permits will be issued free of charge from June 28th through August 15th.

Now you ask why a permit is necessary to hunt during the special season. Here is the reason.

In the first place, the September season is strictly an experiment. Louisiana has been pushing it for several years, but just last year the federal government agreed to try it out. Louisiana wanted the early season because the teal come through our state in September and most of them keep going south out over the Gulf of Mexico.

Because the September teal season is a step toward species management, the federal government plans to give it careful consideration. It will be evaluated.

And this can be done through the collection of teal wings and by post - season questionnaries.

Under the program established by the federal government, a fixed number of duck hunters requesting permits will be mailed envelopes for wings. These will be mailed from Washington.

But in order to do so the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife must have the names and addresses of all hunters in advance of the season.

A certain percentage of persons requesting teal permits will receive questionnaires after the season is over.

Hunters wishing to obtain permits must mail their requests to the Wild Life & Fisheries, 400 Royal Street, New Orleans.

It's awfully warm to be thinking about duck hunting. But it'll be even warmer in September.

Wardens Still Missing

Now that the fiscal session of the Legislature has ended, let's review what happened and better still what didn't happen in the wildlife field.

The Legislature went on record opposed to the Dodd bill in Congress. The lawmakers spoke out against firearms control advocated in the Dodd bill.

Director Joe Hair Jr. got a salary increase, from $10,000 to $13,500 annually. He has been in the job about a year. The director's salary in Louisiana is still below the national average.

But the salaries of biologists in Louisiana are below the national average and they didn't get a raise. The lawmakers didn't think about it, we suspose.

The Legislature also approved the transfer of $3.5 million from the conservation fund to the general fund. If this is carried out, it will serisouly cripple the state's wildlife program, according to professionals who really know the wildlife program.

And, Ouachita Parish still didn't get its game warden as has been promised so many times it's stale news.

So, in summary, you might say the Legislature took from the sportsman and in return gave him a big fat nothing.

New Arkansas Licenses

For those Louisianians who fish or hunt in Arkansas, here is the revised schedule on non-resident fishing and hunting license fees for next year released by the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission.

The current costs and new fees are:

Annual fishing, from $5 to $6; 14 - day trip fishing, from $2.50 to $3.50; annual - hunting, all game, from $25 to $30; annual hunting, small game, from $15 to $20.

Annual bow and arrow, from $5 to $6. If a deer or turkey is taken with bow and arrow, the additional cost was raised from $20 to $24.

The commission also raised the commercial shooting resort fees for non-residents from $5 to $6; ond-day from $2 to $3.

The hunting license fees go into effect July of this year and the fishing licenses, January 1, 1966.

Little Man's Corner

The fishing was good and the weather was hot, but the little men made news afield.

Out at Black Bayou, Charley Brown and Arthur Monroe landed 100 bream. L. E. Clark caught 53.

Lee Hicks and David Sims also had luck, landed 92 specs and 10 bream. Next day Lee came back with Mr. and Mrs. Sims and they caught 153 specs and bream.

Black Bayou was pretty good for bass fishing too. R. L. Baker landed a bass weighing 6½ pounds. George Williams caught one that weighed 6-lb., 12-oz. and James Doss landed two weighing 5½ pounds each.

Sam Smith and John Arnold landed 106 specs while George Snellings and Jack Rubin caught 84 specs.

Over at Cheniere Lake, the big bream are really biting. Mike and Bernadine Tarver have caught several big strings of big bream.

Mike says the secret is having a long pole with a long line, a light hook and a light cork. Then back off from the bream as far as possible. He says they're awfully shy, but big and fighting.

In the Jena area, Buck Robertson of Jonesboro caught the limit of white perch at Kitterlin Creek Bay. Lonnie Poland of Jonesboro also landed the limit. Otis Morgan of Jena caught a big string of white perch at Willow Lake.

From Waterproof, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Skipper and Mrs. J. A. Walker of Lake St. John landed the limit of bream in Lake St. John. Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Bamburg of West Monre got the limit of catfish and white perch in the Blue Hole.

Alex and Floyd Holmes of Monroe caught the limit of bass in Old River Lake. They were fishing with purple worms.

Graham Selects All-Star Team

CHICAGO (AP) — Head Coach Otto Graham has selected 51 college stars, capable of being developed into a prototype passing machine, to meet the Cleveland Browns in the 32nd All-Star football game Friday, Aug. 6, at Soldier Field in Chicago.

Graham's selections, announced Saturday, were geared to passing on offense and stopping virtually irrepressible Jimmy Brown on defense.

Forty schools will be represented in the game with the bulk of the squad coming from the South and Middle West. Seven Big Ten schools and Notre Dame will contribute 11 men, while 16 players will represent the South.

Three University of Illinois gridders will be the largest single contribution from any school with nine other schools sending two men each into training for the game beginning July 15 at Northwestern University in suburban Evanston.

Notre Dame's famed passing duo of Heisman Trophy winner John Huarte and end Jack Snow figure to form the nucleus of Graham's aerial circus. Roger Staubach of Navy, Bob Timberlake of Michigan, the Big Ten's most outstanding player, and Craig Morton of California round out the quarterback corps.

In addition to Snow, the outstanding signal callers will be throwing to Allen Brown of Mississippi, a 235-pound tight end; Bob Hayes of Florida A&M, who holds the world's 100-yard dash record; Larry Elkins of Baylor; Fred Biletnikoff of Florida State; Fred Hill of Southern California and Jeff Jordan and Roy Jefferson of Tulsa.

Unlike many previous All-Star units, Graham appears to have the power and size needed to battle the pros. Forty-six of the 51 men are taller than six feet, and 23 tip the scales at more than 230 pounds. Ten weigh in excess of 250. Heaviest is Harry Schuh, a tackle from Memphis State, at 271.

Other hefty members of the squad include tackle Jim Wilson of Georgia and guard Walter Johnson of California State, who are 265; and a trio of 260 pounders — Archie Sutton of Illinois, Bob Breitenstein of Tulsa and Remi Prudhome of Louisiana State.

Linebackers Dick Butkus of Illinois and Malcom Walker of Rice get the near impossible task of preventing Brown from churning his way into the secondary.

Eight first round National League draft choices and five of the first eight men drafted by the American League are included on the roster.

The game, which traditionally has opened the football season, has raised more than $2 million for Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., sponsors of the All-Star game.

Garden Reception Follows Wedding Of Lea Thompson, Richard Olsan II

A garden reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the wedding Tuesday evening in Grace Episcopal Church of Miss Lea Stamper Thompson and Richard Donald Olsan II. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lea Stamper Thompson, 1801 Oakmont Drive and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Donald Olsan, 1704 Emerson.

The Rev. Urban Holmes III of St. Alban's Chapel in Baton Rouge, assisted by the Rev. William E. Baldridge, performed the 7 p.m. ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends of the two families.

Three massed arrangements of white summer flowers, including gardenias, roses, gladioli, daisies, stock and white caladium formed a setting for the exchange of vows.

A concert of organ music was rendered by Ronald Brothers, as guests were escorted to their pews by the ushers, Karl Thompson, Baton Rouge, uncle of the bride; Dale Olsan, brother of the groom; Ronald Marks and Edward C. Augustat, New Orleans, and as candles were lighted by the bride's brother, Dhu Charles Thompson. Soloist was Mrs. Leroy Anspach.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a traditional gown of ivory silk organza over taffeta, designed with fitted bodice, scoop neckline and brief sleeves, embellished with appliques of French lace. Lace medallions outlined the straight front panel of the skirt and back pleats fell into a wide court train. French lace appliques edged the bride's veil of two tiers of silk illusion worn mantilla style. The bride carried a spray of gardenias, stephanotis and ivy, atop a prayer book, used by her maternal grandmother, the late Carrie Perry McKenzie on her wedding day.

Miss Carolyn Thompson was maid of honor and only attendant for her sister. She wore a gown of white organza embroidered at the hemline with yellow roses and pale green leaves. The fitted bodice with scoop neckline was highlighted by an inset of pale green silk. Her headdress was a circlet of yellow with stiff white veiling and small cluster of stephanotis. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis with ivy and yellow silk ribbon streamers.

Mr. Olsan attended his son as best man.

Mrs. Thompson was wearing for her daughter's wedding a gown of Wedgewood blue silk chiffon with matching chiffon hat and a white orchid corsage. The groom's mother, Mrs. Olsan, wore a dress of pale green peau de soie and lace with matching hat and white orchid corsage.

Wrought iron candle trees with green votive lights lined the walk leading to the Thompson home and garden where ferns, caladiums, white petunias and geraniums formed a background setting. The receiving line was forned at the entrance to the patio, defined by potted ferns, Norfolk pine and camellias. A pair of orange trees flanked double doors to the living room and in the entrance hall was a massive arrangement of magnolias in a stone urn. Queen Elizabeth roses graced the piano and a nearby table held a topiary tree of specimen gardenias, green grapes and green votive lights.

The wedding ring cake which centered the bride's table, was crested by a bisque figurine holding sprays of gardenias and stephanotis, identical to that carried by the bride on her prayer book. Glass topped tables on the patio held the bride's book and the groom's cake. A string quartet composed of Lane Allen, Jane Allen, Michael Strausser and Donna Duffey provided music throughout the reception.

Members of the houseparty assisting with reception courtesies included Mrs. John Sherrouse Jr., Mrs. Charles McKenzie, Mrs. Hollis Venable, Mrs. Charles Olsan of Ames, Iowa; Mrs. Ernest Laycock Beauchamp of Baton Rouge; Mrs. William Burns of Pensacola, Fla., Mrs. James L. Davis of Baton Rouge; Mrs. Malcolm Triche of Baton Rouge; Mrs. Harold Mouk Jr., Mrs. Jack L. Smith, Mrs. Clyde C. Thompson Jr., Mrs. Julian Thompson, Mrs. Karl Worthen, Mrs. Dhu Thompson, Mrs. John William Perry, Mrs. Mose E. Perry, Mrs. James Atkins Perry, Miss Rupert Perry, Mrs. A. W. Thompson Jr., Miss Kay Thompson, Mrs. Karl Thompson, Mrs. George W. Mouk, Mrs. Harold Mouk Sr., Mrs. Clyde C. Thompson Sr. and Mrs. A. Scott Hamilton. For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Dauphin Island, the bride was wearing a blue and beige suit with beige linen blouse, blue hat and beige accessories. Her corsage was a small ivory cymbidium. The couple will be at home in Baton Rouge for the summer, moving to New Orleans in the fall where Mr. Olsan will attend LSU Medical School and Mrs. Olsan will do graduate work at Tulane University under a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship. MR. AND MRS. GLYNN CHAPMAN

Vows Unite Local Couple In Green, White Setting

Southern smilax, arrangements of white chrysanthemums and lighted white tapers in branched candelabra formed a background setting in the First Assembly of God Church, West Monroe for the wedding Friday, June 4 of Miss Jennifer Dean Starnes and Gary Glynn Chapman.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson Starnes and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Chapman of West Monroe. Rev. Fred D. Wall and Rev. Everett Johnson performed the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. following vocal solos by Miss Becky Brown.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a traditional full length gown of white peau de soie with fitted princess bodice of Alencon lace featuring a low scoop neckline and long tapered sleeves. The modified controlled skirt was accented with deep pleats that ended in a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was held in place by a crown of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of pompons and vanda orchids with a removable corsage of white orchids.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Cleveland A. Motley and bridesmaids were Mrs. Steve Struben, Miss Terry Freeman and Miss Gloria Darnell. They wore identical sleeveless gowns of mint green brocade with matching shoes and elbow length gloves. Crown circlet headpieces with brief noseveils completed their costumes. Each wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bride, and carried a bouquet of mint green orchids.

Miss Judy Faye Etheridge, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a frock of mint green brocade with white shoes and short white gloves. Her headpiece of white velvet was accented with green roses and white satin streamers and she carried a basket of white and green chrysanthemums. She wore a gold heart necklace, a gift of the bride. Ring bearers were Ricky Nugent and Randy Chapman, cousin of the groom.

Candles were lighted by Miss Dorothy Jean Motley, niece of the bride and Miss Susan Lynn Etheridge, her cousin, who wore matching gowns of white linen with white shoes and short white gloves. Their headpieces were white velvet bands accented with mint green roses.

Lynn Robinson served as best man for his cousin and groomsmen - ushers were Bruce Robinson, cousin of the groom: John T. Starnes Jr., brother of the bride and Stanley Chapman, brother of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Starnes wore a gown of green imported silk with a hat of green silk roses and bone accessories. Her corsage was of white chrysanthemums. The bridegroom's mother chose a pink linen and lace model with matching accessories and a corsage of white chrysanthemums.

A reception followed in the church reception hall. The green and white theme of the wedding was carried out in the arrangement of green foliage, white mums and green orchids which formed the central decor for the linen covered table. Miss Paula Ray served the wedding cake and alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Sara Buchart and Mrs. F. B. Etheridge. Miss Roberta Chisholm officiated at the guest book table which was adorned with a memory candle, encircled with ivy and gardenias.

For a short wedding trip the bride wore a white pique suit with matching accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. The couple will be at home at 712 South Second in Monroe. Both are graduates of West Monroe high school and are employed in Monroe.

Brewton-Berry Nuptials Read In Church Setting

In a candlelight ceremony on Saturday, June 5, at Wesley Chapel Church, at St. Joseph, Miss Katherine Ann Berry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Yandel Berry of Waterproof, became the bride of Brian Elton Brewton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elton Brewton, of Winnfield.

Cathedral candles in ivy-entwined wrought iron candelabra were flanked by large fan shaped arrangements of white gladioli and chrysanthemums. Pedestal jardiniers formed an altar setting beneath an ivy laden arbor.

The Rev. Arthur M. Baker and Rev. Wallace Blackwood performed the double ring ceremony at 5:30 p.m., following a selection of nuptial music by Mrs. Robert L. Manning, Jr., organist, and Rev. Frank Jones, soloist. Candles were lighted preceeding the ceremony by Ronnie Brewton and Douglas C. Berry.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional gown fashioned of silk peau de soie and Alencon lace, featuring an Empire silhouette accented in lace and crystal embroidery and repeating the jeweled motif on the separate jacket. The slim column skirt ended in a chapel train. Her bouffant veil of English silk illusion fell in tiers from a silk peau de soie pill box embroidered in Alencon lace and seed pearls.

Miss Carol Givens, the honor attendant, and bridesmaids Mrs. Jack Swails, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Janis Berry, cousin of the bride, wore formal length gowns of Irish green linen with Empire bodice, low round neck, and brief sleeves. A narrow band of velvet ribbon accented the waist. The slim A-line skirts ended in a demi-back bustle. Matching linen pill box hats and shoes completed their costumes. The attendants carried bouquets of yellow glamelias.

Serving the bridegroom as best man was his brother, Gregory Allen Brewton. The groomsmen and ushers included Edward Crawford and Edward Y. Berry, Jr., brother of the bride.

Mrs. Berry chose for her daughter's wedding an Empire styled dress of pink silk faille and braided lace bodice, with matching stole and accessories. Mrs. Brewton wore a yellow silk linen sheath with overblouse of linen and lace, complemented with matching accessories. Both costumes were accented with white cymbidium orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents at Gurtna Mora Plantation. The refreshment table was covered with a white embroidered silk organza cloth. A five branched candelabrum holding tapers and a cascading arrangement of yellow roses and daisies, formed the central decor for the bride's table. A white tiered cake, adorned with yellow roses, was at one end of the table with a silver punch bowl opposite.

Receiving guests at the door were Mrs. Clyde D. Guthrie and Mrs. B. L. Moss, Jr. Miss Carolyn Tucker and Miss Mary Ann Bray registered guests at a smaller table holding an anniversary candle and the bride's bouquet.

YOUNG, MOBILE TREND

The Paris spring fashion collections are long since shown, but their memory lingers on—in the young, mobile and feminine look. Necklines for the most part were clean and pure with many collarless costumes or costumes with small collars rolled away from the neck. Shoulders showed a broadening trend with sleeves set in.

East Meets West In Sew Happy Way

By CONNIE RYAN
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Newest country promising to become a high - fashion center: Japan.

So says Hanae Mori, the first leading Japanese designer to show a collection in the United States.

Madame Mori explained that "the timing is perfect . . . there are important style changes coming from Europe or America, and the market is perhaps a bit static.

"There is a need for something new and different . . . there is a place for it, and a demand . . . I hope and believe that Japan can have an influence on the world of high fashion."

Madame Mori's collection was a beautiful blending of the rich, cultural heritage of the kimono with the functional and versatile ideas of Westernized fashions.

The designer said she hoped also to influence styles in her own country.

"Western styles were introduced in Japan 100 years ago," she said in an interview, "and Japan adopted and has held to the most conservative of Western dress from women. In my collections . . . I am trying to influence the Japanese woman to be less conservative, to be modern, glamorous, smart, elegant.

For her U. S. showing, the designer used seven models — two from Japan, two Japanese girls who now model in Europe, and three New York mannequins.

One of the models, Mieko Takashima, interrupted her European honeymoon to come to New York. She recently married Paul Wikstrom, of Stockholm, Sweden.

Now is the season of the houseguest: theirs and ours. Monroyans are visiting out of town, or entertaining at home. This week the local calendar has been filled with activities for visitors, with some of our people leaving our gay town for festivities elsewhere. leaving today for Washington D.C. are GLADYS and PAUL HEWITT, who are to be guests of PRESIDENT and MRS. LYNDON JOHNSON at a reception and buffett at the White House tomorrow evening. The Hewitts are going to New Orleans today and will fly from there to Washington tomorrow. Later this week Paul will be representing Louisiana at meetings of the various state committees for art and culture, to be held in Washington. The Hewitts are to be away about a week.

Several groups of guests, both former residents, and just plain visitors, have been in town during the past week. Last weekend SIS and ERNIE CARRERE of New Orleans were here as guests of GERRY and BURT SPERRY in their home on Pargoud boulevard. The Carreres were honored by the LEE VANDERPOOLS with luncheon on Saturday. A group of some fifteen friends met at the Vanderpool residence on Loop road, proceeded to Bayou DeSiard country club for lunch.

Sunday morning BLANCHE OLIVER and McVEA OLIVER invited the Carreres and old friends from law school for milk punch at the Oliver residence on Bayou Lane. Masses of daylilies decorated the living room, while the dining table was centered with daisies. The buffet included fried chicken drumsticks, stuffed eggplant, and cheeses.

Another visitor in the Sperry home was daughter SUSAN's guest, BOBBY LAWSON, here from Gainesville, Georgia, from Sunday until Wednesday of this week. KATHY McSHERRY entertained at a dinner party for Bobby, Susan, and eight others Tuesday evening. The ten were seated at a white covered table centered with a bouquet of gardenias flanked with white candles. The menu included ham, string bean casserole, corn, and cake with fresh peaches.

Several parties this week have honored SATCHIE DOLAN of Eagle Pass, Texas, and CHARLOTTE WOOD of Troy, Alabama. Satchie, Charlotte, and their children are visiting here, dividing their time between their mother, SATCHIE NAIDEN; grandmother, DOROTHY SHOLARS; and the Holiday Inn. They plan to be here another week.

On Tuesday, CLAYTON KELLOGG and DOROTHEA GARRETT invited old freinds for a conversational hour and visit with Satchie and Charlotte at the Kellogg residence on Lexington avenue. An arrangement of daisies and greenery was focal point in the living room, while a brass bucket of magnolias and foliage stood beside the fireplace. Pastel hydrangeas in a white urn decorated the den. Coffee and assorted miniature pastries were served in the dining room from a table centered with daisies and greenery.

JOYCE KELLOGG was hostess at luncheon on Wednesday, honoring Satchie. The party was held at the Kellogg residence on Park avenue, where guests were invited first into the sun room. Green and white calladium leaves were the decoration here. A cool minted green drink was served, with tiny napkins embroidered with green grapes the exact shade of the glass.

Clear Mexican green glass goblets and plates were used with white organdy place mats to create a cool summer effect in the dining room. A mass of gardenias in an oblong green crystal bowl centered the table. The salad plate served to eight guests included a cold pressed chicken; a fruit salad of fresh pineapple, strawberries and bananas with poppyseed dressing; fresh green asparagus. Dessert was raspberry mousse.

Charlotte, Satchie, and all the children were invited for supper Wednesday evening at the home of DOT and KENT BREARD on Pargoud boulevard. A buffet meal including ham, turkey, wild rice, and all the fixings was served from the dining table. An arrangement of daisies and variegated euonymus centered the table. Guests served themselves before being seated in the den or in the yard. Dessert, served later, consisted of "sidewalk sundaes" and brown sugar pound cake.

Also invited to this party were MIKE NORMANN and TYLER POSEY of New Orleans. Mike and Tyler are visiting here in the home of the former's grandparents, LOUISE and TOM LEIGH.

Arriving Tuesday for a summer visit with the JOHN CLAYS was their niece, PAM CLAY of Canal Fulton, Ohio. Peggy had been to Wooster, Ohio, for a reunion of her college class at the university there. She was accompanied by daughter PEGGY LOU, and brought Pam home for a visit. Pam and her parents, the BOB CLAYS, lived here for some years . . . Incidentally, as Peggy and the girls were leaving for Monroe, they saw NAN SALISBURY arriving there for a visit with Pam's parents. Nan and Merilyn drove over to Granville, Ohio, to hear RONALD REGAN speak at a Republican meetinig.

A conversational hour and reunion with old friends honored Pam Clay Friday. Hostesses were KITTY VAUGHAN and DONNA KING, who entertained at the home of the latters grandmother, MRS. W. C. RENWICK, 108 Delano drive.

A daisy motif was noted in appointments for the refreshment table, which was set up on the banks of Bayou DeSiard. Daisies decorated the cloth and napkins and were used for the table centerpiece. An assortment of dips, sandwiches, and cookies were served with bottled soft drinks to about twenty-four girls of the senior high set.

More former Monroyans back home for a visit this week are PAT and JACK MADDEN and children BRENDA, DEBORAH, CONRAD, and KAREN of Brevard, North Carolina. They arrived Wednesday, and will be here until the first of next week. MARGE and JOHN MULLENS invited the Maddens for a family supper on Wednesday evening.

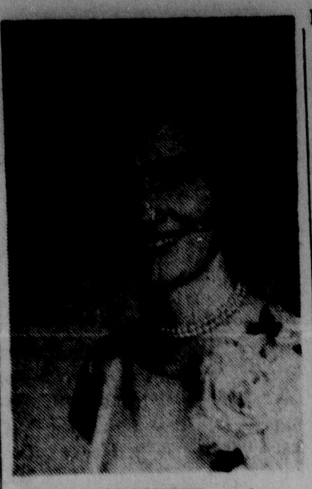

Thursday morning, IRIS BROOKS was hostess for one of Pat's former bridge clubs. The ladies, with Pat as special guest, met at the Brooks home early in the morning, with luncheon served at noon. The table, centered with pink roses and pink sweet peas, was laid with pink place mats. A shrimp salad plate was served to Pat, DOTTIE LAW, MARY LOU FREEMAN, WINKIE ASHCRAFT, JANICE CALDWELL, BETH McGOUGH, JEAN ZENTNER, MONA TARVER, and Iris.

Former neighbors of the Maddens were invited for dinner Thursday evening at the home of the D. V. LOFlins on Pargoud Boulevard. Mary Alice carried out a Mexican theme in decorations using ceramic roosters with mustard colored marigolds and red calendulas. The table was laid with straw place mats. A hot tamale supper was served to about sixteen guests.

COLONEL JIM BALLUFF, U. S. Army (retired), returned Thursday from West Point, New York, where he attended the thirtieth reunion of his graduating class. Sixty members of the class of 1935 were present for the reunion

Home again after a trip to Shreveport: DEBBY HAMILTON and PAULA GAIENNIE. The girls were guests last weekend of friends made at Camp Waldemar, Kerrville, Texas, Debby visited ELAINE and KATHY WALLER; Paula, LEE and AMY COOK. The hostesses entertained our girls at a party Thursday afternoon at which the guests were former Waldemar campers and some who will be going to camp for the first time this year. Lee ranked third in her class, which numbered over 200. Hortense is expecting a visit from the Lambs later in the summer, after Touch finishes summer school at Baylor in Chattanooga, and before J. Here are some seaonal lines by John Masefield:

Roses are beauty, but I never see
Those blood drops from the burning heart of June
Glowing like thought upon the living tree,
Without a pity that they die so soon,
Die into petals, like those roses old,
Those women who were summer in men's hearts
Before the smile upon the Sphinx was cold,
Or sand had hit the Syrian and his arts.
I never see the red rose crown the year,
Nor feel the young grass underneath my tread,
Without the thought, "This living beauty here
Is earth's remembrance of a beauty dead.
Surely where all this glory is displayed
Love has been quick, like fire, to high end,
Here in this grass, an altar has been made
For some white joy, some sacrifice of friends;
Here, where I stand, some leap of human brain
Has, touched immortal things and left its trace.
The earth is happy here, the gleam remains;
Beauty is here, the spirit of the place.
I touch the faith which nothing can destroy,
The earth, the living church of ancient joy."

THIS IS A VARIATION of the Queen Anne house style brought to America by early settlers and still popular in many parts of the country; Gambrel roof permits full use of second floor for four bedrooms and two baths.

FLOOR PLANS: The rooms at the right comprise the basic structural portion of the first floors of this two-story house; the family room and the two-car garage at the left are also at ground level but are under a separate roof.

Modern Plan Featured In Queen Anne Design

By ANDY LANG

A colonial house can be any one of a number of architectural styles.

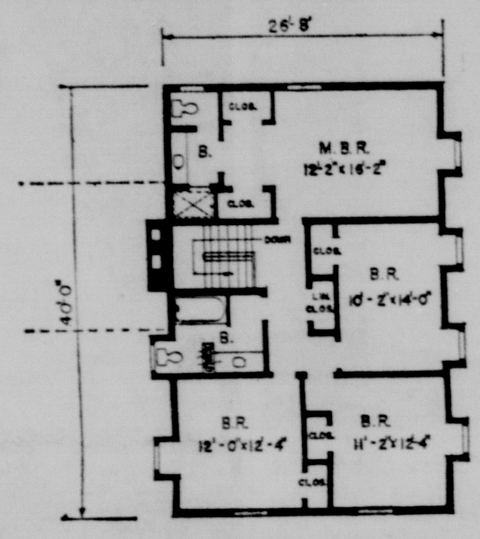

Early American homes varied considerably. How they were built depended mainly on the national derivation of the first immigrants, but also on such things as climatic conditions in different areas and the availability of certain materials. Thus, there were Georgians, Cape Cods, Dutch Colonials, Garrisons, Spanish stuccos and many others, each with several variations.

One Of Interest

One of the most interesting of these was the Queen Anne. Like the Dutch Colonial, it had a gambrel roof; that is, a roof with a broken slope of two different angles. The principal difference between the two styles was the presence in the Queen Anne of dormer windows in the lower part of the roof.

A variation of the Queen Anne has been created by architect William G. Chirgotis for the House of the Week series. The gambrel roof has been designed with no attempt to achieve a slope of a certain number of degrees, but for the particular purpose of sheltering all four bedrooms on the second floor without sacrificing floor space. The roof lines, the large chimney, the cupola, the white cedar shingles and the small, white picket fence at the front all add to the free interpretation of this colonial design.

While the exterior of Design H-87 has all the charm of the 18th century houses of its type, its floor plan fulfills the requirements of modern residential layouts. The much-desired good traffic pattern is evident, since one can go from the foyer to the kitchen, dining room, living room and family room on the first floor, or to the bedrooms on the second floor, without cross-room circulation.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-87.

Space

The combined kitchen - breakfast room arrangement offers more than 18' of width across the back of the house. The U-shape of the work area provides a maximum of counter tops and cabinets in a minimum amount of space. The picture window in the breakfast section or dinette —and the window over the kitchen sink — assure plenty of light and air as well as a clear view of the backyard. Only a few steps away is the rear service entry with a mud-room closet adjacent to the laundry room.

The living room has wall areas well suited to various kinds of furniture arrangements as does the adjacent dining room. Off the entrance foyer are a lavatory at one end and, on the other, an open stair with a midway platform for welllighted halls on both floors. Informality would likely be the order of the day in the family room, nearly 20' long, with pine-paneled walls, a brick fireplace and a large sliding glass door leading to the spacious outdoor terrace.

Bedrooms

On the second floor, three bedrooms are close to the main family bathroom. The fourth room, occupying the entire rear of the floor, is called a master bedroom suite by the architect. It has two large walk-in closets, a large private bath with a tiled shower stall, a full-length counter vanity and a compartment enclosed water closet. Entrance into the bathroom is through louvered doors which may be left open, if desired, to provide a "dressing room" appearance.

The old-time flavor of this house has been preserved by having a rear auto entrance to the two-car garage. The front of the garage thus seems to be part of the over-all structure. However, access to the garage can be made directly from the foyer by means of the portico that shelters the front entrance.

MUSICAL TALE

LONDON (AP) — Charles Dickens continues to provide material for musical comedy. "A Tale of Two Cities" is now being adapted, repeating the transition formula applied previously to "Oliver Twist" and "Pickwick Papers."

Sponsoring the project is Jerry Wayne, who plans a West End tryout prior to production on Broadway. The script is being done by Constance Cox, who did another version of the novel that is currently being serialized here on television.

EXCELLENT PLACEMENT of family room, with its brick fireplace, enables it to be entered from either front or rear of house without crossing any rooms.

The Formal Tea Table

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Last Wednesday's Fifth District Garden Center Program was presented by Mr. W. L. Harker whose subject for the June bride was, "The Formal Tea Table." Mr. Harker completely arranged the design and showed it on the proper table setting during the program which proved to be helpful to those entertaining the bride. It was so timely.

When once we learn to make the tea table design we feel secure in executing any formal design during the year. Real pleasure comes with working with an abundance of flowers, especially when we know they will be on the formal table. It is well to know the type containers so that we know how to harmonize the flowers and containers in such a way that they "belong" to each other.

We are told that the afternoon tea has long been regarded as an English custom, but now more Americans are engaging in their cousins' form of entertaining. This is a time when peace and relaxation are enjoyed — away from our busy schedule. The tea time may be simple and intimate for only a few people, or very elaborate for hundreds, as the bride's announcement tea.

Fresh, Dainty

In each case the appointments are always lovely, dainty and fresh. The very best of china and silver is used. There should be an uncrowded effect, all appointments well spaced in order to show off their beauty. The tea table should be very inviting and charming. The cloth is usually fine linen, nylon, organdy (embroidered or appliqued), or Alencon lace, in pastels, ivory or white. An overhang of about 18 inches is usually desired for a graceful look.

The candelabra, of silver or crystal, are ever popular for the formal tea table. Floral designs made within the candelabrum to form a centerpiece are always in good taste. Tall tapers, usually white or matching the cloth, are effective with pastel flowers. Carnations, chrysanthemums and roses with snaps and miniature ivy are appropiate flowers for the formal table for the bride. For his program Mr. Harker used white stock, white carnations and white pom-pons. With these he made a lovely design for the bride's table in a white antique compote with a crystal bowl.

Crystal candelabra with tall white tapers were used as an accessory. The cloth was white net over satin. Smilax was used as a trim for the edge of the cloth. Baby ivy was used as a filler in the design of white flowers. This created a pleasing, soft, accent, adding grace to this elaborate design. Hope you enjoyed this program, one of a series dedicated to the bride in this month of June. Next Wednesday, Dr. John Wright, from Louisiana Tech, will present the program.

Summer Reading

Since summer is at hand, meaning — long, leisure hours, why not catch up on your reading. The center is very proud of the many new books added to the lending library. You should take advantage of this and come by the center to browse around. I am sure there is something that you are planning, such as a new patio, a new home, additional landscape ideas, pools, waterfalls, fountains, underwater lighting ideas, water plants, fall garden plans, and many, many other gardening and landscaping ideas.

There are books in the center on these subjects. Of course, the flower-arranging books are numerous in the center with many new additions this year. Just to list a few of the new ones they are: A Treasury of Christmas Decorations, by Zelda Schulke; Japanese Floral Art; by Rachel Carr; Junior Flower Shows, Catherine Cutler; National Plant Conservation Guide, Burns; Therapy Through Horticulture, Watson and Burlingame; Modern Abstract Flower Arrangements, Cypress; Flowers of the World, Lemmon and Sherman; At Home with Flowers, Kestel; Nature, Art and Flower Arrangement, Cyphers; The Flower World of Williamsburg, Dutton; The Gardeners Fern Book, Foster; The Art of Flower Arrangement, Edwards; Chinese Flower Arrangement, H.L.Li; Flower Designs With Accessories, Soutar; Garden Pools, Fountains and Waterfalls; Flower Arrangements Through The Year, Patricia Roberts; lool African Violet Questions Answered by Twelve Experts, Van Pelt Wilson; and The American Home Garden Book and Plant Encyclopedia, editors and staff of The American Home.

Handsome New Plant

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

No new pot plant that has been introduced to cultivation in the past decade or so can equal the purple setcreasea for color of foliage and versatility of use. As soon as gardeners learn that this beautiful wandering jew like plant can be left out of doors over winter, it will be used in more and more gardens for summer display.

Regular readers of this column will recall several discussions and references to setcreasea. I brought it home with me from a collector of rare Mexican plants in 1953. The gorgeous violet of the foliage with the winter sun shining through it in a window outshone all of the wandering jews of every kind. Even queen's spiderwort looked pale beside these violet leaves. When the few pink flowers opened in a small bunch at the ends of the mature stems, the effect was most unusual.

No Reference

No botanical reference could I find in even the great library of the University of North Carolina, and it was not until I searched this plant out at Kew, at the Cambridge Botanical Garden unsuccessfully and finally found it in the greenhouse —a puny specimen with a long collector's number — at The Edinburgh Botanical Garden that I was sure of its identity.

We now know that a Puerto Rican nurseryman propagated it from a plant that he saw in a window box at the Tampico airport. It was named by a Dutch botanist from a plant at the Dormstadt Botanical Garden! Such are the wanderings of beautiful plants.

Easily Rooted

Although setcreasea has not wandered to all the gardens of the South, it will not take too long to do so because, like all wandering jews, it is easily rooted in water. It was with a great deal of excitement that I reported its hardiness over winter because I could see that here was a reliable brilliant violet foliage plant for terraces and something to combine dramatically with grey. The upright character of the stems is delightful, and the way the older ones finally weep over the edge of a pot, leaving room for the new ones, creates a well rounded effect that leaves nothing to be desired.

Pots of setcreasea in sunny spots on a terrace are more more colorful than almost any plant one can think of. The flowers are beautiful when they come, but the foliage is the thing: brilliant at all times if it has the light. In a collection of wandering jews, this gorgeous plant looks like an orchid.

Here's The Answer

QUESTION: I am getting ready to paint our house. It is about 10 years old and has wooden siding. The only way in which I can paint the house is to do it all in a single day, starting very early in the morning. But I am constantly reading about not painting while there is dew or moisture on the house. In our area, almost everything is covered with dew early in the morning. What do you suggest?

ANSWER: Why must you do all the painting in a single day? Assuming that you have only one day a week available, why not split the entire job into two weeks? Paint the front and one side of the house one week, the rear and the other side the next week. This will prevent stopping and restarting in the middle of an exterior wall.

But if this is not practical, use one of the exterior latex paints which permit application over a damp surface. In making your selection, read the label on the can to see whether this is recommended. However, if you already have purchased a solvent-thinned oil paint, you will run into trouble if you apply it on a damp surface. In that event, you will have to try the two-week method suggested above, starting the painting on a day and at a time when the sun has dried the surface. (You can get Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 954, Jamaica, N.Y. 11431.)

QUESTION: We burned a large hole in one of the asphalt tiles on our basement floor. How can it be repaired so that it won't be noticeable?

ANSWER: Better forget about trying to make a good patch. It's easier to take up the damaged tile with a cold chisel and a hammer. Break up the tile into pieces, then remove the pieces.

NEW YORK (UPI) — New products to keep the homemaker whistling while she works:

A canister vacuum cleaner that will whistle with her — at least when its dust bag needs emptying. In addition to the whistle signal, the cleaner has an indicator that shows how much dust is in the bag. A two-speed motor, with a peak of 2¼ horsepower, combined with a power selector adjustment permits six different cleaning settings, for gentle dusting to heavy cleaning. A "vibra-beat" nozzle gives three-way rug cleaning: air powered beaters shake out deep dirt, fluff and raise carpet nap; adjustable brush picks up lint and surface litter; suction whisks dirt away. The teardrop-shaped canister moves on non-marring, no-tip wheels; stands on end for stair cleaning or storage. There is an extra-large diameter hose, 17-foot heavy duty retractable cord and handy toe operated on-off switch. Accessories are housed in vinyl carrying case.

Self-sticking bumper buttons, applied to chairs, picture frames, door backs, appliances, the bottoms of vases and other decorative items prevent scratched walls, marred furniture. The bumpers, small round or square cushions of a resilient, flexible material, are unaffected by age or temperature; will not harden or crumble. Pressure - sensitive adhesive, protected with a peel-off paper backing, makes for simple application to any clean, smooth surface.

A new chemical cleaner for that wonderful-to-cook-in but hard to-clean Teflon cookware; designed to remove unsightly discoloration and stains without the scouring or scrubbing which is disastrous to the no-stick Teflon coatings.

An aerosol no-stick, no-scour spray coating for kitchen ware — pots and pans, ice cube trays, rotisseries. The spray is applied evenly to a clean surface and the utensil then baked in the oven or, in the case of self-heating appliances, turned on to high temperature to allow the coating to bake in. Following treatment, which is said to last about six weeks, surfaces will wipe clean with just a flick of a soapy sponge. Can be used also to repair scratched Teflon-coated cookware.

A new soap pad, designed to outlast four conventional steel wool pads. Formed of two layers of nylon webbing impregnated with grit and heat-sealed around an inner reservoir of long-lasting detergent, the rectangular shaped pads will not rust or splinter.

Plastic mitts to keep hands dry, protect them from the ravages of housework, come with permanently attached utility pads for scouring pots and pans, doing dishes, washing walls and windows, even for body massage or applying makeup. Easy to slip on mitts are above wrist length, cuffed; come in a set of seven with pads for different uses.

Polypropylene plastic scouring pads, non-rust, non-scratch, masquerade as realistic oranges and lemons, complete to a bright green leaf; give a lift to kitchen decor.

An air purifier to keep refrigerator interiors sweet and clean, prevent transfer of odors of foods. The small, perforated steel container, containing highly porous membranes packed with activated charcoal, sanitizes air while remaining odor-free itself; is effective about six months. Placed on lower shelf the refrigerator's circulatory process (cold air falls, pushing warm air up to cooling unit) assures that all air in the box will pass through the purifier.

Enriching Landscape

By AUBREY H. DAWSON

Annuals should have been blooming well for several weeks. They will continue to be an enriching element in the landscape if given attention.

Feed them with a complete fertilizer such as an 8-8-8 at a rate of two pounds per 100 square feet of area. Distribute fertilizer evenly and water well. Be sure to keep fertilizer off foliage as it may burn the plant. Remove the old blooms as annuals that are forming seed will soon cease to bloom. Water well — sprinkler systems and soaker hose methods are best for providing sufficient water that encourages deep rooted annuals.

Remember new home owners, if you have planted new shrubs or trees during the early spring, that this summer will be the most crucial for these. Because of a reduced root system, many plants have difficulty in becoming established. Give a good soaking rather than frequent light sprinkling. A mulch also will aid in conserving moisture.

If you planted a tree, perhaps you'll like to follow a suggestion of Neil Odenwald, our specialist in horticulture. Build a small levee four or five feet out from the trunk in a circle around the tree. Less water will be lost from run off. During wet periods a small break in the levee will allow excess water to escape.

Did You Know

This is the 29th year that our nation has saluted the dairy industry in the month of June. The first dairy cattle were brought to Jamestown, Virginia in 1611.

Milk and milk products provide 28 per cent of the nation's essential food nutrients for slightly more than 19 cents of each food dollar.

Milk is a leading source of calcium essential for building bones and teeth, required for proper functioning of muscles and nerves and the normal clotting of the blood.

Milk pays its way in reducing diets by contributing liberal amounts of protein, calcium, phosphorus, and other needed nutrients along with a very moderate number of calories. It's a safeguard to health in any reducing diet.

Riboflavin in milk is essential for growth and contributes to health and vigor in adult life.

Pickles

You, Mrs. Homemaker, probably have your favorite pickle recipe, but here are a few hints to help you prepare top-quality pickles. Water that contains iron darkens pickles. Where hard water is chemically treated, boil and let cool then remove the film. Use pure granulated salt, if available, but don't use iodized table salt since it may darken pickles.

Lime is often added to water in which pickles are soaked to make them crisp. You can buy it as calcium hydroxide or calcium oxide. The amount of calcium oxide must be cut by one-fifth of that recommended for calcium hydroxcide. When a sharp acetic acid taste is desired use white distilled vinegar. It also is desirable to lighten color. Cider vinegar, with its mellow acid taste gives a nice blending of flavors but darkens the product.

To heat pickling liquids, use utensils of unchipped enamelware, stainless steel aluminum or glass. Don't use copper, brass, galvanize or iron utensils as they may react with acids or salts to cause undesirable changes. For brining, select a crock, stone, or large glass jar, bowl or casserole.

Pickle products require heat treatment to destroy organisms that cause spoilage and to inactivate enzymes that may affect flavor, color and texture. Adequate heating is best achieved by processing the filled jars in a boiling water bath. Procedures for fermented or brined cucumbers and fresh pack dills are slightly different from usual water bath procedure. For these latter products start to count the processing time as soon as the filled jars are placed in the actively boiling water. This prevents development of cooked flavor and a loss of crispness.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

A bureau drawer that sticks can be fixed by anyone — If impatient, forceful tugging and shoving haven't rendered it completely useless.

The sticking usually is caused by one of two things. Either the wood has absorbed too much moisture from the air. Or one or more parts of the drawer have come loose.

Very often nothing more is required to make a drawer operate smoothly than rubbing the sliding parts with paraffin or one of the lubricants especially made for use on wood. This treatment should be repeated about once a year or whenever the drawer shows signs of becoming balky again.

Last Resort

If the drawer appears to be in good condition, yet the rubbing does not eliminate the sticking try sandpapering the sliding parts. While planing is often recommended, this should be done only as a last resort because of the danger of taking off too much wood. In either case, seal the newly exposed wood pores with a coat of shellac. (You can get Andy Lang's Know - How booklet, "Wood Finishing In The Home," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 954, Jamaica, N. Y. 11431.) While you're at it, You might as well shellac all inside surfaces of the drawers.

Repair Method

When part of a drawer has come loose, it should be repaired in the same way as it was originally constructed. That is, use the same type of fastening: glue where glue had been used; brads where brads had been used. Be certain to scrape off any traces of the old adhesive before applying the new. And, after removing any loose brads, don't use the same holes to renail. The exception to all this is when you have enough knowledge of carpentry to make what you think will be a change for the better. In using glue, make sure it's one of the strong wood adhesives and not one of the types generally used for paper, cardboard and other light materials.

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

"The Panda and The Spy" closed Saturday after a successful run, playing to good audiences every day.

In listing the cast of "The Panda and The Spy" last week, we inadvertantly left out the names of Rush Cheshire, Susan Golson, and Chuck Fuller. Hard as we try to be accurate in this column, those mistakes do creep in.

Try outs will be held at Strauss Playhouse on Tuesday and Wednesday from 2 until 5 p.m. for the parts of the children in "The King and I." Thirteen children will be cast, all ages. They should be able to sing well.

Technical Director Chris West is sending out a call for the following props, needed for "The King and I": a large wall map of the world, circa 1860; Chinese stool with padded top; large world globe; large gong; small gong; whip; victorian chair, single size victorian spool bed; and two window shade rollers, at least five feet long.

Full House

Try outs for "Mr. Popper's Penguins" brought out a full house of big and little hopefuls last Sunday afternoon. George Brian, who will direct the play, had all he could do to hear everyone read during the scheduled two hour period, but he managed somehow.

Among those reading were: Jeanie Taylor, Shelley Fuller, Melissa Hoogland, Celeste Oakland, Mary Oakland, Chuck Fuller, Kathy Lawn, Kathy Brown, Jan Martin, Polly Prince, Carmen Dickins, John Beezley, Marty Mullens, Elaine Henry, Brenda Bell, Jeff Hazel, Marcy Solomon, Kathy Heart, Terri Watson.

Gaye Easin, Jan Christmas, Rodney Clark, Jeanie Wren Wiley, Dobbie Grayson, Vicki Morrow, Nora Hoodemaker, Stephen Hazel, Jim Frazier, Leslie Garaway, Holly Bayne, Beatrice Nugent, Fred Browning Wyley, Bob Jones, Julia Hoodemaker, Dixie Harrison, Ken Harrison, Bruce Harrison, Dale Dillingham, Joy Dillingham.

Fairly Large Cast

Even though "Mr. Popper's Penguins" has a fairly large cast, it's obvious that many who tried out will not be disappointed in not being cast. Dr. Brian urges you not to be discouraged, though. There will be another children's play at Christmas, with a completely new cast.

Your reporter heard of one little girl this week who was old enough to have had small parts in three Little Theater plays, and sophisticated enough to know that she had to come somewhere near fitting a role in order to get it, yet not old enough to understand all the mechanics of how a play comes into being.

When she heard the title, "Mr. Popper's Penguins," she hied herself down to the public library and immediately checked out the book by that name, hoping to get a head start on the other aspirants. She was half way through it when she went to her mother and remarked, "You know, Mother, this is a very good story, but the people who made the book left out something."

Casting Page

Interested, mother asked, "What did they leave out?"

"They forgot that page at the beginning where it tells who's in the story!"

After a good bit of ribbing from her older brothers and sister, the problem was solved. The child was thinking of a script, where the characters are listed on the first page, and didn't realize that "Mr. Popper's Penguins" had been a book before it became a play.

With only one or two roles left to cast, we can list those selected to play the parts in "Mr. Popper's Penguins". They are: Chuck Staneart as Mr. Poppins, Holly Bayne as Mrs. Poppins, Jim Frazier as Bill Poppins, Nora Hoodemaker as Jane Poppins, Louise Hazel as Roberta, Rodney Clark as Oscar, Bob Jones as the Serviceman, Kenneth Wheeler as the Expressman.

Chuck Fuller as the Bill Collector, Julie Hoodemaker as the Reporter, Lana Martin as the Camera Girl, Bradley Strain as Mrs. Callahan, Fred Wyly as Mr. Greenbaum, Bruce Harrison as Captain Cook and Nancy Solomon as Greta.

The parts of Captain Cook and Greta are the leading penguin roles. Supporting penguins are: Leslie Ganaway, Ken Harrison, Emily Stone, Matt Shepherd, Jeanie Wren Wiley, Jeff Hazel, Jan Christmas, Jess Kramar and Kimberly Gilstrap.

It was announced at tryouts that performances will be matinees on July 9, 10 and 11.

Divorcee Starts Pacific Voyage Despite Warning

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A blonde divorcee set sail Saturday for Hawaii, alone in a 25-foot sloop.

Sharon Sites, 34, hopes to be the first woman to sail from Los Angeles to Hawaii alone. Her only company is a four-inch turtle.

She has had a year's yachting experience. Her sailing instructor sought unsuccessfully to convince her not to attempt the trip, and the U.S. Coast Guard warned her the plan was "extremely hazardous."

Among the hazards mentioned:

She can't leave the tiller to reduce sail if she gets caught in a storm. She'll have to catch naps at the tiller.

She has no radio to call for help.

She has no gasoline for her one-cylinder inboard engine in case of emergencies.

The distance to Hawaii is 2,300 miles.

Said Coast Guard Capt. Walter Curwen:: "Should you or your boat become disabled, your survival would depend almost entirely on your plight being discovered by a passing vessel. Because of the great distance involved, any air search would be almost certainly fruitless."

Mrs. Sites, who quit her job as a dental secretary to invest her $9,000 savings in the boat and the trip, ignored all advice.

She loaded aboard enough food for 65 days and enough water for 90 — she expects to make the trip in 30 to 40 days — and left Marina del Rey just when she said she would, at 12 noon.

Sam The Sham Is Still Leading With Teenagers

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sam The Sham, who has given "Wooly Bully" to the nation's discriminating disc jockeys, again led the pack of recorded tunes bought by teen-agers and sub teen agers, a UPI survey showed today.

Sam's "Bully" paced the field for the third consecutive week, but its supremacy appeared to be threatened by a number which has shot up from 17th position to second place.

The oncoming favorite is the Four Tops' offering of "I Can't Help Myself" which broke into the select group in 17th place three weeks ago. Last week it was No. 5.

"Crying in the Chapel" by Elvis Presley dropped from second to third, and the Byrds' "Mr. Tambourine Man" also dropped a notch, from third to Fourth. "Back In My Arms Again" by the Supremes was in fifth.

There was one newcomer: "Tonight's the Night" by Solomon Burke.

The top 20 tunes with position last week and number of weeks in survey in parenthesis:

1. (1-7) Wooly Bully, Sam the Sham. MGM.
2. (5-2) I Can't Help Myself. Four Tops. Motown.

Governor Tells Boys To Choose Only Best Girls

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Girl friends "will have more to do shaping your life than any one else," the 76 boys in Cranbrook School's graduating class were told by Gov. George W. Romney on Saturday.

"If she doesn' inspire you to greater interest, you had better look around for another girl," Romney told the boys in his commencement address.

Romney's son, Mitt, 18, was among graduates of the all-boys' school

The Republican governor, an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), spoke from the pulpit of the Episcopal Christ church.

He said there "is nothing more important in the world than the individual. If you put the man together right, the world will take care of itself."

He told the graduates they could change their future by "wanting to develop your gifts.

"Friends will also shape your future," he added, "particularly your girl friends."

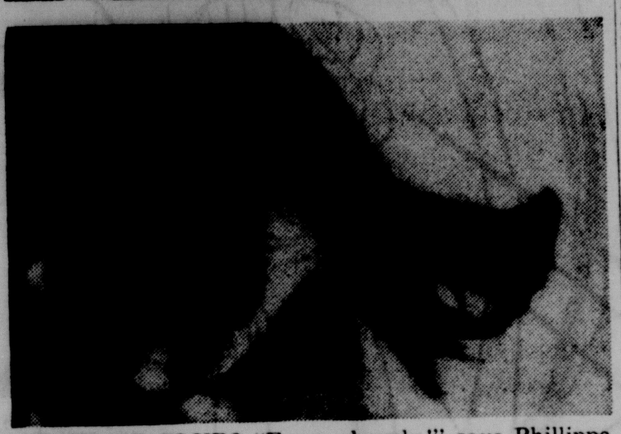

Lily Growers Travel To Olla

OLLA (Special) — During the recent meeting of the Hemerocallis Society in Monroe, many out - of - state lily growers traveled to Olla to view the three - acre day lily garden of Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Maxwell.

Mrs. Maxwell said that visitors came from Ohio, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida. The Maxwells served a picnic dinner to their guests.

The porpoise, or bottle-nosed dolphin (Tursiops truncatus), is surprisingly human-like. It is the subject of intensive research.

SHARP OR BLUR? "Focus sharply!" says Phillippe Halsman. His personality portrait (above) of Dame Edith Sitwell, English poetess, is a museum directors' selection for a special Photography in the Fine Arts exhibition. "Motion blur is effective!" says Bert Stern. "It shows movement and excitement" (photo below). Both Halsman and Stern are on the guiding faculty of the Famous Photographers School.

Blur To Sharpness Range For Camera

Now that the excitement and clamor of activities of the International Photographic Exposition has subsided, there is time to think of some of the more noteworthy thoughts of well-known photographers who were present. One event that stands out was an all-day session of the Guiding Faculty of the Famous Photographers School of Westport, Conn. During that session, there was an interesting swap of ideas where Philippe Halsman, master portraitist, told "Why I Like Sharp Portraits," and Bert Stern, creative photo illustrator, explained "Why I Like Blur."

"Any craftsman uses the best tools he can get," Halsman explained. "When I buy a lens, I check to make sure to get one that is sharp as possible. Sharpness, to me, is an important element of good photographic craftsmanship, so when I make a picture, I try to utilize all the sharpness that the lens is capable of giving me.

Basis

"Perhaps an even more important reason is based on my idea of the process of seeing. First we take a general impression, but then we scrutinize the details. In order, therefore, to record the meaningful details, I need a sharp picture.

"Personally, I feel frustrated whenever a portrait doesn't permit me to get all the information I want through the infinity of details which a sharp lens can disclose. Under normal conditions, a picture should be a likeness of reality. Reality has details. . . so should the picture.

"Of course, photography is a graphic art as well as a medium of communication," Halsman conceded. "In the first case, it is for the eye; in the second, it is for the mind. A graphic artist, to please the eye, will use diffusion as a creative tool.

"As a means of communication, photography tries to inform. Its purpose is to make us a witness to reality. Sharpness is a means to that end. Therefore you should make your pictures with all the precision of which your photographic equipment is capable."

Must Be Reason

"If you make a unsharp picture," Bert Stern explained, "there must be a good reason for doing so. One reason for using blur is for the emotional effect it can convey. Take love, for example. . . but NOT at f-22! Love is more beautiful in a mist, at sunset, in a romantic, out - of - focus atmosphere.

"I have experimented with many kinds of unsharpness. One possibility is to use a shallow depth of field and throw the background out of focus while you hold the foreground sharp. The reverse is also interesting — showing the foreground object out of focus with something in the background very sharp. Your eye tends to travel back and forth, finding new visual relationships between the two.

"However, the most exciting kind of unsharpness to me," Stern pointed out, "is motion blur. It is something the subject is doing rather than a technique of the camera. There is a spontaneity, an unpredictability about motion recorded with a slow shutter speed that makes it an adventure every time you try it. It is a kind of creative photography more people should experiment with.

"I've also gotten spontaneity in unsharp pictures when I really didn't try for it. That happened with a set of photos I made of Marilyn Monroe only because I was using a hand-held 35mm camera and had to shoot at a very slow speed because there wasn't enough light.

"All of these methods for getting unsharpness are usually better in color than in black and white. Blurred colors tend to blend in exciting ways and produce off-beat, unusual effects.

"However," Stern concluded, "I like sharp photographs, too, if the subject calls for it. What I don't like is a fixed or constant approach to photography. The only thing that should be constant is change — and your own taste, talent and inventiveness."

Pope Paul Hears Interfaith Music

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI attended Saturday night a special interfaith concert of religion-inspired music arranged for him by the Italian state radio-television network.

Sitting on a special throne in a Vatican-owned auditorium used by Rome's Santa Cecilia Music Academy, the Pope heard the network orchestra perform works by Igor Stravinsky, a Russian Orthodox; Darius Milhaud, a Jew; Jean Sibelius, a Protestant, and Gian Francesco Malipiero, a Roman Catholic.

Stravinsky, visiting Italy, sat near the Pope.

The orchestra, under conductor Armando la Rosa Parodi, played Sibelius' "Solemn Melodies," Malipiero's "St. Francis of Assisi," Milhaud's "129th Psalm" and Stravinsky's "symphony of Psalms."

Pope Paul listened intently throughout and nodded his head in rhythm with the Stravinsky piece.

First Season Hope Bright For Theater

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Repertory Theater of New Yorks dazzling new Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts has a new set of directors, Jules Irving and Herbert Blau, who ran the Actor's Workshop in San Francisco for 13 years. Here one of them tells the hopes for the season opening October 21.)

By JULES IRVING

NEW YORK (AP) — America's newest playhouse will be unveiled this fall.

Architecturally, it is splendid. It sits in a corner of Lincoln Center Plaza in the heart of New York City, looking up at its next-door neighbor, the new Metropolitan Opera House, and across the Mall, past the soon-to-be-installed Henry Moore sculpture, at the State Theater and Philharmonic Hall.

It has two theaters, the Vivian Beaumont and the Forum. It cost $9.5 million to build. Herbert Blau and I are its directors.

For us, there seems to be something in the air, fallout notwithstanding, and it feels good. Perhaps the headiness is the result of our being transplanted from San Francisco to the center of power, but we'd like to think there's something more going on than big buildings and a hollow culture blast.

It is an institution in the fullest sense of the word, with continuity and perspective, existing with its own way of thinking and doing. Its audience identifies not with a single production, but with a body of work which is molded, shaped and formed through the seasonal life.

The poet is identified by his body of work. So are painters and sculptors. Our kind of theater, then, is a single artist made up of single artists. Our very life is continuing, collective experimentation. We have no prejudice against buildings that are architecturally splendid.

There'll be no countdown, no checkout, no formulas. We do retain conscious symptoms of schizophrenia which allow the data processing machines to function, but only where they behave themselves. On the stage we do what we have to do. We wouldn't know how to do anything else.

Our idea of an impossible theater germinated in San Francisco for 13 years and then we left in a flurry of love-hate hysteria to try it, as they say, in the big time. The lovers-and-haters never understood that we always thought San Francisco was the big time.

Now the $64 question is posed both cynically and hopefully: "Will these guys change? Will New York buy it?"

Certainly the answers will be forthcoming, and sooner perhaps than we'd like to have them, but the real issue is that we are what we are and we've been invited to play.

What seems to be breaking through the culture smog is a genuine and real desire of the power structure to embrace the artist in the way he wants to be embraced.

It's a big ball park. We'll see.

Severe Drought Grips Mexico's Northeast Areas

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A killing drought spreading over a large northeast Mexican area is causing families to leave their villages in search of water, dispatches from Veracruz and Tamaulipas states said Saturday.

The reports said that the "Huasteca" region which includes parts of southern Tamaulipas, San Luis Potosi and northern Veracruz states is specially hard hit.

Cattle are dying from lack of water and pasture, the reports added.

Panuco Mayor Faluberto Valdez was quoted as stating:

"We have never seen such a severe drought. Never before have the Chairel and Tamos lagoons dried up. Thousands of fish have died in both lake beds."

Tank cars of water for herds are being taken daily from Tampico to Maosal and Tamos, the dispatches said.

Attempts to drill new water wells yielded only small amounts, since salt water began flowing after a depth of four feet was reached, it was added.

In Panuco, water has been rationed, the mayor said.

Frog Jubilee Draws 55,259

OLLA (Special) — A record crowd of 55,259 attended the four - day Calaveras Frog Jubilee held recently at Angel's Camp, according to Taylor Finlay of Olla, who attended the event.

The prize for grand champion frog went to "Lovely Louisiana," the entry of Gov. John J. McKeithen of Louisiana. The frog was judged on size, color, conformity and physical condition.

Although "Lovely Louisiana" was the best looking frog at the fair, it managed to jump only six feet in actual competition — a medium sized frog named "Hops" jumped 14 feet, 8 inches to win the jubilee.

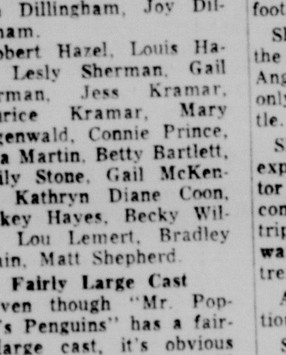

100 Years Of Union Stamp Topic

More than 100 countries throughout the world have been issuing stamps honoring the 100th anniversary of the International Telecommunications Union. The ITU was founded a century ago in Paris with 20 states as initial members and with the name "International Telegraph Union." It was changed in 1932 to more properly indicate its expanding functions concerning world-wide agreement of communications between countries. The ITU is now a specialized agency of the U.N.

The United Nations honored the centenary with two commemoratives, a 5 cents and an 11 cents. Depicted is the theme "from semaphore to satellite" showing a communcations satellite and a man sending semaphore flag signals. The 1865-1965 also appear.

Haiti has announced the issuance of a new stamp honoring the bicentenary of the first metropolitan church of Haiti, Our Lady of Assumption. Also to be issued by Haiti is a set picturing flowers of the area. It is scheduled for release in October.

Two new stamps have been added by West Germany to its "Gates, Palaces and Castles" series, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. Both will bear a 70 pfennig denomination and will feature the East Gate in Soest, Westfalen. The color is green on a gray-tinted fluorescent paper without watermark. One stamp will be inscribed for use in Berlin and the other for West Germany. Also on the German agenda is a 20 pfennig stamp to commemorate the 100th anniversary of its Sea Rescue Service. This service, somewhat like the U.S. Coast Guard, is an organization which has saved over 5,000 lives in mishaps at sea.

A News Analysis

Congress Chews At LBJ's Reins

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is becoming restive under ironhanded White House direction and is beginning to reassert its prerogatives by pinpricking President Johnson on sensitive issues.

Qualified observers believe that the frustration and uneasiness members feel over the increasing U.S. involvement in the war in Viet Nam have contributed, as a kind of political reflex action, to several recent actions to curb presidential authority.

Some members seem to feel that if they aren't going to be consulted on Viet Nam they are going to have more to say about what is going on closer to home.

The Senate's consideration of the foreign aid authorization bill is a case in point.

A majority of members not only cut $200 million off Johnson's $3.44-billion request but they wrote into the bill an amendment reducing to 15 per cent—instead of the 20 per cent the administration wanted—the amount of money the President could transfer to international agencies from a $780-million development loan fund.

By a voice vote the Senate also put into the bill a provision directing the President not to extend aid to nations which have confiscated American property. Presidents don't like to be tied down by such restrictions.

For practical purposes Congress's ability to shape presidential policies lies in three general fields: (1) it can reject or alter his legislative proposals, (2) deny funds to carry out his program or revise money bills to restrict his operations, or (3) reject his appointments of key officials.

Johnson's critics as yet have not been able to muster the voting strength to reject any major program. But they, and even some of the President's friends, are making some headway in the field of restricting executive action.

The House vote last Thursday to give Congress a veto over the closing of military bases followed a White House partial retreat on the decision to close 11 Veterans Administration hospitals.

Because of the congressional revolt, the number of hospitals to be shut down was reduced to six.

But the House Veterans Committee has approved a bill to give it a veto over construction of new and closing of old hospitals.

In a similar situation, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., are leading a Senate drive to prevent the closing of 12 Public Service hospitals.

The Senate's recent attempt to force Johnson to end Sargent Shriver's dual role as head of the Peace Corps and director of the antipoverty program came a cropper when the House Foreign Affairs Committee refused to go along. But the action was added evidence that Johnson's decisions in such matters no longer are going unchallenged in Congress.

The President has been served with notice that there is resistance to his selection of retired Air Force Gen. William F. McKee as Federal Aviation Administration head.

Congress has specified in the FAA law that the administrator must be a civilian. Johnson asked for passage of a bill to waive this provision and to permit McKee to collect $30,000 a year as administrator and to hang on to $8,404 in annual military retirement pay.

Johnson probably will have his way in this matter. By exercise of his veto power he could shake off some of the other shackles Congress is trying to place on him.

But no matter what happens in the end, Congress is showing a strong distaste for the smell of the ink on the LBJ rubberstamp.

Maxwell Taylor Used To Finding New Viet Rulers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three times while Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor has been in Washington reviewing the Vietnamese situations there have been governmental turnovers in Saigon. But Taylor sees nothing beyond coincidence in this.

Since he took the diplomatic post about a year ago, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has returned to Saigon from Washington only once to find the same government that was in the saddle when he left.

The ambassador is known to believe, however, that the timing of the political turmoil and his absences frm Saigon have been coincidental.

Contrary to Communist allegations that the United States engineered the latest South Vietnamese governmental reshuffle, Washington authorities have made plain their dislike of such political instability. And it is their hope that much of Phan Huy Quat's regime will continue to operate despite the military coup Friday.

Klan Rallies Near Natchez

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — Almost 100 hooded and robed Klansmen gathered in an open field near here Saturday for a rally shortly after memorial services were staged for a slain Negro civil rights leader across town.

Members of the United Klans of America, headed by Natchez truckdriver E.L. McDaniel, gathered just off busy, four-lane U.S. 61. The group staged a car-caravan to the spot.

FBI agents photographing the passing cars and klan-clad participants, were targets for jeers and shots. Some yelled: "Why don't you get a job?" and, "Take my picture, you -- --".

Earlier, Negro leaders held a memorial service marking the second anniversary of the slaying of Medgar Evers. He was field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People when he was shot from ambush in 1963.

The services were held at a Negro church. Two robed and masked Klansmen circulated about the city inviting residents to their rally, while the memorial services were being held.

McDaniel, wearing a full green robe and a pointed hood, invited FBI agents to mingle among the Klan members. About a dozen agents, most with cameras, waded into the crowd. Almost 100 bystanders stood back from the highway watching.

Most of the rally was devoted to verbal blasts at a weekly newspaper editor, Forest Johnson, who publishes the Miss-Lou Observer. The Natchez newspaper has been critical of Klan activities and has called for law and order in dealing with social changes.

McDaniel played a recording tape which he said was an interview of a former Klansman by Johnson. In the tape, names and activities of area Klansmen were revealed.

When McDaniel was asked where the tape came from, he told newsmen to "ask Johnson."

Johnson told a newsman the tape was a fake and that the real tape was turned over to the FBI.

The rally was staged near a highway billboard, one of many throughout the South, showing a picture of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. attending a workshop which has been mentioned as a meeting place for subversives.

Before the tape ended several Klansmen left and the number of bystanders dwindled. A boiling sun bore down on the crowd during the afternoon.

A large detail of Mississippi highway patrolmen was on duty near the rally point, while Natchez police handled traffic.

Just Memory

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The roast beef of Old England may become just a memory in many British homes, Jack Dunman of Oxford University told a Labor party affiliate group meeting here.

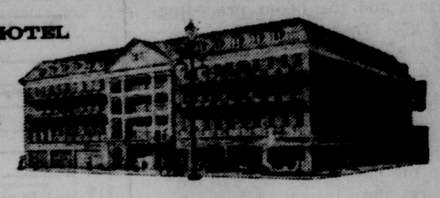

He said beef is likely to be so expensive that it will be as rare to the average Briton as fresh Scotch salmon is today.

Book Autograph Party Scheduled In West Monroe

An autograph party for a childen's book written by two West Monroe women will be sponsored by the Book Nook of West Monroe from 2 until 6 p.m. Saturday at the First Baptist Church adult building in West Monroe.

Mrs. Lola Crowell and Mrs. Bess Burns are co-authors of "God's Wonderful Plan," published by Exposition Press of New York City.

Natives of Louisiana, both are teachers and graduates of Louisiana Tech. In addition, Mrs. Crowell has a Masters degree in Education from L.S.U. They are authors of articles on educational subjects and Mrs. Crowell taught arithmetic over former television station KLSE in Monroe.

The book tells of a grandmother relating a simple, yet beautiful story about the wonders of the Bible and teachings of Jesus to her grandchildren. The idea of writing the book was brought about by experiences the authors had with their own grandchildren.

"The thought behind it is to help boys and girls live a more satisfying life," Mrs. Crowell said. "In the book we try to share our love of God and this world with them," Mrs. Burns added.

The public is invited to attend the autograph party Saturday.

LSU To Offer Russian Studies

BATON ROUGE (Special) — In September, Louisiana State University will begin a coordinated program of Russian Studies. Establishment of the program was made possible through support from the U. S. Office of Education, which has designated the University as a center for Russian Language and Area Studies.

Emphasis in the program will be at the undergraduate level, though sufficient courses are being added in the history, economics, language and literature of Russia to permit offering the master's degree.

Dr. John A. Thompson, head of the LSU department of foreign languages, said the center would expand the educational opportunity of the people of Louisiana.

LBJ Acts To Reassure Public About Economy

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The argument about what's ahead for the U.S. economy grew more heated during the week.

President Johnson attempted to reassure the public that all is well now and that the outlook is good. He conceded there are some problems.

The stock market was buffeted by the debate and suffered its worst loss on Tuesday since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963. It also was battered Wednesday by a false rumor that President Johnson had suffered a heart attack.

The dispute over the economic future stemmed from a statement the previous week by William McChensey Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. He said he saw "disquieting similarities" between the present business situation and the boom preceding the 1929 crash.

Leon H. Keyserserling, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, charged that Martin "misled" the public in drawing a parallel between the current economic situation and the one that resulted in the Depression.

Rep. Wright Patman,D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, urged that Martin resign.

After meeting with Martin and other advisers on economics and finance Thursday, President Johnson said he saw "no reason for gloom or doom" at this time.

He predicted "solid but moderate gains" for the economy during the rest of this year.

Apparently in an effort to erase speculation that he was unhappy about Martin's speech, Johnson told reporters there are "no cross-currents, divisions or conflicts" within the administration.

Martin, a former president of the New York Stock Exchange, said he accepted full responsibility for his speech and would not want to change it. He said he had reported on the nation's record-breaking prosperity and had urged "let's keep it that way."

From another quarter came an optimistic appraisal of the outlook for the automobile industry.

Donald Frey, vice president of Ford Motor Co., said car sales are running at a rate of 8.8 million a year and this pace is likely to be sustainable. In 1964, a record 7.6 million U.S.-made cars were sold.

The government reported that in the first quarter of this year manufacturing firms rolled up a 22 per cent profit gain on a 10 per cent rise in sales.

However, many economists have predicted that the economy will not grow as rapidly in the balance of the year as it did in the first three months.

A government survey showed that businesses have boosted their spending plans for expansion and modernization this year to a record $50.4 billion. This is 12.3 per cent above the record $44.9 billion in 1964 and compares with $50.17 billion projected in the previous sampling in February.

Major retailers of general merchandise reported sharp sales gains in May.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., biggest mercantiler in the country, had sales totaling $559,226,341, up 11.9 per cent from $499,544,888 a year earlier. J.C. Penney Co. posted a 10 per cent gain to $171,309,651 from $155,705,894 in May 1964.

The automobile industry set a new six months production record during the week. With nearly three weeks left in June, the output surpassed the old January-June record of 4,435,076 set last year.

Production for the week was estimated at 207,100 cars, compared with 168,293 the previous week, which was shortened by Memorial Day, and 179,983 a year ago.

Steel production during the week rose for the third consecutive week. Producers turned out 2,747,000 tons of steel, up 0.7 per cent from 2,727,000 the previous week.

Weather Trade Factor In Grain Futures Market

CHICAGO (AP)—Weather became a trade factor in the grain futures market last week as harvest of the winter wheat crop expanded slowly and farmers approached the finish of planting of such major crops as corn and soybeans.

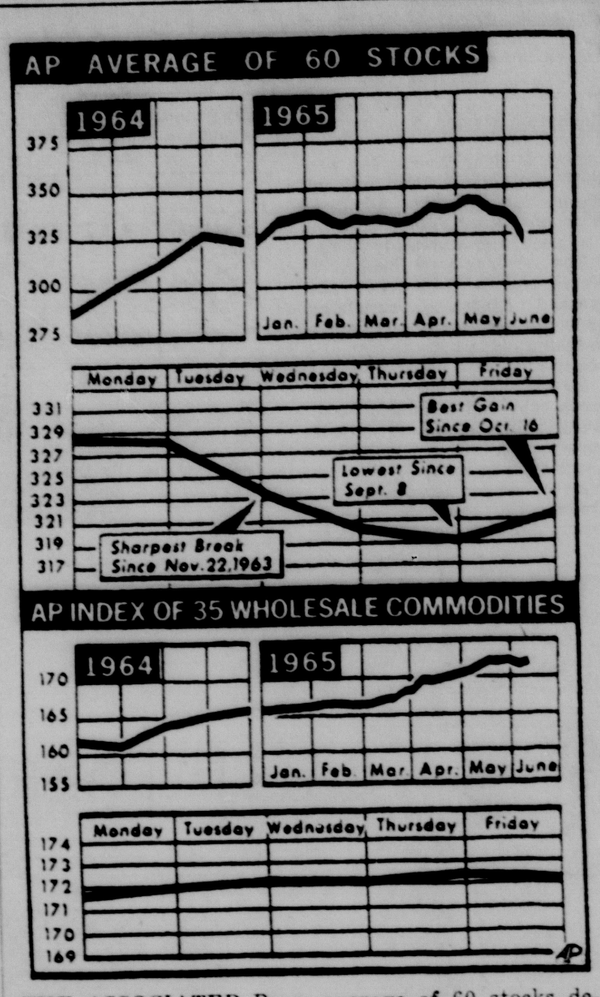

Wheat and new crop corn were the only gainers but they moved slowly, with speculative buying rather cautious and geared partly at times to actual and potential commercial support.

Moisture delayed the harvest in areas where the crop already had matured and added to the danger, traders said, of further losses. The frequent rainfall included most of the corn belt also and it enhanced the outlook generally.

The trade in soybeans was active most days and on some the volume exceeded 100 million bushels.

At the end of the week, soybeans were 1 to 5¼ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, July $2.88¾-89; wheat 1-1½ higher, July new grade $1.39½-⅝; corn ⅝ lower to ¾ higher, July $1.31⅝-½; oats ⅜-⅞ lower, July 67¾ cents; rye ⅜-⅞ lower, July $1.14¾.

Locations Down In Area Drilling

Completions in the Monroe Oil and Gas District remained about the same, while the number of new locations fell off considerably compared to last week's tabulation.

The weekly report issued by the office of Duncan St. Cook, director, showed 15 completions. There were 14 the previous week. However, the 20 applications for permits to drill compared to 36 the week before.

The completions were listed in Harrisonburg and Parker Lake Fields of Catahoula Parish; Lake Curry, Lake St. John and Wildsville of Concordia; Catahoula Lake (4) of LaSalle; Monroe Gas Field (4) of Ouachita and Big Island and North Big Island of Rapides Parish. (see listings below).

Concordia and Catahoula Parishes each had five new locations. Concordia logged three wildcats and one each in North Shaw and Wildsville; while Catahoulas were three wildcats and one each in South Monterey and Tew Lake. Monroe Gas Field had three new locations, two in Ouachita Parish and one in Morehouse. Rapides, four; and Caldwell, Madison and Union Parishes one each. (see listings below).

There were a total of 79 locations, 33 active, 73 inactive and four abandoned.

Five re-completions were all made in LaSalle Parish: Little Creek Field — J. Stock Market Declines For Fifth Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market slide continued last week for the fifth straight week as the pace of trading stepped up to the fastest in about a month.

The increased trading bespoke a greater degree of emotionalism in the decline than previously, analysts said. There were some factors which triggered emotional selling.

On Wednesday, for instance, a completely unfounded rumor that President Johnson had a heart attack swept Wall Street and stocks were dumped rapidly. The rumor was swiftly proved false and a backlash of buying nearly succeeded in wiping out the loss. Then prices had another sinking spell.

On Tuesday the street expressed some concern about a report that U.S. troops would be authorized to fight alongside South Viet Nam forces if requested by that government. A threat from the Viet Cong to call international help if such a U.S. step were taken added to the general apprehension about developments in that part of the world.

President Johnson's statement Thursday that he saw "no reason for gloom or doom" about business and that he and his economic aides did not believe stock prices were high in relation to earnings, served as a partial counterbalance to what Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin said the previous week.

Martin had observed a "disquieting similarity" between the present and the 1920s but said the United States has a good chance of avoiding depression.

The market was already in the midst of its fourth straight week of decline when Martin made his statement.

The Dow Jones industrial average last week fell 19.17 to 881.70. Since the Dow industrials made their historic high of 939.62 on May 14, this indicator has fallen 57.92.

This compared with the plunge of 199.15 from December 1961 to June 1962—a drop of 27 per cent during that outstanding decline compared with appoximately 6 per cent so far this year.

Volume for the week was 29,270,750 shares compared with 21,941,830 the week before. Of 1,547 issues traded, 1,207 fell and 214 rose.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell 7.1 to 321.3, wiping out all its gains made earlier this year.

Corporate bond prices lagged during the past week under the weight of extremely heavy offerings of new debt issues. Municipal and treasury bonds turned in a mixed price performance.

Volume totaled a par value of $59.48 billion, compared to the previous week's $47.28 billion.

Salvaged Cairo To Be Restored By Ship Builder

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — The Union gunboat Cairo will leave Vicksburg Monday after resting in the muddy Yazoo River for 102 years after being sunken by Rebel mines.

The Cairo, now in pieces aboard a barge, will be towed to Pascagoula and the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp. for restoration.

The initial stage at the giant shipyards calls for dismantling wood from metal and estimating costs for the restoration of the gunboat.

The Cairo was raised from the Yazoo by state, county, city and private aid last summer by a professional salvager.

The ironclad, 170-foot long, is to be restored and brought back here to be exhibited.

After a cost estimate is made in Pascagoula, it will be submitted to the state legislature for action and financing.

The Cairo sank in 1862 when it came into contact with two Confederate mines, or electrical torpedoes.

Bay Springs Field Gains New Oilers

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—The Bay Springs Oil Field of Jasper County recorded three new oilers during the week, to bring the total producers today to five in the new field.

Shell Oil Co. and Pan American Petroleum completed their Hall No. 1, flowing at the rate of 720 barrels of oil per day from perforations in the Cotton Valley sand at 14,546-58 feet for an extension to the field.

Shell, Pan American and Skelly's joint venture, the awindham No. 1, quarter-mile southeast extension logged 70 feet of oil sand and was tested at the rate of 700 barrels from 14,491-503 feet.

Skelly Oil Company's Evans No. 1, north of the discovery well logged 60 feet of oil sand and is in the process of being completed in excess of 600 barrels.

Skelly's No. 1, Alexander, is below 14,300 feet and nearing the coring point for the field sand. Skelly rigged up at its Troy Sims No. 1.

The Bay Springs Field was discovered in late January and is considered a major find. The discovery well has produced over 60,000 barrels of oil since its completion.

Shell Oil Co. has set production casing to 16,900 feet in its wildcat, the Brown No. 1, in Smith County, northwest of the Bay Springs Field to evaluate commercial worth of oil shows found in the Smackover Lime formation. The well was drilled to 17,157 feet and failed to log oil shows in the Cotton Valley sand that produces in the Bay Springs Field.

The state's deepest drilling operation, Phillips Petroleum Company's No. 1, Josephine, in Perry County, has passed the 20,000 foot level. The wildcat has encountered hydrogen sulphide gas with high pressures below 19,700 feet, with operators coring below 20,260 feet. The venture is northeast of Wiggins and is to be drilled to 20,500 feet. An abandoned wildcat drilled in Stone County, southwest of the current test, holds the state depth record, reaching 20,400 feet.

Near Paulding in Jasper County, Shell Oil Co. drilled below 14,400 feet in its wildcat, the Read No. 1. Operators were releasing no information. The venture is to go to 15,100 feet.

Red China Compared With The China Of Olden Days

EDITOR'S NOTE — A drab today, hope for tomorrow; some progress, but still a long way to go; dislike for the Soviet Union, hatred for America. That is Red China today, as seen by a British teacher and novelist, who has just come out of the land of no flies, no dogs, no cats and no fun.

By JOHN HAYLOCK
Written for Associated Press

PEKING (AP) — "The native quarter with its narrow, filthy streets" says Everyman's Encyclopedia (1931-32) on Shanghai.

The streets may be narrow in parts, but they are not filthy; in fact, all the streets of the four cities I visited in Red China were completely free of litter.

When I asked how this has been achieved, I was told that the people had been educated to keep the streets clean and that if someone drops a piece of paper a passerby will politely remonstrate with him.

Shanghai, "known once as the center of gangsterism and a city of beggars and prostitutes" (Encyclopedia Britanica 1962) is today the most moral of cities. Shanghai, where people starved to death on the streets and about whose thoroughfares fathers carried babies to whose backs "for sale" notices were fixed, is now without beggars; no one is in rags and everyone has enough to eat.

There is no doubt that the people have enough to eat. In their blue cotton clothes they look poor but they do not seem undernourished, and the children look healthy and are full of energy.

Luxuries are expensive, essentials are not. The average salary for a worker is $28-$32 a month — there is no income tax — but rent is never more than 10 per cent of the salary.

Rice is rationed but it is cheap and at the moment the ration is liberal. Eating apples, rather poor ones, were selling at 17 cents a pound this spring, eggs 3 cents each and cooked ham cost 50 cents a pound. A bicycle costs $56 and a steel wrist watch $36. In the station restaurant in Peking prices ranged from 17 cents for bacon and eggs to 60 cents for a pork dish.

The anti-U.S. - imperialist theme is played up more in Communist China than is the anti-Soviet revisionist one.

But there is a fairly deep feeling that the Soviet Union let China down by talking of "peaceful coexistence" and by withdrawing their atomic weapons from Cuba.

In the hotels for foreigners there are pamphlets in many languages attacking former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Russian revisionism.

On walls, where in the West there would be advertisements for cigarettes or soft drinks, there are political posters. These are usually anti-imperialist.

One of them is a picture of a tinhatted Vietnamese soldier holding five shells. Behind him are antiaircraft guns and two U.S. planes falling in flames. The caption reads, "Celebrate the great victory of the Vietnamese people in their struggle against the U.S."

Another poster is of a Negro, a Chinese and a Cuban looking hopeful with a small U.S. soldier in the foreground holding a bomb and sinking in the sea. The caption reads, "The final victory must belong to the awakened people."

There are more speeches against the U.S. than there are against the Soviet Union, and posters, ballets, songs and little dramas acted by children have an anti-U.S. theme rather than an anti-revisionist one.

The anti-U.S. propaganda is plugged so intensely and so childishly that one wonders if it can have much meaning. One wonders also what the propagandists would talk about if the Viet Nam and the revisionist problems were solved. I expect they would find a lot wrong with other parts of the world, for the only really perfect country in China's eyes seems to be Albania.

The ill-fitting, blue cotton clothes that are worn by both sexes make everyone look like unsmart train engineers, but after a week or two one notices that some are better dressed than others. For example, the blue tunics and trousers are sometimes made of gabardine and a gabardine suits costs $40, while the cotton, which is rationed, costs 70 cents a yard.

One must remember that the traditional clothes for ordinary people were not so very different and putting women into trousers is not an innovation in China.

Leather shoes cost $7 a pair and many people go about in canvas sports' shoes or black slippers.

Such uniformity in dress is depressing, but perhaps it achieves what is intended, which is to make everyone feel equal.

Housing in the cities is poor and in many parts squalid. On Changan Avenue, the main thoroughfare of Peking, are low, standardized one-story dwellings with no bathrooms. In many cases housewives have to fetch water from a faucet in the street.

In the lanes behind my hotel on Changan Avenue I saw families with one room or two rooms to live in, rooms furnished with rough wooden beds and upright chairs and lighted by one naked globe.

As far as one can judge, the population seems hardworking, docile and anxious to do its best. China at the moment is in the dedication period, like someone who had been converted to a new religion. It is similar to the Soviet Union in the Thirties and Yugoslavia in 1947. It is likely — at least it seems to me — that as in those two countries, the momentum, the fanaticism, the restrictions will eventually slacken in China and China's outlook will become more moderate, but not perhaps for 15 years.

The sudden withdrawal of the Soviet technicians hampered China's progress but the departure made China depend on herself. One is told with pride that China now produces her own oil, enough for her home consumption. Anything mechanical that is made in China is pointed out to one, such as the Phoenix and Red Flag automobiles. There are few of these on the streets and their design is not up to date, but for China to be making motors cars at all signified a considerable advance.

In industry, China has made great strides, but she has a long distance to go.

One is impressed, almost staggered, by the number of bicycles everywhere. In the cities there are buses and trolley-buses, invariably filled to overflowing. The traffic of a main street consists first of bicycles, pedicabs and handcars, and then of trucks and buses. A car is a rarity and is stared at. Passenger trains are few and far between. There are only three trains a day from Peking to Shanghai.

One is surprised to find that there are no bars at all and no cafes except in the parks. This perhaps explains the number of people one sees strolling about the streets staring at anything there is to stare at, such as a foreigner or pictures of the war in Viet Nam. One has the impression that people do not have many places to go to. Bookshops are full of readers, if not buyers.

To the Westerner, life in China appears to be hard and dull but one does have the feeling that the standard of living is improving. The people have few luxuries — I saw a student photographing his friends who were posing round a transistor set and how proud they were of it! — but they do not look miserable.

Meaning Of Magna Carta Described

EDITOR'S NOTE — On June 15, 750 years ago King John set his seal on the Magna Carta at Runnymede, setting the basis for modern democratic government. In the following article, Lord Shawcross, famed British lawyer, tells of the meaning of Runnymede to modern man. Lord Shawcross — then Sir Hartley Shawcross — was the chief United Kingdom prosecutor at the Nuernberg war crimes trials and later British attorney general 1945-51.

By The Rt. Hon. Lord Shawcross, Q. C., LL. D.
Distributed By The Associated Press

No high sounding declarations about the rights of man, democratic government or the rule of law were heard on that pragmatic occasion at Runnymede 750 years ago when King John reluctantly set his seal to Magna Carta. Yet it is the truth that barons and king fashioned in Magna Carta the corner stone of the rule of law as we know it today and one of the great landmarks in the long journey towards democratic government through Parliament.

In their very practical approach to the grievances inflicted by John's systematic abuse of his privilege the barons dealt with problems incidental to feudal society and it may be true that the reference to freemen in the famous Chapter 39 of the Charter was concerned rather with the privileged than the humble. But the language was large and was to fall in due time for interpretations by the courts.

"No free man shall be taken, imprisoned, disseised, outlawed, banished or in any way destroyed, nor will we proceed against him except by the lawful judgement of his peers, and by the law of the land."

That final phrase setting the law above arbitrary power was to resound wherever the English tradition of law and freedom was to make itself felt.

Many times confirmed — with this great chapter untouched — the Charter reached the statute book in 1297 and still remains in force. As the common law moved forward early medieval words fell for interpretation in the light of existing circumstances. The complete equality and freedom of all men under English law received its final seal in the judgment which set free a Negro brought to England — where the air "has long been too pure for a slave."

It was indeed long before this that the Charter secured its position as the bulwark of the liberties of all men in England. Indeed, some of its original chapters were clearly drafted to protect all men, high and low. One looks however to the 17th century to see it become, in practice and politics, a fundamental law. It was upon the solid legal foundations of the Great Charter that Parliament challenged the Stuart kings and their doctrine of divine right. By this time for English law the Charter was imperishable.

Imperishable, too, for all countries to which the influence of English law has spread. When Englishmen set out to find new homes across the Atlantic they carried a Charter confirming their heritage of freedom. Later the Constitution of the United States directly echoed Magna Carta in its 5th and 14th Amendments. The words "due process of law" used in the 14th century in the application of the Great Charter thus became the very sumbol of liberty for all free men.

Parliamentary government, though not directly sprung from the Great Charter, is inseparable from the concepts of the rule of law and the freedom of the individual enshrined in it. It is fitting, then, that the 750th anniversary of Magna Carta should be joined with the 700th of Simon De Montfort's historic assembly of 1265, progenitor of the Parliaments which wrested supremacy from the crown in the 17th century and sent three great constitutional landmarks to the statute book — the Petition of Right (1628), the Bill of Right (1689) and the Act of Settlement (1701), foundation of modern constitutional monarchy — beside the corner stone of all, Magna Carta.

National Hostess Also Busy Mother

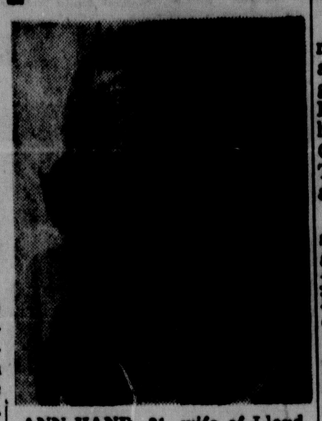

By JORIE LUELOFF

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shiny black procession of limousines at the State Department's diplomatic entrance is occasionally interrupted these days by a two-year-old station wagon.

"I would like to drive something more glamorous — like a convertible," the petite blonde at the wheel explains with a cheerful wink.

She could pass for a college girl. But she is Mrs. Lloyd Nelson Hand, 31, mother of five — which makes the station wagon a must — and wife of the State Department's chief of protocol.

As such, the Hands act as official hosts to foreign VIP's making state visits to this country. Heads of state and royalty spending time here are likely to see more of the Hands than anyone else, so the impression they make is important. It's a job requiring tact, social sense, diplomatic know-how and a lot of stamina.

ANN HAND, 31, wife of Lloyd N. Hand, the new State Department chief of protocol, was happy when her husband received the appointment because she likes meeting people of different nationalities and learning about their countries. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Ann Hand's life has been centered "mostly in the home."

The daughter of a Houston lawyer, she had hopes for a career in opera when she enrolled in the University of Texas. But she stayed only six months.

"I met Lloyd the first day I was there," she says, "so it was rather a short career in college."

In 1952, they eloped in Newport, R.I., where he was stationed as a Navy lieutenant. After a stint in Korea and a year in the hospital "with some sort of unknown chest ailment," he went back to law school at the University of Texas.

"Those were rather lean years," Mrs. Hand recalls, blue eyes twinkling. "We went back to school with three children — by the time we left, we had four. It was rather nip and tuck."

After receiving his law degree in 1957, Hand went to work for Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson in Washington. He left Johnson's staff in March 1961, to become vice president of a Los Angeles insurance company, and the Hands moved to Bel Air, Calif.

"When we left Washington," Mrs. Hand says, "I never thought we'd come back. We bought a home in California, loved it and were so happy. We felt sort of settled in our life."

But a few days before Christmas last year, President Johnson called Lloyd Hand and offered him the post of protocol chief. Hand accepted, and Ann was suddenly transformed from a housewife in Bel Air to a public personality in Washington.

The transition to Washington was hectic. Even the hardy Mrs. Hand admits, "I really don't know if I'd want to go through that again."

"It started with a trial run with Premier Sato of Japan — we flew with him from San Francisco to Washington."

The schedule permitted only one day to search for a home in Washington. There had to be at least eight bedrooms for her family of seven plus a housekeeper and a poodle named Gigi. She found exactly what she wanted — a white brick house near McLean, Va., which the Hands are now renting. Then she flew back to the coast and spent two days packing and supervising movers.

On Jan. 21, when her husband was sworn in, Ann Hand assumed a role from which many women, far more experienced in the ways of diplomacy, would flinch. But, she says, "I just try to take each day and event as it comes. Perhaps I'm too optimistic, but everyone's been so kind. You just sort of jump in, cross your fingers and off you go. I'm not shy and I like to get out and be among people.

"I'm lucky in that I have the kind of husband who's there — he boosts your morale and makes you feel you're up to many things."

As with any job, there are drawbacks.

Her children, who range in age from 4 to 12, are paying a price. "This is the only bad feature," she says. "We're gone from the children more than we ever have been before. But they know it's something important for us to do and do well."

She takes them into consideration when arranging her social schedule. The Hands normally must go out about four evenings a week, but she makes an effort to be available during the day.

"Luncheons and teas could perhaps be an everyday thing," she says, "but I try to keep my days as free as possible for the children."

But there are advantages, too. Surprisingly, with her husband's busy schedule, she's able to spend a lot more time with him. "That's what appealed to me about the job," she says happily. "So many times it's sort of a team operation."

So far Mrs. Hand is enjoying her new life. She likes meeting people of different nationalities and learning about their countries. She was delighted at the prospect of her first trip abroad — a hop to Ouagadougou, Upper Volta, in West Africa, with her husband to escort President Maurice Yameogo and his wife to Washington.

There is one aspect of the job she hasn't yet gotten used to — interviews. "I just die every time," she says in her mild Texas accent. "The one thing that worries and frightens me more than anything else is that I'm talking too much."

For the most part she faces the future with confidence. She refuses to worry about misplaced name cards and forgotten names causing international repercussions.

"Most of the international crisis is right here in our living room," she says cheerfully, getting up to answer the calls of Corky, 4, who couldn't find his hat.

Crushed By Truck

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Noble C. Finch, 60, a Hinds County penal farm guard, was killed Saturday when a truck loaded with sand backed over him.

A coroner's jury ruled the death was accidental.

Jesse Johnson, 18, of Jackson, an inmate and driver of the truck, said Finch was directing the truck into a work area.

Johnson said he heard Finch cry out but was unable to stop the truck in time.

"You have to pump the brakes twice," Johnson said, "and I only got to hit them once."

Queen's Honors For Beatle Four Stirs Reactions

LONDON (UPI) — Britons reacted Saturday with laughter, astonishment and outright anger to the elevation of the Beatles to Queen Elizabeth's honors list as members of the Order of the British Empire. The Beatles themselves were amazed at the news.

"In the name of all that's sane if not sacred, isn't pinning a royal medal onto four Beatle jackets just too much?" asked Donald Zec, entertainment columnist of the Daily Mirror.

"What about the Dave Clark Five, The Bachelors, The Animals and the Rolling Stones?" asked the Daily Mail in a page one editorial.

Friday's announcement that the long - haired entertainers could now add M.B.E after their names, and wear the rose pink satin sash of the order about their necks, became the story of the day.

Brian Epstein, manager and discoverer of the group that rose from humble beginnings in a Liverpool cellar club, said the four were "deeply honored."

"I know that sometimes they have taken things lightly but even they are amazed," he said.

"I didn't think you could get it for this sort of thing," said Beatle John Lennon. "I thought you had to drive tanks and win wars and stuff."

She told officers she suffered a blackout at the wheel.

Newspaper Tycoon Spreads Interests

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — At age 40, Roy Thomson was running a motor car supply agency in a small Canadian town. Today, Lord Thomson, at 70, is the biggest newspaper publisher in history — and probably the richest.

His vast paper, communications and electronics empire operates 124 newspapers in eight countries — including 18 in the United States, scores of magazines and highly profitable, ever-expanding television enterprises.

Asked if he'd like to own all the newspapers on earth, he starts to laugh, catches himself, mentally changes gears and replies: "Own 'em all? I guess in theory I would."

The son of a poor Toronto barber, Thomson today is a baron, going strong — and searching for more newspapers.

Thirty years ago — during the Depression — in North Bay, Ontario, a fast-talking salesman told Thomson a carload of radios in an area noted for poor radio reception.

Undaunted, Thomson bought a small second-hand transmitter on credit, rented a dressing room in a dusty theater in North Bay, got on the chilly air with records, and weather reports and news which he read himself. The radios sold. The station prospered and so did Thomson.

"I once thought," he recalls, "that the most beauitful music in the world was a spot commercial at 10 bucks a whack."

The radio station got him into publishing.

"There was this newspaper in Timmins," he said. "It was doing pretty badly. I bought it by making a down payment of just $200 and paying up the rest — about $6,000 — in monthly installments. That newspaper cost me only $6,000 to buy, and now it makes me $150,000 every year."

Acquiring more Canadian radio stations and newspapers — and running them profitably — he looked eastward across the Atlantic and headed for Scotland, the home of his ancestors.

LORD THOMSON poses in his office in the Sunday Times building in London. He is the world's leading newspaper publisher, with a chain of 114 newspapers plus scores of magazines and TV stations in various countries around the world. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

His first triumph was buying that respected daily, the Scotsman. He parlayed that into getting the license for Scottish television as commercial television came to Britain in 1955. Securing the license for about $120,000, Scottish television in about two years was making a net profit before taxes of $393,000 a month. Roy Thomson was now ready to advance on London.

He bought Lord Kemsley's Sunday Times, and a nationwide chain of morning and evening papers. In four years after his arrival from Canada, the once poor barber's son became one of Britain's largest newspaper proprietors.

Thomson was elevated to the peerage by Queen Elizabeth II on Jan. 1, 1964. Selecting his own motto, It became: "Never a backward step."

A broad-shouldered, large-headed man with slicked-back gray hair and eyes that sparkle behind thick glasses, Lord Thomson is friendly, articulate and easily approached. Sitting behind a modern desk on the sixth floor of the ultramodern Sunday Times building — called Thomson House — he answered questions easily and directly.

Q. What are your ambitions in the United States? Would you like to acquire more newspapers there?

A. "Most certainly. We're now negotiating for 10 or a dozen more. We'll have many papers in the United States one day."

Q. You publish millions of words daily. Do you ever write?

A. "Not too often. Only when I do a high-level interview, such as with Khrushchev, but generally speaking, I don't write. I find that writing, like any other profession; well, you've got to practice to be good and I just don't have the time."

Q. What are the chances today of the young man with average education in the United States or Canada becoming a millionaire? A. "If you want to make money you've got to have complete determination to make money. You've got to be willing to sacrifice leisure and pleasure. Generally speaking, most people think that's not worthwhile, and they're not willing to do it. I thought it was worthwhile and I made many sacrifices. I did things that I would have preferred not doing. I mean I'd have preferred to rest, but I couldn't because of my responsibility."

Q. At the age of 65 you took over the Kemsley newspapers, yet many firms retire workers at the age of 65. Is a man washed up at 65?

A. "I can't understand a man quitting at 65. I'm now over 70 and I think that, barring some accident I'm good for another 10 years. I made more progress and became worth more money between 65 and 70 than I'd made in the whole previous 65 years. Now my aim is to make more between 70 and 75 than I made out of the first 70. I doubt if I'll do it, though, because already I've got quite a bit."

Q. Do you enjoy being a millionaire?

A. "I do. I do, indeed."

Q. What is happiness:

A. "The basis of happiness is your health and a happy family life. I've always had a very happy family life. I had a wonderful wife who died some some years ago, and I have three children — two girls and a boy — and they've never given me a bit of trouble. I'm very proud of them. They love me and I love them.

Catholic Hierarchy To Study Documents

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Revised copies of the Vatican Ecumenical Council's controversial documents on religious liberty and birth control were sent Saturday to the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Vatican press office announced the new texts, along with two others — on missionary activity and on the priesthood — were sent to the bishops to give them time for study before the council convenes for its last session, starting Sept. 14.

The religious liberty document states that all men have liberty of conscience. Another document, on the Church in the modern world, deals with birth control and atomic weapons.

All four of the documents were revised since the last council session on the basis of recommendations made by council participants.

Because of this they will be discussed again as well as voted on.

Only amendments will be voted on in five other documents, or schemata, and consequently copies will be given to the bishops when they arrive in Rome.

These schemata are: on the pastoral duties of bishops, on the religious life, on the training of clergy, on Christian education and on relations between the Church and non-Christian religions.

This last contains the highly controversial declaration on the Jews.

The schemata, including that on the Jews, all have received preliminary approval in formal council votes and thus, by council rules, are not to be substantially changed. That is why voting on these documents will concern only amendments, which cannot be such as to change the essence of the documents.

Two other schemata are to be voted on in their entirety at the final session along with any amendments. They deal with divine revelation and the apostolate of the laity.

Like all Vatican Council documents, the schemata sent to the bishops were not made public.

However, Church sources previously reported that the major change in the modern world scheme concerned nuclear weapons. The original document urged that nuclear weapons be utterly destroyed and banned. Sources said last month that the new text recognized that a nation may be forced to stockpile and use nuclear weapons to insure its own survival.

The sources also said changes in the text concerning birth control were of a lesser nature. The original text dealt with birth control in a general way, noting difficulty often arises in family planning.

Pope Paul VI has named a special commission to review the entire birth control question, including the new contraceptive pills.

Italian Bishop Emilio Guano, who supervised the writing of the schema, has said that the Pope "reserved to himself the final judgment" on the findings of his birth control commission. This was taken to mean that the council would not be asked for its view.

The Roman Catholic Church forbids artificial birth control and approves only the rhythm system.

EARLY MORNING subway riders in John Lindsay's Manhattan district have been surprised to have the tall congressman walk up to them, stick out his hand, and say, "Good morning, I'm your congressman." Lindsay believes in meeting people. "When you shake a man's hand you learn what he is thinking," he says. He's already out meeting the rest of New York, on a 6:30 a.m. until midnight schedule. Here he stops to talk to a man on New York's Fifth avenue. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

John Lindsay: Maverick Takes On Democratic City

By MAGGIE SAVOY

NEW YORK (AP) — When the Grand Old Party was torpedoed last November, there were few survivors.

One was lanky, good-looking Rep. John Vliet Lindsay, an outspoken 43-year old maverick. He started even himself by outpolling Lyndon Baines Johnson in the predominantly Democratic 17th Congressional District of New York, once known as the "silk stocking district."

Running as an independent Republican ("without reference to the national ticket") against a conservative Republican and a Democrat, Lindsay pulled the highest percentage of any major Republican in the nation.

Then he headed back to his chores in Washington, while the old pros whispered predictions of bigger and brighter things ahead, perhaps even a future New York governor. In some quarters was heard the phrase "presidential timber."

Suddenly last month he announced he was going to run for mayor of New York City, which may very well add up to the nastiest job in the country.

His prospective opponent is Democrat Robert F. Wagner, seeking a fourth term in a city of more than 8 million, where registered Democrats outnumber Republicans 3.5 to 1. The last Republican to win in New York City was Fiorello La Guardia (who held office from 1933 to 1945) and he did it only as a fusion candidate.

No Republican can get elected without picking up large groups of independents and disgruntled Democrats.

"Its like climbing the Matterhorn without eiderdown jackets and ropes," is how Lindsay describes the task he has cut out for himself.

Not Anxious

There are many observers in New York who claim that Lindsay not only knows he can't win, but that he fervently prays he doesn't work a miracle and become mayor. For the job of mayor of New York can be a dead end, and no mayor in recent times has gone on to bigger political things.

What Lindsay has to do, these political observers say, is to prove to the Republican organization chieftains — both on a state and national level — that he has vote getting abilities in democraic New York City ("he has to lose, but by a close margin").

This, plus the sure Republican votes elsewhere in New York, could project him into the gubernatorial or senatorial picture — and then later onto a national ticket.

Since Lindsay announced he was going to seek the mayor's job, Wagner, a widower, has suddenly become coy. He said he might not run again after all, and retire to private life ("I want to spend more time with my two sons").

Should Wagner, now considered the strongest Democrat in the state, withdraw from the race — or be beaten — it could create a power vacuum in the Democratic party into which Sen. Robert F. Kennedy might easily move. Once there, there is the intriguing possibility that Kennedy and Lindsay might be opposing candidate some day for, say, governor of New York.

As for Lindsay, he started running the moment he threw his hat into the ring. Already there has been talk of Lindsay selecting some Democrats and Liberals to run with him on a fusion ticket.

Who is John Vliet Lindsay?

"His own man," he'll tell you. A Republican by tradition and conviction ("it's the party of Lincoln, the party of individualism, the party that stood for civil rights"), he is just as apt to dump the party label.

Lindsay didn't hesitate to disavow Barry Goldwater last fall. And he won his district by 81,000 votes, compared to the 70,000 President Johnson won by in the same district.

It is already apparent that, like La Guardia before him, Lindsay intends to go before the people voteless as a Republican than as an individual above party.

In one of his first speeches since he announced, Lindsay told a gathering at the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church in Brooklyn: "I happen to be a Republican. I hope you won't hold it against me."

Twin brother. David, as pages in the Willkie convention of 1940. Then he ran through Yale, graduating in less than three years in a one-man ceremony; joined the Navy (five battle stars); ran through Yale law in two years, joined the New York law firm of Webster, Sheffield and Horan, and plunged into politics by joining the New York Young Republican Club, soon becoming president.

He left his lawn firm the first time to become executive assistant to U.S. Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell; the second time to run for Congress in 1958.

One reason he ran as a Republican was his boyhood admiration for La Guardia. "He got things done; he was afraid of nobody. The Republicans were good guys then; Tammany was the bad guys."

La Guardia's widow will be co-chairman of Lindsay's mayoralty campaign. U.S. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, a strong Republican in a Democratic city, will be chairman. Some of Lindsay's campaign buttons already read: "The best news since La Guardia."

Liberal in voice and vote, he sees it as the task of the Republican party "to redefine the role of the individual in our half-garrison, half-welfare leviathan state."

One of the authors and floor managers in the House of Representatives of the 1964 Civil Rights bill, he is now supporting abolition of the poll tax. "Local elections are a lot more important to the daily life of people — they should be able to vote for sheriff, town superintendent, school board."

He believes the future of the Republican party lies in its recapture of the "center," a position he defines as "the use of government to provide enough order in society that every human being may live in dignity, respect law and receive justice, and exploit to the limit the best in himself."

Lindsay's team pivots around another young lawyer Bob Price, 32, who has closed his own office to run all of Lindsay's campaigns.

Lindsay's day began at 6:30 a.m., when he started out on his "good morning" handshakes. At 8 a.m. he was given a schedule which usually included a business breakfast, service club lunch, several speeches.

Lindsay tries to see everyone. "I want to find out what's eating them. Sometimes it's a major issue or problem. More often a job. Some of it's petty, irritating, time-consuming, downright crazy — like the lady who wanted me to stop the CIA from amming her phone."

It's Mary's job to keep the children, wrestle the family budget, make sure her husband gets to bed early at least two nights a week, act as sounding board for his speeches, campaign at his side.

And empty his pockets at night. They're filled with bits of paper. "nicky things," Mary calls them. "But important to somebody — and they'll all be answered, somehow."

To keep them together as much as possible, they moved to Washington, saving him the 7:30 a.m.-4::30 p.m. air shuttle chore when Congress is in session. He has one of the best attendance records in the House.

To keep their life together, Mary had to cut away from personal friends, except those who don't need "nourishment"; set aside Sunday nights suppers for the family. At Easter recess they head for a tiny island in the Bahamas to water ski and read; over Christmas they ski in Vermont.

"I don't think it's damaged the children. It's made them an independent lot, and that is good. Time together is something very special, and we all make the most of it.

"There's a powerful closeness between us all. John's brother George left his law office to join headquarters; David and Robert help campaign.

"When John made up his mind to go into politics, I made up my mind to like it. There is no happiness in marriage like living with a man interested in what he's doing. Marriage is a tragedy when a man turns into an old shoe."

Pickets Protest At Baton Rouge, French Quarter

NEW ORLEANS (AP)— Like postmen who take long walks on a day off, the veterans of Bogalusa traveled to Baton Rouge and New Orleans Saturday to picket.

The pickets, protesting "police brutality" in Bogalusa, first unlimbered their placards in front of the skyscraper capitol building in Baton Rouge. About 140 marched, sang and knelt in prayer.

After a couple of hours, they loaded up again and drove to New Orleans to picket outside the home of federal courts in the French Quarter.

The New Orleans picketing was at half strength most of the hour because a school bus load of pickets got lost in the city. It didn't turn up until the demonstration was almost over.

The French Quarter picketing drew little notice. At the capitol, two white men and two teenagers showed up as counter pickets.

The pickets were dispatched on the excursion by the Bogalusa Civic and Voters League, which has been pressing a drive for desegregation of public facilities in that southeast Louisiana City of 23,000.

In Bogalusa, pickets demanding "equal job opportunity" have come under attack by white spectators several times, despite heavy police guards.

Robert Hicks, vice president of the league, said Saturday's picketing was to underline a contention that both state and Bogalusa city police have failed to protect peaceful Negro demonstrators.

Causeway Crash Victims Remain Under Treatment

NEW ORLEANS (AP)— Six persons—five from one family —remained hospitalized Saturday following a two-car crash Friday night on the Lake Pontchartrain Causeway.

Four of the injured were listed in "serious" condition and the others in fair condition.

State Troopers said Patrolman Eugene Pennington of the New Orleans police department was attempting to pass a car when he collided with a car carrying the Dean Bishop family, of Collins, Miss.

The wreck caused a one-hour halt to traffic on the 24-mile span.

Listed in serious condition was Pennington, Dean Bishop and two of his children Eddie, 10 and Linda, 9. Mrs. Bishop was listed in fair condition along with two other sons, Danny 2, and Gary, 7.

Another son Denny was examined for injuries.

PICAYUNE, Miss. (AP) — James Forbes of Picayune, a representative of the State Tax Commission, died in a local hospital Friday night from injuries received in a car crash.

Negro Confesses To Raping Girls With Fair Hair

NEW YORK (UPI))—A Negro college student confessed Saturday to raping 30 fair-haired young girls in a months-long reign of terror in apartment buildings here. The oldest of them was 13.

Police arrested Alfred Gonague, a strapping 19-year-old sophomore political science student at Brandeis University, after one of his young victims spotted him wandering around the Castle Hills housing complex.

The officers said he told them he was "'looking for girls—little blonde girls."

He confessed, police said, to being the knife-wielding attacker who raped 30 girls—all of them blonde and ranging in age from about 10 to 13—during the past year and a half in apartment buildings in the Bronx and upper Manhattan.

Authorities said they also were questioning him about the "Boston strangler" murders, a series of unsolved rapes and strangulations in Massachusetts.

Gonague told police he visited Boston about once a week when he was at Brandeis, which is located at Waltham, Mass.

"We are forwarding the fingerprints and photos to Boston authorities today," a police spokesman said.

Members of a special police force which have patrolled basements, corridors and roofs of the huge housing projects for months swooped down on Gonague Friday night after receiving a tip from the parents of a former victim.

Shooting Is Fatal

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — Robert Fairley, 23, was fatally shot early Saturday in north Gulfport, and the Harrison County sheriff's office said the woman he lived with is being held for investigation of murder.

The woman, Willie Pearl Patton, 21, is alleged to have fired six shots from a .22 caliber revolver at Fairley during a domestic dispute at a north Gulfport tavern where they shared an upstairs room.

Fairley, shot once in the neck and once in the chest, was pronounced dead on arrival at Gulfport Memorial Hospital. An inquest jury ruled he died of gunshot wounds at the hands of the Patton woman.

Of the 14,000 population on KRK, a Yugoslavian island in the North Adriatic, 4,500 are over 76 years old.

U.S. Officials Deny Urging Farm Strikes

WASHINGTON (AP)— Three federal officials denied the government had voiced any support for a farm labor strike underway Saturday in the Mississippi Delta.

A Mississippi Freedom Democratic party official had said the Departments of Labor, Agriculture, and Health, Education and Welfare gave "encouraging response" to the MFDP activities in the Delta.

Sam Botsford, deputy director of public information at HEW said, "I can think of no way in which we would be involved."

Gordon Webb, a spokesman with the Department of Agriculture, said, "There is no involvement of the Department of Agriculture in it. We are taking no part in it."

N. N. Gannon, a spokesman for the Department of Labor, said, "we know nothing about it. It is not the policy of this department to encourage or discourage picketing."

The strike has been centered in the cotton workers employed on a large Mississippi Delta plantation.

The "Mississippi Freedom Labor Union" is trying to persuade Negroes not to work on cotton plantations for less than $1.25 an hour.

The strike started on the plantation of A. L. Andrews recently.

In Greenville, Miss., meanwhile, Chief of Police W. C. Burnley accused supporters of the strike of intimidating Negro drivers hauling cotton choppers to the fields.

Burnley said, "These drivers have been and still are being subjected to gross intimidation."

Burnley, an FBI school graduate, made the remarks after an incident where a Negro was hit by a bus taking workers to fields.

Eddie M. Brown, 17, was struck by a truck loaded with laborers Friday when he tried to flag it down. He was treated and released from a hospital in Greenville.

The Greenville police chief has promised police protection of both sides in the dispute.

He said bus drivers have reported threats of beatings, slashed tires and arrests if they continue hauling the day workers to the fields.

Chief Attorney Initiates Probe In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison Saturday opened a probe of what he called a "pseudo-investigation" by the New Orleans Police Bureau of Investigation (PBI).

Garrison charged in a press conference that the PBI had no authority to investigate his office.

"I know what's going on but I must find out who's behind the woodwork," he said.

Garrison, a lieutenant colonel in the National Guard, flew here from a two-week training period at Ft. Chaffee, Ark., to start the probe. He said an attempt was underway to smear his office during an "election year political game." He planned to fly back to Arkansas today.

The Orleans Parish Grand Jury last Thursday began studying reports of public bribery said to involve the staff of the district attorney and police personnel. One man was indicted for perjury.

Garrison said an unwarranted investigation had been made for several weeks by two PBI officers.

He also said he had the assurances of Mayor Victor Schiro and Police Supt. Joseph I. Giarrusso they had not instituted the PBI probe.

Garrison added that he expects Schiro and Giarrusso to investigate concurrently with his office to get to the source of a "phony fishing expedition."

"I react very strongly to 'political investigations' of my office and I am going to be very aggressive in bringing about the exposure of whoever is responsible for attempting to damage the moral of my office and to discredit the reputation which we have worked so hard to build up," Garrison said.

Boating Parties Swept Through River Spillway

IONE, Wash. (AP) — Fifteen people — in a motorboat and six canoes — were swept through the spillway of the Box Canyon Dam on the Pend Oreille River upstream from this northeastern Washington community Saturday.

The Washington State Patrol said one of the 13 young men in the canoe party was missing.

"It's unbelievable that only one of them is missing," said Arnold Waggoner, operator at the Box Canyon Dam. "I had just returned to the powerhouse from home when I saw the broken canoes, lifejackets and debris floating in the river below the dam. There was a youth sprawled on top of the spillway gate."

The canoe party was believed to be from the Moses Lake, Wash., area. The two men in the motorboat were unhurt. They were identified as Roy Matson and Bob Haney, both of Ione.

All were swept through the spillway gate on a 30-foot high wall of water. The river is moving at 75,000 feet per second at the dam.

Cong Prisoners Increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increasing number of Viet Cong prisoners being taken, shown in Defense Department reports available Saturday, may reflect in part results of psychological warfare.

Experts said the expanding program using airborne loudspeakers, leaflet drops and radio broadcasts may be a factor in the growing number of prisoners brought into South Viet Nam lines.

They point out that it is difficult to determine whether a prisoner is captured before he can flee or whether he permits himself to be taken without a fight.

The increase in prisoners is in addition to what is reported as an upswing in the number of defectors from the Viet Cong. However, no firm figures on defector totals are available here.

The upward trend in the prisoner count and defections is in addition to what U.S. military men see as another indication of dissatisfaction in Viet Cong operations.

Atrocity and terrorism attributed to the Viet Cong have increased sharply in recent months, statistics received here indicate. This is viewed as indication that the Viet Cong, finding increased neutralism or friendliness to the South Vietnamese cause among villagers, have intensified the execution program.

One official said that the number of village chiefs slain by the Viet Cong approaches an average of one a day, plus slayings of others individually or in groups.

The monthly total of prisoners captured, while still not large in over-all figures, has increased dramatically.

In August 1964 statistics show the monthly total was 200; by January of this year it had climbed to 585. Then the seasonal slump in military action set in as harvest time began and the total fell to 335 by March. But by last month the total had climbed back to 540.

The United States through both military and nonmilitary channels, aids the South Vietnamese government in psychological warfare through providing equipment and general advice.

A table of assistance for Viet Nam shows that Nationalist China and the Philippines include psychological warfare assistance among other aid projects.

Philippine psychological warfare teams are reported to be dispersed in Saigon and the 3rd Corps area immediately north of Saigon. The smaller Chinese mission operates in Saigon.

South Viet Nam has a Chinese population estimated at more than one million who were born there or moved from China in the past two decades.

When asked if, in light of the official definition of psychological warfare as applying to either enemy or nonhostile people, the technique is being directed toward doubtful groups in South Viet Nam as well as the Viet Cong, the spokesman said:

"The government of South Viet Nam uses psychological operations against both known and suspected Viet Cong. It uses civic action (such as providing food, agricultural assistance, irrigation and water wells) to further efforts of the government in assisting their local-level officials in the task of neutralizing or countering the Viet Cong psychological war efforts directed at the villages."

Because of a high percentage of illiteracy among Vietnamese rural populations and even among troops, loudspeakers operating from planes and helicopters have been found to be more effective than printed leaflets.

Special Report

Training Ground For Red Takeover

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — The head of the Venezuelan Communist underground's mission in Cuba has outlined a master plan for a Marxist takeover in Venezuela, which the Cuban press calls "the Viet Nam of Latin America."

German Lairet, representative in Cuba of the Venezuelan National Liberation Front—FLN —, says the "fundamental aim of the armed struggle in Latin America must be the possession of total political power, destruction of the existing social system and its replacement with a new system following the Marxist-Leninist orientation."

He divides the "fight against the reactionary" governments into two main branches:

—The armed fight, which will have fundamental priority; and will be closely related to the armed movement and dependent upon it.

Struggle

The armed struggle, Lairet says, can be divided into three phases: guerrilla warfare, work within the country's army, and action in the cities by tactical units.

The FLN, Lairet assures, is "emphasizing to our combatants that this armed fight will require quite a long time and that they must discard any ideas about a quick victory. We must make clear to them that there is a long road ahead."

He warns also that "American intervention in Venezuela is very likely in case we manage to make noticeable inroads."

Lairet discussed the strategy and aims of the FLN in a recent series of lectures to about 100 Communist Chinese, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong and Latin-American students in Havana.

The former Venezuelan journalist described the subversion plan as one which could be used by other guerrilla movements to spread revolution throughout the continent.

Lairet's lectures are believed to be the first publicly to outline the FLN's master plan. The FLN is the political organization working with the FLN—Armed Forces for the National Liberation—the terrorist underground movement, for the overthrow of the Venezuelan government.

Lairet follows the credo of Cuba's Ernesto Guevara that "only with bullets" can revolution be accomplished.

An armed struggle is the only way to a revolution, Lairet explained, because this way is accomplished the destruction of the only major obstacle—"the regular army." Replacement of the army by a "popular army is the way to insure the success of the revolution."

Lairet claimed there are "many officers in the Venezuelan army currently who have deep nationalistic feelings and we must encourage and use those feelings." He said sympathetic officers and enlisted men can supply the national liberation forces, intelligence and weapons.

The Venezuelan said the FLN could attract army officers by creating a broad "national patriotic front" with representatives of all political parties and tendencies opposing the government and headed by a neutral figure of national stature. But he made clear that Marxist-Leninist doctrine must play an important part in such a front.

He described political action attendant to the armed struggle as taking "advantage of the opportunities presented by political or economic crisis."

Political

"The revolution must support such initiatives as freedom for political prisoners, defense of freedom of the press, higher salaries for the workers and others," Lairet said, but added that if these demands "are satisfied we will not cease in our fight in that case."

Lairet acknowledged the failure of the Communist terrorist campaign unleashed by the FLN against the government of former President Romulo Betancourt late in 1963.

He said: "In Venezuela we made the initial mistake of putting an early emphasis on action in the cities with the idea of obtaining a quick victory. We did not realize that this was a long fight against a system and not against a personal dictatorship."

He said that in the future, activity in the cities "must be limited to distracting the government forces, obtaining necessary respites for the gerrillas if they are in a pinch."

Lairet is treated as an official representative of another government. The FLN mission has a luxurious residence here and Lairet has the use of an American Cadillac.

Cuba has made no secret of its support for Communist movements throughout Latin America or that it is exporting revolution throughout the hemisphere.

Last November the Communist parties of Latin America met in Havana. A communique on the meeting, issued in January, said the parties had decided "to actively support the Venezuelan, Colombian, Guatemalan, Honduran, Paraguayan and Haitian fighters."

In private conversations, Cuban government officials name Venezuela and Colombia as the main targets of the pro-Castro guerrilla movement in Latin America, and as the countries where Red guerrillas will show other underground movements how to develop their tactics.

African Nation Arsenal 'Haven'

By LYNN HEINZERLING

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Prime Minister Chou En- lai of China, spreading his message of revolution in Africa on a state visit to Tanzania, found no need to offer guns and ammunition. They are already here and still coming.

Dar es Salaam means "Haven of Peace," but in the past year it has become the arsenal of African nationalism.

Here are gathered the leaders of the "liberation movements" whose aim is to bring down the remaining white governments in Africa — those in Mozambique, Angola, Rhodesia and South Africa. Chou's message that the climate was favorable for revolution in Africa was addressed as much to them as to the Tanzania leaders who surrounded him.

Changed

But the climate has changed a little since Chou made a similar pronouncement in Mogadishu, Somali Republic, a little more than a year ago. Neighboring Kenya has seen Communist agents at work, buying officials, smuggling arms and infiltrating presumably democratic institutions.

President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, the most stable and respected statesman in East Africa, does not consider Kenya ripe for revolution. His position permitted the issuance of a statement by his government throwing back Chou's revolutionary gospel.

Kenyatta's action and Tanzania President Julius K. Nyerere's firm stand for nonalignment probably say more about the success of Chou's mission than all the words uttered during the visit.

Tanzania-United States relations have been improving in recent weeks and there is no reason to feel that Chou's visit has reversed the trend. But the visit was of prime importance because it put the spotlight on the ultimate confrontation of black and white in Africa which now is taking form here. Communism is supplying the guns.

Ships call regularly at the picture-book harbor, studded with handsome yachts and grimy shows, to unload Chinese and Russian weapons. They have been coming at an average rate of about one a month. Portuguese officials say two a month.

Soviet planes fly in with more arms and ammunition.

A dozen or more organizations of "freedom fighters" headquarter here, issuing regular and violent threats against "colonialists" and "imperialists." There are strictly restricted training camps in the Tanzania countryside.

It is no diplomatic accident that Red China has its largest East African embassy in Dar es Salaam. There are believed to be nearly 300 Chinese diplomats, technicians, military advisers and espionage experts in Tanzania.

This once sleepy colonial capital, where the most sustained thought formerly was devoted to sisal growing and the humidity, now is alive with intrigue. A dozen Chinese and other Communist newsmen have been attracted here.

Diplomatic travel is limited to the city limits, unless express government permission is granted. A number of areas in the country have been designated as restricted — presumably for the storage of arms and the training of the liberation forces.

Kigoma, a railhead and formerly a resort on the west shore of Lake Tanganyika, is one of the restricted points. Five months ago, 100 tons of Communist arms were seized by Burundi authorities when they arrived at the Burundi border from Kigoma in private trucks. They included antiaircraft guns, mortars and machine guns destined for the Congolese rebels whom the Chinese support.

Only last month, 75 tons of Chinese weapons were impounded briefly by Kenya police. They were being transported in private trucks from Tanzania to Uganda, another Congolese neighbor. Included in this supment were antiaircraft guns, mortars, rocket launchers, land mines and machine guns with ammunition.

Tough old Kenyatta described the violation of Kenya's territory as "criminal folly." He finally released the weapons to Uganda after Prime Minister Milton Obote of Uganda flew to Nairobi for urgent talks.

The arrival of the weapons has strained Tanzania's storage capacity. At one time crates were piled on the playing field of National Stadium. It was found necessary to call off basketball at the stadium gymnasium because the court was filled with ammunition boxes and crates.

The campaign against white-ruled Africa actually started in 1961, across the continent in Angola. Bands of guerrillas directed by the Angolan rebel leader Holden Roberto crossed into Angola from the Congo and killed hundreds of whites and thousands of Africans in a fearful massacre. Portuguese troops soon were streaming to Angola and that rebellion now has been stifled.

Last September, the fight against another Porguese territory, Mozambique, started. Guerrilla forces under the leadership of Dr. Edouardo Mondlane, head of the Mozambique Liberation Front crossed into Mozambique from Tanzania.

This is the payoff. The road from Mozambique leads to Salisbury, Pretoria and Cape Town. The Organization of African Unity has committed itself to the battle.

Dr. Mondlane, an urbane and articulate man, has studied in South Africa, Portugal and the United States. He directs the campaign from a neat office in downtown Dar es Salaam, next to a slimming salon.

The Mozambique Liberation Front has another office on the outskirts of Dar es Salaam, a little less neat. There the pictures on the wall of the waiting room include Mao Tze-tung, Fidel Castro and Lenin.

Dr. Sheppard May Receive New Hearing

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The 6th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals which ordered Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard back to prison was asked Saturday to reconsider the case with all seven judges on the bench.

Sheppard's attorney said the case could have far-reaching consequences for the future coverage of criminal trials.

The request came in a 57-page petition filed by F. Lee Bailey of Boston, chief counsel for the former society osteopath who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1954 after being convicted of the second-degree murder of his wife Marilyn. Bailey has said he would take the case to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Sheppard has maintained throughout that his wife was killed by a bushy-haired intruder who knocked him out.

Bailey noted in his petition that the role of news media, especially the Cleveland newspapers, has been a major issue in the case since Sheppard was arrested after the July 4, 1954, slaying in the Cleveland suburb of Bay Village.

Bailey based the argument for a rehearing both on alleged errors by the three-judge panel that ordered Sheppard's return to prison and on the precedent this allegedly set by giving "news media broad and dangerous license to intrude, interfere and deliberately meddle in the trial of criminal cases."

All seven judges of the Circuit Court have rarely sat together to hear an appeal, but Bailey contended this would be justified because the Sheppard case may well become a landmark in decisions dealing with newspaper coverage of criminal trials.

Technological advances add to the urgency of the matter, Bailey added.

"News media grow more versatile with scientific aid," he wrote. "Messages which heretofore could only prejudice a community within an hour now reach across the nation in less time.

"A country which had to wait for days or weeks to decide the guilt or innocence of Dr. Sheppard 10 years ago was able to convict Lee Harvey Oswald within measured minutes of the crime of which he has been posthumously adjudged guilty.

"The future promises an era when the 'change of venue' will become as outmoded as has the steam-powered car."

There was no immediate indication on when the appeals court will rule on the petition. Sheppard remains free on bond in the Cleveland suburb of Rocky River, where he has been living with his second wife, the former Ariane Tebbenjohanns.

Sheppard married Mrs. Tebbenjohanns, a West German divorcee, a few days after he was freed from prison last July 15 at the order of U.S. Dist. Court Judge Carl A. Weinman of Dayton, Ohio. Judge Weinman ruled Sheppard's constitutional rights were violated by newspaper publicity.

The appeals court voted 2-1 on May 5 to overrule Judge Weinman and ordered Sheppard back to prison.

Cuban Students Try 'Imperialism'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "Yankee imperialism" is being tried in absentia Saturday by panels of Cuban high school students, Havana radio said.

The broadcast monitored in Miami sketched this format for the trials in numerous education centers:

Students acting as prosecutors and witnesses will spell out "the atrocities committed by the accused." They also will denounce U.S. doings in the Dominican Republic, Viet Nam, and other countries with a Communist problem.

Nothing was said about any arrangements for Uncle Sam's defense. The trials were to culminate in a Havana telecast.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR FOLKS:

If you have a rubber stamp that doesn't print clearly, turn on your hot water faucet and let the hot water run over it a few minutes. Then scrub it with an old tooth brush, and rinse well. Soap or a detergent sometimes helps, but we didn't find it really necessary. The stamp will print like new again.

Another idea: Your sponge-rubber stamp pad

MIGHT be dirty. Did you know you can hold it under the hot water, too, then put new ink on it?

You will be as amazed as I was. Surprising what you can solve, eh?

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a hint for women lucky enough to have a garbage disposal:

After grinding anything that causes odors in your kitchen, such as onions or fish, drop a slice of lemon, orange or grapefruit peel into the disposal.

The pleasant fragrance of the rind will wipe away any possibility of problems.

Mrs. James Everts

DEAR HELOISE:

After reading in your column about using sand in buckets for outdoor cigarette disposal, I would like to tell you what I use.

I take a soft-drink can and with a ball-peen hammer, make a cradle at the end of the zip opening. The cigarette will rest in the cradle while one is smoking, and can be dropped into the can when finished.

To make the cans attractive, I cover each one with colorful paper. One could also put some sand (for weight) and a bit of water (for safety) in the bottom of each can. The cans may be discarded when necessary. No cost!

M. H.

DEAR HELOISE:

Your famous nylon net, which is bought at the dime or department store for less than 40c a yard, is just wonderful to wipe the bugs off the front grill of your car!

You know how difficult these bugs are to remove, but dear, old, handy nylon net, moistened with a little water takes them right off!

Elsie McGormley

KITCHEN TIE-UP

DEAR HELOISE:

A tie rack, the kind that is shaped like a wheel and spins around, makes a dandy holder for all those little kitchen gadgets, such as a potato peeler, measuring spoons, etc.

A Reader

SCREEN DOOR TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

Screen doors and windows, when painted on the outside with a thin coat of white paint, well diluted with turpentine, become opaque from the outside, but do not obstruct the view from the inside. This idea is especially good for use on bathroom and bedroom screens.

Just Another Grandma

DEAR HELOISE:

Several summers ago we discovered another use for all-purpose plastic bags. We use them for fish creels.

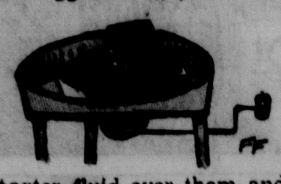

When we go trout fishing, a basket creel is heavy and cumbersome, but the plastic bag can be stuck in a pocket, and there it stays until we catch a fish. If no fish are caught, we haven't carried the bulky creel along for nothing.

Yvonne Bradley

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a suggestion on barbecuing:

I save all my egg cartons, and when it is time to start the fire I put my pieces of charcoal into the cups of a few egg cartons, pour fire-starter fluid over them and light the boxes.

Sure works for me. The carton makes a perfect holder for each piece of charcoal and also absorbs the fluid and holds it. Saves waste.

DEAR HELOISE:

To freeze fruit and such . . . we use quart plastic containers, line each with a plastic bag first, and then let them freeze. In a day or two we lift out the plastic bag and have a nice block, easy to store, and can reuse our plastic containers.

Also, through the plastic we can see what has been frozen! Had we left the contents in the containers we could not identify them without turning the containers over and trying to read the labels, which usually are on the bottom.

Mrs. L. Cimetta

DEAR HELOISE:

I found that vinegar and water mixed half and half and put in a spray bottle is excellent for cleaning mirrors and windows.

Just spray on a light film and wipe off. It doesn't take much wiping either.

Roberta Brewer

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a hint from my husband:

For our camping trip, he purchased long pieces of upholstery foam, just the size of each child's sleeping bag.

These foam pieces are so useful because they never need to be inflated like an air mattress and the sleeping bag never slips off the mattress in the night.

They keep the bags off the damp ground and are easy to store, either by rolling up or laying flat on the floor of the station wagon, or on the roof of the car.

Mrs. F. C.

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who grow mint in their yards to use in iced tea, lemonade and other beverages:

Try pinching off perfect leaves at the proper time, placing them on a piece of foil and letting them dry out thoroughly.

These leaves may be used during the winter months when no fresh mint is available. The dried leaf retains all of the mint flavor.

Larry S.

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of taking paper plates on a picnic, try saving your frozen-dinner plates! They can be discarded, or brought back home again and washed if you wish to re-use them.
